Stocks of almost all types of all points at the worst included U. S. Steel American Telephone, Westinghouse Electric, Radio Corporation, Coca Cola, Southern Pacific Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, American Tobacco "B", Liggett and Myers "B", International Harvester, Allied Chemical, and others. Radio lost 3 and General Electric more than 2 in comparison. Losses of 3 points were numerous and some were of double that amount. Stocks dropping 6, Union Pacific rebounding 8, Consolidated Gas rising 9 in gain. Recent pool favorites were heavily hard hit.

A wide range of excuses for the setback was mentioned in brokerage circles, political as well as economic. But the explanation most commonly offered in connection with the banking quarters was that the market had gone ahead too fast and needed correction of a long and heavy speculative situation.

FAST UNTIL DEATH COMES THREAT MADE

Ghandi Issues This Ultimatum to Government

SENT LETTERS

Does Not Want Separate Electorates For Untouchables

London, Sept. 13 — Mahatma Gandhi has determined to starve himself to death rather than accept the electoral representation system worked out for India by the British cabinet.

This was revealed when the Indian office made public letters which have been exchanged by the Mahatma, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Secretary for India, Mr. Gandhi intends to begin no more food after mid-day, September 20.

The principal part of the government's electoral scheme to which he objects is a provision for a modified form of separate electorates for India's "untouchables."

"I regard the decision His Majesty's government that in the event of failure of agreement between the electorate for the depressed classes, I must fast unto death," he said in one of his letters.

Any form of separate electorates for Mahatma Gandhi is the negation of his letters, would perpetuate the present status of the untouchables.

"I feel," he wrote, "that no penance the caste Hindus may do can fit any way compensate for the calculated degradation to which they have reconciled the depressed classes for centuries."

In a despatch sent the Mahatma August 9, Mr. MacDonald set forth the government's position that the depressed classes under the cabinet's plan were not deprived of their electoral powers of the Hindus but in addition had special seats allotted to them by the system. Prime Minister said this was only a modified form of a permanent form of special electorates.

"As I understand your attitude," Mr. MacDonald said, "you propose to adopt the extreme course of starving yourself to death unless you are able to secure that the depressed classes should have their electorates with other Hindus, because that already has been provided for, and not to maintain the unity of Hinduism which also is provided for, but solely to prevent the depressed classes who admittedly suffer from terrible disabilities from having the right to secure a limited number of representatives of their own choosing to speak in their behalf in the legislature within which he has predominating influence over their future.

In reply Mr. Gandhi said he was not the spokesman of the depressed classes but he must adhere to his decision. He said he knew that there very grave objections to other parts of the announcement, but they did not justify self immolation.

The Songs of Bearded Kings

By Thomas W. Duncan

The empty street lay at the bottom of a frozen pool of ice and cold. The light sprayed down from lamp-posts flashed cruelly along lines of the snow. Here and there streaks of stubborn ice hugged the sidewalk. A workman Patrick Riggerty trod gingerly as he walked his beat, for the pavements were slippery as a waxed floor.

He tested locked doors and peered into dark alleys. Occasionally he beat numbing arms against his body. Through the winter city lay muffled in cold and sleep, but Patrick Riggerty, one of the unemployed thieves might be abroad this night. For more than thirty years he had stalked shadowy streets, preyed in the darkness.

It was past one o'clock when Riggerty, came to Casey's Lunch Room. Through the steamed glass he saw Casey's head bent over the counter, his body crouched and hanging it on a hook. At the corner he sat, his heavy face dull red, the thick lips mouth chapped.

"Aye, 'tis cold, Dan! Casey. Are you coffee hot for drinking?"

Riggerty's voice was strangely brave and sipped it tentatively. Dan't Casey wiped gnarled fingers on his big apron. "Hot as hell, an' we're glittin'. Pat. Too old t' be out through the night, like himself an' Riggerty."

"Aye, the years do be tickin' along."

"They do that. An' me with a son who might be easin' the load on my shoulders. But Ed—he must be startin' off on his job next week."

"Tell the way with the younguns. An' some fine mornin' you'll have a sound grandson, like mine, Pat, married an' in good business like my Michael.

Riggerty said it with a little swell of pride. His Michael, a fine lad, "Michael Riggerty, Michael O'Brien, and now a two-fisted chip of a lad he and they called Pat after Grandfather Riggerty. And Michael doing well in the plumbing business. Pat finished the collee and lumbered into his coat.

"It is not fair," Casey was spluttering, "that a decent sixty an' poundin' the streets at night, an' Riggerty, a thief, sleepin' in warm blankets. 'Tis not fair—just be-cause he is Chief.....

Pat leaned over the counter and grasped Casey's shirt in a big fist. "Casey, a word, Dan'l Casey! Not another word of Joe Phelan. 'Tis powerful ill luck for us. I'm with worries on his grey head hiver do be bothertin' us. 'Tis ashamed you should be, an' you with a fine son like Ed."

Over Patrick Riggerty's head, the sky was a curved sheet of cold iron, welded with silver rivets. Slowly the night darkened the day ringing night. Thought of his Chief's tongue brought a sneer, tightening into his throat. For Chief Phelan hated Pat Riggerty, but a very unlike Riggerty's Michael or even Casey's Ed. He was something to be feared, a bow-screwing thing.

A terrible thing it was Joe Phelan, Chief of Police, and his son Jimmie gone bad. Phelan's an so warm of heart, so kind, so generous. Like oils of those old Irish kings that Father Malley talked about at the policeman's picnic last Summer.... Pat remembered that time years ago, when his boy Michael was a baby doubled with pain on the sofa. Appendicitis the doctors said; and they hurried him away to a white hospital. And it was Chief Phelan—big, warm-hearted Chief Phelan—Pat mourned for the operation. Without interest.

Pat dimly recalled Jimmie as a freckled, red haired urchin. He hadn't seen him for years. Then Michael talked with him a few months ago. Jimmie sneaked into town for a day. "He's a bad one, dad. He's got a white scar on his right cheek—from his ear clear to his mouth. Mexican knifed him...."

The familiar warmth of love and pride swept over Pat as he approached the shop of his son. Over the sidewalk hung a big sign, MICHAEL RIGGERTY, PLUMBING AND HEATING. Pat tried the door. It swung at his touch, sagging open with a shattered lock.

Pat's pride turned to cold anger. Thieves in Michael's shop! Leaning his 38, he strode toward the office door where a crack of light gleamed.

A hurtling form shot out of the door, knocking the automatic from Pat's hand and scampered toward the street. Another man followed but this one Pat seized by the collar and dragged into the office. The safe door was ajar; papers strewed the floor. Pat shook the ragamuffin until his teeth chattered. "Who are you, you gaol's bird?"

The words froze at his lips. For the cringing vagabond had red hair, and a scar from his right ear to his mouth.

"He got it," whined the thief, pointing toward the door. "I—I—He got it—two hundred bucks," Pat glared at his captive. Always he had been a good cop. Never taken bribes; never let any one off; always did his duty....Into this—this—

"The days were the sons of bearded kings"—so the story went, Second Riggerty went past Pat and Pat—sons of giants who ruled on blue mountains back in the misty past, two hundred cubits would be good interest on operation money, said Mr. Phelan. Pat's heart breaks enough already.

Still, Pat, shaking his cab carrire through the door. "Oi'll outs this town, an' niver, niver come back."

x x x

At 7 a.m. Pat looked at his son's house. Michael was at breakfast when his father told him the thing had been robbed. "Maybe it's old I'm gittin," the policeman sighed. "Leastways, they got away."

"Insurance," Michael said. "Burglary insurance will cover it."

A tired smile hovered at Pat's mouth. "Oi've had insurance.... A fine young son you are Michael! ...always lookin' ahead an' thinkin' of everything. A fine son. Better than Dan' Casey's Ed, or the Dowd boy's—but no—like Phelan an's Jimmie."

"Everything insured." Michael repeated.

"Ay, this son of Joe's—wor'sh you tellin' me he had been in a terrible fight, an' he had a scar clean across his right cheek?"

But Riggerty swallowed, swallowed hard. He stood up. "I guess it's old I'm gittin', son," he said huskily. "I'm—I'm—"

"Nothin' to feel bad about, dad," said Michael. "Everything's insured, glory be!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reeding the paper after supper, saying to pop, Here's a picktur of a feller that's responsible for bravery on 2 firemen and 4 policemen. I think they ought to give him a medal.

Those brave men risk their valuable lives for us every day and never think of it, no matter a thawt. It just goes to show that when we have a emergency we can allwus depend on our heroes.

Well, far be it from me to detract from the fame of the noble firemen and policies or the noble cup ladies, but lots of ordinery citizens has done things that's brave, too if this decorating job was going accordin to plan. I'm always speaking I bweve one man is as brave as another when the occasion arises. I've even done a few little acts myself in my time that I'm proud of, for if the meddle man had been around at the time he'd a got it.

O, pop, what did you do; did you fight bulls, or lions or what, once when I was a young fellow I jumped in the river and saved a little girl that had fallen overboard, and if anybody says they should have seen them about the size of it.

Gosh, heresy for you, pop, Benjamin, I'm not arguing with you, I think that's marvellus, I think that's twice as brave as a policeman or a fireman could do, because sir all they're supposed to do, pop said, and ma said, You're a real hero in flesh and blood, William, and that reminds me, I've been intending to tell you for a week past that Mrs. Thursday off this week because the Heroes are coming for tea and Sunday. I'm almost afraid to tell her, she has such an awful temper. You go down town dear, William, she said.

I would pop, I would, pop and ma said, But my lands I thawt you was so brave and strong said, There's a grate difference between bravery and foolhardiness and I wouldn't have you go and induce the Heroes 'o come some other day instead of he said.

Now that's plane downthe conversation, so I believe I'll run along.

FIVE WOLVES AT BON ECHO

Forced Resident of District up Tree But Soon Left Scene

Will wolves attack humans? As long as there is a tall tree handy the question will go unanswered as far as Harry Van Allen, residing a few miles south of Bon Echo is concerned.

Mr. Van Allen left his home one morning last week to go hunting for rhubarb. He had been given a ride to a spot near Echo by Donald Meeks, a neighbor. Leaving the car, Mr. Van Allen entered the woods and commenced the search for the rhubarb.

"I hadn't been in the woods ten minutes," stated Mr. Van Allen, "when I heard a terrific uproar coming through the clearing some distance away. There was a disturbance that sounded as if a herd of elephants was on a rampage. Then they broke cover. Straight for me across the clearing came a doe with long bounding out, eyes rolling and covered with lather. Five wolves weren't ten feet behind her!

"The doe saw me, wheeled to the right angles, and then made off down another runway. The wolves hesitated momentarily — and I found myself up a tree in the top of the nearest maple. I'm no hand for a minute and then sailed off down the runway after the doe. The wolves did not in the distance."

Mr. Van Allen made his way home without further without further adventure, but minus the rhubarb.

CLOUDS LIFT ON HORIZON

Canadian Commission Opens London Fair Today

London, Ont., Sept. 12.—Speaking at the opening luncheon of the Western Fair here today Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Ontario Minister to London and former premier of Ontario, declared that the silver lining clouds on the economic horizon.

Canada, he said, not growing rich profit from trade with the United Kingdom near spring.

"I am looking for a great number of British business men to come to Canada to see for themselves and I am looking for that in the spring. Everything that may mean a great thing out of it," he said.

"Canada should be forewarned great movements of wheat flowing from Canada are coming for the Old Seaboard and from there to the United Kingdom as a result of the British Commonwealth conference at Ottawa, revitalizing in its flow the channels of trade.

Many Signs

"I could tell you of many signs of better times,' he continued, "but I will confine myself to the Canadian Nat'l Railways took on 3,000 extra men this week.

"The United Kingdom's quota on bacon, showing favor to Canada, the British Commissioner said, was no more than any other single factor in restore prosperity.

Denmark, he declared bought one dollar's worth of goods from the United Kingdom to every dollar's worth Canada bought, and yet Denmark ships 60% more to the United British isles every week.

The Bacon Industry, he said, was linked closely to the Dairy Industry and greater activity in the former would do much to bring about diversified farming. Wool, he said, an accomplishment, he said, be devoully wished to see.

Both Canada and United Kingdom, he asserted, had been careless in their methods of marketing goods. Goods, he declared, must be made to suit the buyer.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

It was half past four on Monday afternoon before she started out to take the bus and walk the remaining stroll. Hasbrouth Park was cool and green and old residents were lazily watering the grass near Mary Faith's favorite bench in the lilac walk.

The baby, rose-pink and bright eyed from the afternoon's nap, sat up against the little pillows of his pram and played with a blue-and-white rattle that Jean Bartlett had sent him. He smiled indulgently at a nodder with his little round O of a mouth, and Mary Faith watched him in great contentment from her seat on the bench.

She had brought four pairs of Kim's socks and some darning cotton and a needle with her, and all the time she had mended them it was half past five and the factory whistles were blowing in the distance.

"Time to start home, my small sweet man," she said to the baby, pulling the last pair of socks into a ball and dropping them into her mending bag. She folded the pram and put the baby in the bed—time to get the daddy his supper—and she pushed the carriage along the dusty gravel walk.

When, from the green spaces of the park passing automobiles flashed on the Kirkland Avenue Road. The windows of the Old Home Book and Stationery Store were like fire and the gilded dome of the church next door to it was as bright as the setting sun.

Mary Faith crossed Terrace Road directly in front of the bookstore, and just as she reached the curb she saw Kim standing in the doorway. He was not alone. Miss Mather's niece was beside him, and as Mary Faith looked at them they started along the sidewalk. They paused for a moment before the drug store and then they turned and went into it.

It was twenty minutes after six when he came home.

Mary Faith heard him when he came in. She heard him say hello to his mother. She heard him say, "Where's Mary Faith?"

Then he came out into the kitchen where she was cutting up a fresh pineapple for dessert.

"What's the matter?" he asked. He knew that something was the matter the minute he looked at her.

She always came to meet him at night. Almost always she had his slippers ready for him and his brown linen house coat that he wore on these hot evenings.

But tonight she didn't take a step in his direction. She only stood at the table looking at him. There was a little thoughtful frown between her eyes, as if she were trying to make up him out.

"Kim," she said, "you certainly are a fast worker."

"Why?" he asked. He took off his straw hat and she noticed, without knowing that she was looking at it, the dark ring that it left on his fair hair.

"On Saturday night you saw that girl in the dining store," she told him. "And I—like the fool I am—asked you who she was and where you could find her, and it didn't take you very long to do it, did it?"

Kim looked Mary Faith straight in the eye and answered her. "I don't know what you're talking about," he said, "unless it is said in such a puzzled way that she almost believed it for a second.

"I'll tell you what I'm talking about then, Kim, just as you left Miss Mather girl. I saw you come out of the bookstore with her and I saw you walk up the street with her and go into Wanger's drug store."

"Well, what if you did see me? There's nothing disgraceful about what I did, is there?—That girl had been helping me pick out a couple of books for fully a half hour. I took her into the drug store for coffee and a that sea story down to the office with me this morning and on my way home I stopped in at the library to get something else to read. Miss Mather was leaving just as I was leaving—at half-past five, so asked her if she wouldn't like to go into the drug store and have something cold to drink and she said she would. Now, that is a great deal of scandal, wasn't it? For me to buy a girl a glass of root beer!"

He came up to her.

"You understand how it happened now, don't you? he asked. "There was nothing to it, Mary Faith."

He took her by both hands, holding her away from him a little so that he could look down at her.

"You understand it now, don't you, you jealous little pagan?"

Mary Faith slowly nodded her head. She wanted to understand it. She wanted so desperately to know that nothing was wrong. That Kim had not been lost in that girl.

"Of course I go Kim." she said. "But I'm terribly jealous, Kim. I just can't bear to have you look at anybody but me. I wish you would wear blinders, like a horse, so that you couldn't see anybody else—"

Suddenly she gave a little sigh and shook him by his shoulders.

"Kim, if you ever go away from me again!—if you ever do—"

He took her hands from his shoulders and backed away from her. "You silly-child," he said, "Aren't you ashamed of getting yourself all steamed up about a girl I don't care anything about at all? I'm a girl that I hardly know?"

She nodded. It was the same she was glad and relieved when the first of August brought Miss Mather back to the library and took the pretty niece away.

CHAPTER XXXI

Late in August Aunt Ella came up from Hartwood to spend the week at the flat while her little house was being painted.

"The smell of turpentine always makes me sick," she explained when she arrived. "I can smell it all the time and I can taste it in my food, seems like. So I just said to myself, 'Well, I ain't paid a visit to see that precious baby in a good while,' and I got me some linen and here I am."

Mary Faith was glad to see her. She loved the quiet, rather dreamy, never-ending flow of talk. Aunt Ella in the paper around the family before breakfast every morning and discussed the event of the nation the world with Kim.

"What do you think of Coolidge a President, anyway, Kim?" asked she would ask, and then she would answer herself before he had a chance to get a word in edgewise: "Seems to me he does a pretty good job even if he doesn't say much. There never was a President like Teddy, however, though. I heard him talk once, and my but he was full of pepper and the voice volts were in every sentence that he spoke. I remember, I remember that I was hoarse for three days afterward. I cheered so much."

She had filled with the quality that she called "real good" and during the long tea trotted around the house, helping with the work, helping the baby, helping the brown leaves from the Boston ferns that Mary Faith watered almost constantly.

Every afternoon she and Mrs. Parrell took the baby for a walk while Mary Faith stayed at home and put the dinner on to cook. They never started out until four or five o'clock—the part of the afternoon that Aunt Ella called "the cool of the day" and that every baby bonus until six o'clock.

They were out of the flat on one of these jaunts of theirs one afternoon when Claire Malden came driving up the street in her little yellow roadster.

Mary Faith saw her through the open windows of the living room and flew into her own room to powder her face and take off her checked apron. She always felt dowdy when she was with Claire who was always dressed within an inch of her life and made up like a screen star.

This afternoon she had on a dress of coffee-colored silk with a little hat to match pulled down to her eyebrows. Her hair peeped from under it in bright metallic waves, and her lips and cheeks were bright with coral-colored salve. About her hung the scent of the lotus perfume that she used and the odor of cigarettes.

"Hallo, housewife," she greeted Mary Faith, dropping into Mrs. Parrell's arm chair and lighting a cigarette. I came to ask you about taking a trip with us over Labor Day. Sandy's all for it. I saw him downtown just now when I went in to the office to get the key of the car from Jack. I thought it would be fun for the four of us to drive down to Cambridge Springs."

Mary Faith looked at her thoughtfully. If she and Kim went it would mean spending twenty-five or thirty dollars that they couldn't afford to spend that way. It would mean leaving the baby for two or three days.

"I'm sorry, Claire," she said. "But I don't see how Kim and I can get away. We've never left the baby—and I'd be miserable wondering if he were behaving himself. Besides it would cost a lot of money"

Mary Faith, you're a little fool!" Claire's bright sharp voice cut across her sentences like a knife. "You don't think you're making Sandy happy by pinching pennies and staying at home hundred-and sixty-five days in the year, do you? You're a nice girl, Mary Faith but you know less about men than anybody I ever saw in my life. Now, listen to Sandy—he's like pie is plenty of sippo going on around him all the time. If you were smart you'd get him away from the baby and those two old girls once in a while ——" Her china-blue eyes were on Mrs. Parrell and Aunt Ella, who were coming along the side-walk wheeling the baby buggie chart.

In the mellow afternoon light that came slanting in through the high, thin windows she looked haggard in spite of her paint and her powder and the black oil that glistened on her eyelashes. Studying her face, Mary Faith could see where there would be lines and wrinkles in it in another ten years or so. Her contrast made her handsome—that shy quiet thing—in places where it never could be found in a thousand years seemed to have worn her out. Late hours and cigarettes and the things she drank had all left their mark on her face. At twenty-four she looked thirty-four. At thirty she would look fifty if she kept on as she was going. And as fifty she would be wearing the clothes and the make-up masterpieces of the glamorous twenties, no doubt.

"She's wrong about Kim, too," thought Mary Faith as she watched her step beside the baby's little cart and hold out a gloved finger to him and smile at him. Kim seemed to be perfectly contented these days, and his baby and his

But just to make sure she spoke to Kim about the trip that night when the two of them were setting out for the movies.

She stopped in this afternoon," she began. "and told me that you and she had been talking over a trip in the car—

"I know, I didn't talk it over at all," Kim interrupted. "She came down to the office this afternoon to talk over an entirely different matter with me—and just as she was going she suggested that the four of us go to Cambridge Springs for a couple of days. I said I'd speak to you about it."

"You didn't."

"I forgot about it. And anyhow I don't like the idea of spending when she arrived. "I can smell it all the house is just plain silly!—I shall sit right here where I am and in this blithbe until he gets here. Oh goodness, he ain't the King of England!"

But nevertheless when the doorbell's ring came at the front door she got up and scuttled into the room she shared with Mrs. Parrell, leaving the floor under her chair covered with toast crumbs and the table littered with newspapers.

Five minutes later she came walking into Kim's bedroom, looking as if smooth pale yellow. The salad had wilted in the heat and the coffee was bitter from standing on the back of the stove for two hours.

At ten o'clock the "sisters Kim-ball" went to bed, and Mary Faith settled herself in her chair in the sitting room to wait for Kim.

A year and a half before she would have been frantic with worry if Kim should have phoned that he was delayed in a down accidents— under the wheels of his car, lying in a ditch by the side of a road or in a narrow white hospital bed.

But now she had learned that when he did not turn up at night it was because he wanted to stay away from home—and her only anxiety was for his health. The rain was sluicing down outside and he had taken no overcoat with him. He never should have gone out today at all. She blamed herself for letting him go.

At twelve o'clock she went back to her bedroom and lay down on the bed, fully dressed.

"I won't go to sleep," she thought drowsily, and dropped off.

The next thing she knew she was wide awake, her heart beating like a drum and one side of her face cold and warm where it had been pressed into the pillow.

Unable to Elect Bishop Unless Income Provided By Party or Endowment

Now Setting About to Straighten Financial Debacle

COUNCIL ACTS

Asks For Audit of All Government Books at Once

Winnipeg, Sept. 13 (CP)— Both the Province of Manitoba and the Church of England are today setting machinery in motion to straighten out the tangled financial debacle resulting from the defalcations of John A. MacArthy, K. C., Chairman of the Board of Governors and Bursar of the University of Manitoba and Chancellor of the Diocese of Rupert's Land.

A statement by Premier John Bracken today is expected to outline steps the Government contemplates intends to take to investigate the loss of more than $200,000 from the endowment funds of the university in connection with which MacArthy is charged with theft.

Last night a committee of 12 members of the Church of England met to complete plans for a meeting Friday night at which a program to permit the church to carry on will be worked out. The church's funds under MacArthy's control is placed at about a million dollars.

In Bad Position

Owing to the disappearance of its endowment funds, the church finds itself in an embarrassing position regarding the election of a Bishop of Athabasca. The See is vacant and the constitution of the church forbids election of a Bishop unless his income is provided for either by gift or endowment. With his endowment swept away the church must find $4,000 from some one to guarantee the Bishop an income or leave the post vacant.

At last nights meeting of the Winnipeg city council Aldermain A. A. Barry gave notice of motion calling for appointment of a Royal Commission, both of the Manitoba Telephone System and the Workmen's Compensation Board. The motion will come up for discussion two weeks hence.

In introducing his notice the alderman called attention to rumors circulating and said recent defalcations indicated a considerable degree of laxity existed in the auditing of government books.

WHITE WHALES USED FOR MANY PURPOSES

Winnipeg Sept. 13—Four Russian Bay whales brought here by the Industrial Development Board of Manitoba have yielded 896 pounds of oil and 290 pounds of fish meal according to an announcement of J. M. Davidson, Secretary of the board today. Samples of the oil were submitted to the Fish By-products Commission and found to be of excellent lubricating quality. Portions of the skin were tanned, and made satisfactory leather. Results of experiments in the fish meal as a fertilizer also were reported by the committee. It is claimed by the recent test on one acre of land the yield of oats was increased from 72.8 bushels to 80.4 bushels.

FILM ACTORS SEEK THRILLS ON SEA BOTTOM

Drama, torrid romance and thrilling action have been mingled to form one of the most exciting of recent months in "Devil and the Deep," Tallulah Bankhead's latest picturing vehicle, which is the feature attraction at the Belle to-night and Wednesday, matinee and evening. Here is real excitement and theatre patronage. Good melodrama distinguished by three stellar performances, by Miss Bankhead, Gary Cooper and Charles Laughton, which should be placed high on the screen's role of honor.

Under the able direction of Marion Gering, the film begins in a north African seaport, and moves swiftly through growing dramatic action to a terrific climax aboard a sinking submarine. The story, an adaptation by Benn W. Levy and Harry Hervey of a novel by Maurice Dekobra called "Shadows and Tritons," follows the strange machinations of a submarine commander's insane jealousy of his young wife, which led to near-tragedy when the man goes completely mad and attempts to wreck the submarine with himself, his wife and the wife's lover aboard.

Miss Bankhead, glamorously beautiful in the role of Pauline Storm, the wife, and gives by far the best performance of her screen career. Gary Cooper, in his first role since his extended trip abroad, is responsible for a fine portrayal of the young officer who loves the wife of his commander.

Charles Laughton's performance of the film is contributed by Chas. Laughton, an English actor, whose unforgettable portrait of the crazed submarine commander in his first screen creation is a thrill worx in this exceedingly difficult role places him in the front rank of screen character actors. He alone seems worthy of the mantle of Lon Chaney.

The enjoyment of the performance is enhanced by the exhibition of the Metrotone News Reel, a fun-ny Sunshine cartoon "Mickey Mouse," with its strange and interesting freaks of nature.

Each lady attending the Belle Wednesday evening will receive a beautiful dresserware gift with the compliments of the management.

SAYS SEAWAY TOO COSTLY

Premier Taschereau Opposes Project on Economic Grounds

Montreal, Sept. 13—Premier L. A. Taschereau's campaign against the St. Lawrence waterway project continued yesterday in an address before a political gathering at Longueuil a Montreal suburb.

He opposed the project on national and economic grounds. Mr. Taschereau said the practical realization of the scheme would mean exorbitant cost, unfair competition for two Canadian railway systems "already struggling against great odds", exportation of much needed power to the United States, which, without the seaway would be forced to come to Canada, and unfair competition from publicly owned Ontario power companies for privately-owned Quebec power companies.

TWO TRUSTEES LEAVE BOARD

Resign in Anger When Salaries of Teachers Cut

STRATFORD, Ont., Sept. 13 :— Objection to a reduction in teachers' salaries was responsible today for the verbal resignation of Trustees R. J. Easson and W. E. Sealey from the Stratford Board of Education. Leaving a meeting of the Board yesterday the trustees declared the Board Association with that body impossible, if the board refused to stand by its agreement with teachers of the city.

Enforcement by the Board of a sliding scale of salary reductions, in a direct violation, Mssrs. Easson and Sealey maintain of an agreement reached earlier in the year between the Board and the teachers, whereby the latter would contribute five percent of their salaries to the Civic Relief Fund.

The salary reductions were decided upon at a special meeting of the Board held July 29.

NEW LETHAL CHAMBER USED FOR FIRST TIME

The efficacy of the lethal chamber for the quick disposal of unwanted animals at the pound, by the means of carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust of a motor car, was demonstrated Monday afternoon when a mongrel pup, which had been picked up by Mr. Thomas Thorne was quickly and painlessly dispatched in a very few seconds in the gas-flooded chamber. This makes the first dog to enter the happy hunting ground by that route. Persons desirous of disposing of unwanted cats and dogs should take them to the pound for a quick and painless death.

QUESTION TO BE LEFT TO DEPARTMENT TO DECIDE

Hamilton, Sept. 13.—Legality of a commercial fisherman lifting his nets on the Sabbath is questioned by Hamilton Beach fishermen following interference with lifting operations Sunday by Game Warden Bert Seymour. Bay of Quinte Missionary Conference at Trenton

Many Problems Face Church at Present Time

Trenton, Ont., Sept. 13—Problems facing the officers of the missionary and maintenance fund of the United Church of Canada were discussed at the opening yesterday of the Bay of Quinte Missionary Conference, in Bet. Dr. Boyd Bryce, Secretary, who lately visited all the Western Canada Conferences.

Dr. Bryce prepared the church for a drop of $70,000 less last year than the fiscal year previous. Of this amount $200,000 represented drop in revenue for the missionary and maintenance fund, while that of the Ministerial Association dropped $70,000. The balance of the decrease he attributed to reduced earning powe. among members.

Church Is Challenged

Referring to the rural sections of Ontario, Dr. Bryce stated there was less cash available than had been the case for many years and added "hopeful indications at the past few weeks lead us to believe we may look for better days. But in looking for ward we look for missionary and maintenance fund we, must look for ward to face harder conditions"

Rev. T. E. Holling, D.D., of Lindsay, president of the meeting and the opening services were conducted by Rev W. H. Tanton, of Cobourg.

Must Lift Heads

Speaking at a banquet last night Rev. Holling stressed the need of faithness in Christian faith in times of adversity".

"I know the difficulties facing many churches in the farmer and city districts today" declared Dr. Bryce "but properly cannot come to Canada unless the farmer and the fair price for his products.

"We must believe God must show that we can lift up our heads in the face of adversity," the speaker said.

Successor to Walker Makes Move to Hang on to Mayoralty Until December

New York, Sept. 13—(UP)— Mayor Joseph V. McKee, whose brief tenure of office has included economies that have amazed blase New York, Monday made it clear that he intends to fight to hold his job at least until December 31, 1933.

His first official recognition of ex-Mayor James J. Walker's hopes of staging a come-back came when his former law partner filed an application for a peremptory order of mandamus against the board of elections individually, and against Mayor McKee, prohibiting them again; taking any steps to hold an election for mayor this Fall.

On Walker's resignation, the post had been revived technically vacant, and an election ordered. The former mayor is said to be planning with friends of Walker, who wished to provide him with an opportunity to seek a decision at the polls this November, and attempt to retain his former office. Today's action, if successful, would prevent such an election leaving McKee to fill out Walker's unexpired term.

McKee confirmed that the action was taken at his instigation since he felt the city should be spared the expense of an election at this time.

2,000 PLACED ON LAND BY ONTARIO GOV'T

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—Nearly 400 families, approximating 2,000 persons have been taken from urban localities and placed on farms since the Ontario Government first inaugurated the back-to-the-land scheme in 1929, announced Peter Hansen, Buildings in a report yesterday by the Committee in charge of the project.

The offices of the committee have been flooded with applications from the unemployed, the report says, but owing to the precautions necessary in choice of locality and the season being so far advanced it was found expedient to close the lists as only a limited number could be placed this Fall.

Tolmie's Proposal Not as Favorable as Expected

VICTORIA, Sept. 13.—(By the Canadian Press)—Premier Tolmie's public utilities government proposal has met with opposition because of its indefinite detail. Yesterday it became known neither W. J. Pattullo, Liberal leader, nor W. J. Bowser, former Conservative Premier would enter a Union Government.

Prospects of a new alignment of political forces in the Province arose out of reports a number of Conservatives had been invited to join a Union Government notwithstanding Mr. Pattullo's views. Similarly in the Conservative Party there are indications of dissatisfaction with the Premier's decision in moving towards a Union.

Whether despite these conditions the Premier will go ahead with his plans will become known, when he issues the statement he promised last week. Beyond indicating the statement would favor formation of a Union administration the Premier has given no idea of what it will contain.

Should he secure a substantial measure of support it is likely he will summon the Legislature, re-call the Cabinet and call a general election

TRADE BOARDS PARTLY TO BLAME FOR STATE

Unemployment on Decrease Convention is Told

Over Expenditures Are Partly Due to Boards Of Trade in Dominion

Hon. L. P. D. Tilley is Guest Speaker at Luncheon

LOOK FOR INCREASE

Lumber Trade Will Be Much Better Through Treaties Made

Halifax, Sept. 14 (CP) — "The hopeful side of the present lumber situation is the fact the British importer is now alive to the condition in which the Canadian lumber industry finds itself and he is doing everything possible to re-establish the market between Canada and the United Kingdom. This coming winter's cut may not average over the cut of last year, but the prospects of materially increasing trade for the season of 1933 and 1934 are much brighter."

Such was the statement of Hon. L. P. D. Tilley, K.C., vice-president of the New Brunswick Executive Council, who spoke today at a luncheon tendered the Canadian Lumber and Shingle Mfg. by Robert Simpson (Eastern) Limited.

Col. C. L. Burton of Toronto, president of the Robert Simpson Company, Limited, presided.

Mr. Tilley, who attended the Empire Economic Conference at Ottawa as a representative of the New Brunswick Government, reviewed the lumber situation in Canada in the light of developments at the Conference.

First, however, he took the Chamber to task in a jocular way for resolutions and addresses which, they seemed to believe, would reform parliamentarians and keep them busy. Sentiment, however, is similarly afoot in Governments from over-expending in the future.

Boards Responsible

"For many of these over-expenditures the various Boards of Trade in all parts of the country are largely responsible," he declared in a more serious tone.

"Every man in public life, both Federal and Provincial, knows the frequent and incessant demands made by every local community for new railroad stations, new post-offices, more wharves, more dredging, more railway and electricity accommodations, more and more government-owned boats.

"It is a little hard on the politicians, therefore, to be told now in these days of financial stress, just how much further it is possible to curtail public expenditures. I am thinking in certain quarters, that public expenditures must be made and will be made, so that no man will possibly shall starve during this period of distress among unemployed."

COURT RECORD CLOSED WHEN MANSUCCUMBS

London, Ont., Sept. 14.—A sad note was struck during the morning session of city police court when Magistrate W. N. Scandrett called the name of Joseph L. Volk, 8, of Parkhill, charged up in the court docket with attempting to commit suicide.

"That man is dead," spoke up Chief Harry Down, "He died in the detention cells downstairs."

We will close the court record," replied the magistrate.

The little boy died in detention cell Monday from the effects of illuminating gas which he had inhaled at his King boarding house earlier in the morning.

TRUST FUNDS OF ONTARIO WELL HANDLED

Regular Audits Made in Nearly Every Department

GOOD CONDITION

Information on Standing Can Be Secured at Any Time

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 14.—All trust funds of the Ontario Government and position of Commissioners under Government are intact and in good financial condition, Hon. W. H. Price, Acting Premier and Attorney-General, announced today after Government has undergone check-up of audit instituted following the recent disclosures in Manitoba. The funds so involved would amount to several hundred millions of dollars, in principal and yearly income.

"The policy carried out by the Government has been to have continuous audits of public funds," declared Col. Price. "The Government is placed in the position in all departments to ask for information at all times. Regular audits have been made the public can be satisfied that all our trust funds under the statutes and various commissions of the Government are limited and properly invested.

Regular Audits Made

Regular audits has been in operation since he occupied the position of provincial treasurer. These audits have been carried on often by the provincial auditors, and in some cases by firms of accountants, in the Lieber Control Board, the accountants office at Osgoode Hall, where large audits are handled, the Workmen's Compensation Board, the Public Trustees Office, the Official Guardian, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, where special audits are made every month, there is also the Treasury Department, which controls the Inspector and Teachers Superannuation Fund, the Public Servants Superannuation Fund, which has an actuary in constant touch, as well as the Ontario Government Savings Offices which are subject to special audits.

LIBERALS MAY LEAVE GOV'T

Not in Accord With Agreements Reached at Conference

LONDON, Sept. 14. —(Canadian Press Cable)— Any amendment that Parliament will reassemble on October 18th instead of October 27th, as originally planned has brought about revival of assertions in Liberal quarters of impending resignations of Liberal ministers in the National Government as a result of the agreements entered into by the United Kingdom delegation at the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference.

The News Chronicle declares Liberal opinion inside as well as outside the Government has hardened into definite hostility. "Whereas a week ago the chances were three to two against the early resignation of Liberal ministers they are now three to two in favor," the paper says.

On September 21st the Liberal Federation Committee of the Liberal Party of the party is expected to be decided.

The Times editorially declares it is unbelievable Liberal ministers will be affected by the revival of the incantation resisted at the last general election and again at the introduction of the Import Duties Bill. The Ottawa agreements would constitute a new argument for resignation, the newspaper says. They say that no one would decently withdraw on the ground of the agreements difficulty.

Sir Herbert Samuel, Home Secretary, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Scotland, are the Chief Liberal Free Traders in the National Government.

CHURCH MAY ENTER FOLD

Efforts Being Made to Restore Church to Conference

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 14. — Efforts are now being made to restore St. James' Church, Westdale, formerly Knox Presbyterian Church, to the fold of the Presbyterian Conference here. Yesterday the congregation which had undergone many changes in the past six months, applied for readmission to the Presbyterian Church, and committees were named to go into the matter.

The spirit of peace now evident it would appear that the long dispute which resulted in the church being offered for sale under the auctioneer's hammer, seems to draw to an end. At the present time a group of the Westdale congregation is holding services in the church building, having secured use of the structure from the holders of the mortgage. The building has been renamed St. James Church by this group. In the meantime the former minister, Rev. W. A. Jason Graham and some of the original congregation have been holding services in St. George S. Allan School, nearby.

Mr. Graham stated this morning that he would make no comment upon the recent efforts of the Presbytery to restore harmony in the congregation.

MEETING PERSONAL AND WITHOUT SIGNIFICANCE

London, Sept. 14 (AP) — A statement issued today from the Prime Minister's office said a meeting between Premier Bennett, Ambassador Mellon, United States Senator Reed and the Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald yesterday was purely of personal character and entirely without political significance.

The statement was issued after the appearance of a newspaper story that the three had discussed a new debt settlement.

A process for making rayon de "cresselea" has been perfected in England, according to report.

Pangs of Troubled Conscience are Relieved as Receipt is Received

Sleepless nights due to the pangs of a troubled conscience; will no longer trouble some unknown resident of this city in the future. Accounts have been squared.

From the Department of National Revenue at Ottawa, comes the following letter which is self explanatory:

"This Department desires to acknowledge through the columns of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer the receipt of $2.00 in currency forwarded here in an envelope postmarked Belleville, September 8th, 1932, with a note stating that the amount is Conscience Money. It has been credited to that account in the records of this department, and duly forwarded to the Receiver General.

"H. V. Rorke,

New History to be Made With Opening of Parliament in Oct.

Re-Distribution Bill and Ratification of Treaties Expected

Ottawa, Sept. 14—Canada's parliament convening on October 6 will make new history. It will write on the statute books of this country in view of many, approval of the treaties arrived at during the course of the centuries of trade within the British Empire.

Not since the early days of the Dominion has the Empire assembled here so bound to predominate. Assembling early for the prime purpose of ratifying agreements made at the Imperial Conference, Intra-Empire trade discussions will hold full sway in both Commons and Senate during the fall months.

The Speech from the Throne will have the usual precedence, but the general discussion will be to shorten debate on the address in reply and get down to discussion of the Imperial Conference agreements.

The Legislative program when Parliament re-assembles in January will probably comprise:

(1) Legislation on the report of the Transportation Commission, headed by Mr. Justice L. P. Duff of the Supreme Court of Canada.

(2) Agreements with Canada-United States St. Lawrence Seaway Treaty providing ratification has already been given by the United States Senate.

(3) Amendments to the Finance Act.

(4) Introduction of the re-distribution bill.

Physicians Give Evidence as to Cause of Death

Kingston, Sept. 14. — Frederick McIlquham, charged with the murder of his brother, Wilfred McIlquham, on May 11 last, faced judge and jury in Supreme Court today, pleading not guilty to the charge through his counsel, W. F. Nickel, K.C.

Crown Prosecutor W. H. Williams, of Pembroke, outlined the case to the jury.

Major H. H. Lawson was the first witness called and he identified plans he made of the interior of the McIlquham home on Victoria street. The plan showed that one could get out of the dining room through a door which leads to another door to the cellar stairs.

Mr. M. J. Morrison told of being called between 1 and 1.30 on the morning of the 11th of May, to go to the McIlquham house.

He found William McIlquham dead on the floor.

He examined the body and found a v-shaped wound on the right side of the head and a wound on the left side back to the skull. There was not much bleeding, later on in the day I again saw the body at the morgue at the Kingston General Hospital, when Dr. Hay performed a post mortem. There was a wound over the ninth rib. The rib was broken and there was considerable hemorrhage. There was below another wound of entry which also showed considerable clots. Three inches lower there was still another wound which had entered.

Witness said the head wounds did not cause death. He could not say what caused the head wounds, though they must have been made by some blunt instrument. The knees of the deceased had shown bruises when there was a wound on the left hand. The deceased was fully dressed except for his coat. Witness said he found a bullet hole above the hip pocket and another hole in the band of the trousers. Witness said he found a knife under the left coat, that the shot at the upper rib entered.

He examined the accused, Frederick McIlquham, at the police station, in the cells. He found there were 145.000, who were not employed.

Several Wounds on Body

Dr. Hay, the next day witnessed, "there were several wounds. There were two wounds on the left side of the head. There was considerable bruising of the cheek, but no broken bones. There was a wound on the knee, left hand, right elbow. There were two wounds almost over on the left side of the body. The upper one had an entry wound one and one inch around the wound. The second wound over the edge of the left hip bone, left side.

The third wound in the left side had an entry.

I found there was a good deal of free hemorrhage from the first

Advises Labor Not to Follow Socialistic Idea Of Having State Control

Hon C. J. Arcand, Quebec Labor Minister, is Speaker's WELCOMED.

Over Two Million Unemployed in United Kingdom

(By Jack Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Hamilton Ont., Sept. 14.—Outstanding labor for its reasonable attitude during the present depression and predicting a bright future for Canada as a result of organized labor, Hon C. J Arcand, Minister of Labor for Quebec, today shared honors with fraternal delegates at the convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada here.

The opening members of the Congress, Mr. Arcand spoke briefly of the difficulties which had been successfully faced by the pioneers of the labor movement, and warned them "not to follow the Socialistic idea of having the State control everything."

"Keep your individuality and your initiative," he said, "and let the State serve you. Don't attempt to control the State."

He was sure he continued, there would be no wrestling against authority by organized labor. "If there is any law abiding class of citizens in Canada, it is the organized worker," he declared.

Church to Echo.

Mr. Arcand received perhaps the warmest welcome ever tendered a speaker to the convention. It is seldom the Congress invites a Minister of Labor from a Province outside that in which it is sitting to speak before its delegates, but the Quebec Minister, member of the Trainmen's Union for many years, was cheered to the echo.

The work of labor in combatting the grave employment situation in the United Kingdom and the United States was outlined to the convention by Percy Fletcher, fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress, and by Fred Bowers, Chicago, delegate from the American Federation of Labor.

Unemployment, according to Mr. Hind, had increased in the U.K. he said, there were 2,811,782 unemployed registered in the United Kingdom. This was an increase of 28,432 over the previous year, he continued. In Canada, estimated there were 145,000, who were not employed.

Even graver conditions existed in the United States, continued Mr. Bowers, who declared 11,000,000 men were out of work there. Too, there were only 400,000 men who were employed from only one to three days per week.

Five Day Week.

Both declared there respective organizations were doing their utmost to help about alleviate the unemployment situation, and both declared the adoption of the five day week as a possible solution of some of the difficulties.

The Congress adjourned shortly after noon until tomorrow, delegates and visiting dignitaries and members of the Hamilton Trade and Labor Council being entertained at a luncheon.

Gustave Francq, Chairman of the International Peace Bureau of Belgium also spoke during the morning session, outlining the operations of the bureau and urging a uniformity of laws throughout the Dominion. A resolution on minimum wages was held over for further consideration until Mr. Francq had declared the object of the measure was to secure a uniform agreement to the industrial act.

FIRST ADDRESS BY ROOSEVELT

States Former Republican Administrations Had Failed

Topeka, Kas., Sept. 14—Declaring that the Harding Coolidge and Hoover Republican administration "failed utterly to understand the causes" of depression, "failed utterly to understand the remedy" and "failed utterly, when, or to plan for its relief," Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential candidate, speaking today in the rotunda of the State capitol, proposed a six-fold relief program. He called for a "definite policy of planning for the use of land" "life to the farms, now held by speculators seeking credit from the governmental agencies, the preferential opportunity of getting their property back."

Roosevelt Plan

Governor Roosevelt's speech here was the first prepared address of his campaign swing through the west.

The specifications for Roosevelt's plan were:

"First—the plan must provide for the producer of staple surplus commodities, such as wheat, cotton, corn (in the form of hogs), and tobacco, tariff protection over world prices, which, is equivalent to the benefit given by this tariff to industrial products.

"Second—the plan must finance itself. Agriculture has no time to wait and does not now seek such access to the public treasury as was provided by the futile and costly export bounty and debenture plan by the Federal Farm Board.

"Third—we must make use of any mechanism, which would cause our European customers to retaliate on the grounds of dumping.

"Fourth—it must make use of existing agencies and so far as possible be decentralized in its administration.

"Fifth—it must operate as nearly as possible on co-operative basis and its effect must be to enhance and strengthen the co-operative movement.

"Sixth—the plan must not be coercive. It must be voluntary and the individual producer should at all times have the opportunity of non-participation if he so desires."

The wastefulness of war and the futility is recognized as never before in the history of the world, Pet is good on it.

Hungry Bass Well Hooked as it Strikes Two Minnows at Same Time

There is no close season on fish stories. Here's one from the hungry specimens of the finny tribe still contribute to the list of tall tales which emanate from the waters of the Bay of Quinte.

Two men sat in a boat Thursday afternoon, in the bay near Bigger Island. Two poles hung over the side. A minnow pail sloshed lazily in the water at the stern of the boat. Time passed.

"I've got a fish," casually remarked veteran fisherman, No. 1, Mr. Harry Hollow, as he commenced to reel in. "Feels like a bass."

"And so have I," chimed in veteran fisherman No. 2, Mr. Art Kelley, a split second later.

Both anglers reeled and two pair of arms hauled to and fro to bring in a big fish each had caught. "Must be a big one," muttered No. 1.

"Feel the sucker pull," agreed No. 2.

Up to the top of the water finally came the fish. It was a large sized bass with two hooks in its gills and two minnows in its mouth. It had snapped on the minnows of both anglers at the same time.

Being close friends, they decided to split fifty-fifty.

City and District News

SHOWER BENEFICIAL TO PARCHED LAND

Showers of rain which fell intermittently throughout the night Tuesday, following in the wake of a light electrical storm, which passed over the district earlier in the evening, brought relief to dried up farms and fields in this area, parched by weeks of steady drought. Although the rainfall fell was not of sufficient length to do more than wet the surface of the ground, over-cast skies Wednesday served further precipitation, which will be greatly welcomed by farmers of the district.

CAR OVERTURNS ON FRONT STREET

Slippery Pavement and Quick Application of Brakes Cause

Turning over on its side after skidding on the wet pavement a car driven by Burleigh Hills of Napanee, with three other passengers in it came to rest on the car track in front of the Queens Hotel about 12.15 a.m. Wednesday.

The Hills driven car was proceeding southward on Front street at a moderate speed when the latter pulled out to pass a car, that was being parked, with its left side facing south. When attempting to pass the parked car, Mr. Hills slightly applied his brakes. His car skidded into the parked car, which was driven by William Dowell of Marysville, bounded off the Dowell car into a parked car on the other side of the street and turned over.

In the Hills car were Mr. Mills accompanied by Mrs. Winnifred Reeder, her sister Florence and Allen Burrell all of Napanee. After the Mills car turned over Constable Bennett was soon at the scene of the accident and helped the injured persons out from underneath the car. The Misses Reeder were cut slightly about the face from the flying glass of the broken windshield and window.

The over-turned car was righted by the officer with the assistance of a by standers and after trying out the brakes of the three cars, the officer found that all the three cars had efficient brakes. No charges were preferred by the police. Besides a bent fender and a broken windshield no serious damage was reported to have happened the cars. Only slight injuries were reported to have befell the occupants of the over-turned automobile. Albert Keller of Corbyville, was the driver of the third car concerned in the accident.

150 HALF PRICE LICENSES HAVE BEEN ISSUED

Not least among the list of bargains on sales being held throughout the city is the one which has recently been put on by the Provincial Government for the benefit of car owners in this city and district. From September 1st, which was the day set for half price license fees to go into effect, until today has had a busy time handing out the plates. In fact, according to the records the sales far in excess of last year's number issued. To be exact the sales have been just doubled up to the middle of the present month, and the fees performed by the police department was in the neighborhood of 6$ up to the middle of the month. This year so far 150 have been given out by the same dealer.

Proof of the value in dollars and cents of the cars that can be listed in the license territory, is given by the total sales of car licenses which for the first days of the month, by the office of Mr. George Ketchison alone over one hundred thousand dollars worth of new licenses were taken in from the sale of licenses alone.

Rev. A. E. Cameron Moderator Of Kingston Presbytery

Pass Resolution Against Legalizing Beer and Wine in Hotels

The regular quarterly meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston ,Presbyterian Church, Canada, was held in St. Andrew's Church, Trenton, on Tuesday, upon attendance was not as large as usual. Most of the ministers were present, but only a few of the elders. Rev. C. K. Nicoll presided. As this was the date for the election of a new moderator Rev. A. E. Cameron, being the next in order, was elected, on motion of Mr. R. M. Scott, seconded by Dr. MacTavish. As the meeting on Tuesday was held in the church of which the retiring moderator is pastor, Mr. Cameron very graciously stated that it would be a severe thing for him to preside, and asked Presbytery accept his, and so Mr. Nicoll presided for the remainder of the day. Mr. R. S. Niles of Picton, clerk, interim moderator of the sessions of West Huntingdon and Sidney reported that he had met with the sessions of these congregations and had an arrangement had been made as to the remuneration each congregation would contribute to the candidates who supplied the pulpit during the vacancy, and also as to the amounts of stipend each would pay as soon as a minister was inducted among them.

Dr. Seymour as convener of examinations reported that the last meeting of the presbytery to visit Stirling and Rawdon Presbyterian congregated that as Mr. Nelles had already attended to most of the duties assigned to the commission the commission had not been summoned.

He reported that the commission agreed that the commission should be dismissed. Also that the newly appointed convener of a commission to attend to any remaining matters that may arise.

Funds Satisfactory

The treasurer, Mr. W. V. Fairbairn reported that though returns were coming in slowly the funds of the Presbytery funds were in a satisfactory condition and the usual per capita standing accounts were ordered to be paid.

Mr. Scott reported for the committee on S. S. and Y. P. Societies. He stressed the importance of properly observing Rally Day, and of giving attention to the matter of attendance at the time set for it by the Church.

Rev. A. G. Cameron, Deseronto, reported for the mission committee. Missions are now in a satisfactory state under the care of this committee. Sunbury is supplied by a student, Mr. W. J. Purcell, and the congregation desires that he be permitted to remain with it during the winter months. Amherst Island appears to have taken on new life and activity since Rev. Mr. Earls was settled there. There is nothing new to report from Deseronto. Foxboro is moving along satisfactorily under the pastorate of Rev. T. H. Hall. Ernestown church has been destroyed by fire, but the congregation there will receive $750 in insurance money, and Rev. Mr. Sharpe has also opened a new cause in Odessa, in a room rented from the Salvation Army.

The report of Rev. R. B. Nelles for the committee on Maintenance of Worship was then taken up. Reviewing the action taken by the General Assembly he indicated how the congregations might make the most of the presbyterial movement and stressed the importance of making preparation for it by earnest thought and prayer. He urged that the Week of Prayer be first week of the new year—be planned for and carefully observed. On motion of Mr. Scott the Presbytery agreed to endorse the idea underlying the Week of Prayer.

Against Action

The following resolution moved by Rev. A. E. Cameron and seconded by Dr. MacTavish was adopted: "In view of the obvious fact that the number of places in which intoxicants can be legally sold and consumed will be to increase the amount consumed, therefore this Presbytery learns with regret that it is announced that it is the intention of the government to legalize the drinking of wine and beer in hotel dining rooms, and in the opinion of this Presbytery that would be a retrograde step calculated to increase drinking of wine and beer in hotel dining rooms, and in the opinion of this Presbytery that would be a retrograde step calculated to increase drunkenness with all its attendant evils."

The next meeting will be held in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, on the first Tuesday in December at 10.30, forenoon.

20 PER CENT RISE IN GASOLINE PRICES

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—British motorists were hit today by an increase of nearly 20 per cent in gasoline prices, making the stand-ard grade to 25 cents a gallon.

The London Times Wednesday estimated the rise would increase the expense of motorists 100,000 a year. News of the increase leaked out last night and caused a sharp rise in oil shares in street dealings which continued this morning when the Stock Exchange opened.

The growing army of small car owners had found the 20 per cent which has given them cheaper gasoline would continue unchanged by bit the intrusion of Rumania and Russia in an agreement ended the price cutting.

At the end of the day the cheesemakers returned home well pleased with their outing and looking forward to another, next year.

DENOUNCES AN ATTACK MADE ON THE JEWS

No Legal Grounds on Which Justice Could Grant Injunction

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Publisher of Weeklies May Face Contempt Charge

Montreal, Sept. 14 (CP) — Although he found it necessary on legal grounds to dismiss an application for an injunction against an anti-Semitic campaign carried on in three Montreal French language weeklies, Mr. Justice G. Desaulniers in his judgment yesterday roundly denounced the articles.

The injunction was sought by R. Abegov, a Jewish merchant, and the articles appear in Le Goglu, Le Miroir, and Le Chameau, of which J. Menard was described as the publisher.

Judge Desaulniers expressed regret that with the law as it stood it was not possible for him to grant the application. The general principle was that defamation of a class of people or a race was not actionable.

Advice of Mr. Justice Desaulniers during the course of the case that the attacks cease, was not heeded by the publishers of Le Goglu, who appeared against the court itself, his Lordship said today, and added that any such attack against judges must be severely suppressed.

GANDHI MAY BE RELEASED

Be Allowed to Offer Views to Change Public Opinion

Bombay, India, Sept. 14— The Mahatma Gandhi, who has threatened to go on hunger strike "unto the death" as a protest against Great Britain's communal settlement may be released from Yerovda Prison soon by the Indian Government, it was understood Tuesday.

The little Nationalist leader would be released, it was said, in order that he might have an opportunity to put forward his views and effect a change in public opinion.

Urges Gandhi to Reconsider

London, Sept. 14—V. J. Patel, former Speaker of the Indian Legislative Assembly, who plans to leave for a lecture tour of the United States Sunday, Tuesday sent a cable to the Mahatma Gandhi, urging him not to understake a hunger strike.

"Your life is more precious than a settlement of the communal problem, or a hundred other problems," Mr. Patel's message said. "Millions of people whose eyes are turned to you for their deliverance will lose more by your presence, even in retirement."

DICKENS & SON

Rescue of Hutchinsons Described by Capt. Watson

(Capt. Thomas Watson, hero of the "flying family" rescue in Greenland, wrote his story of the adventure and radioed it to the United Press. A retired Scots carpenter, he lived in the United States during the war. Back in Scotland, he went to sea as a pioneer in carrying Aberdeen fishermen to Greenland waters, and has become one of the most successful skippers plying the Greenland fishing grounds.)

By-Capt. Thomas Watson

Aboard Trawler Lord Talbot, en route to Angmagssalik, Sept. 14 (Radio to the United Press) — We rescued Col. George R. Hutchinson and his flying family at 10 a.m. Tuesday and all eight members of the party are safe and well.

Their Klemsy amphibian was a total wreck, having been dashed on shore in lower Kernuak Fjord, about 42 miles south of Angmagssalik. But they all escaped injury. We took them aboard.

We had served up and down the coast since Sunday afternoon, when we first heard the Hutchinson SOS. We were beginning to lose all hope that we would find them when, at 7 a.m. today, we sighted a flare astern.

We maintained full speed toward the spot indicated, but soon encountered heavy icefields. Warning other ships nearby that we were in dangerous waters, we navigated slowly through the floes.

Exciting Rescue

When we had reached a position about eight miles from the distress light, we witnessed and immediately received a reply from Colonel Hutchinson that all was well.

The mate and five of the crew launched a boat at once. These men found Hutchinson, but the swell was too great at that time to effect a rescue in the dark. Since no one was in danger, they decided it would be best to wait for dawn.

We started the work of rescuing the flying family at 7 a.m. and had them all on board in three hours. Their plane was a total wreck, but they managed to save some of their instruments.

The Lord Talbot reached the fishing grounds off Angmagssalik at 3.30 pm. Sunday, when we picked up Hutchinson's SOS. He gave his position at 62.38 north, 38.45 west. We steamed immediately for that position under full pressure, but we failed to locate the plane.

We continued our search after dark, aided by a powerful searchlight. Numerous icebergs made night navigation hazardous, and we sent up rockets at regular intervals.

From daylight until noon Monday we covered 50 miles, searching the coastline. At noon we spoke to the Mountard and the Star of Victory off Cape Dan. Skippers Campbell and Smith of these vessels decided to join us in searching for the lost plane.

We took up positions six or seven miles apart, and steamed parallel courses for 55 miles.

Stopped by Blizzard

Angmagssalik, Greenland, Sept. 14 (Via flying family of Colonel Geo. R. Hutchinson was safe last night.

The Hutchinsons said that during the flight Sunday from Julianehaab they ran into a raging blizzard, which forced them to flights on the sea.

The Hutchinsons and their crew of four men were taken aboard the Lord Talbot and brought to Finsh. The trawler then proceeded toward Angmagssalik and it was understood later will transport the Hutchinsons to Julianehaab, on the south coast of Greenland.

This course was decided upon, it was said, because facilities for caring and lodging the eight members of the party were much better at Julianehaab than in the settlement along the east coast.

It was reported Colonel Hutchinson plans to stay at Julianehaab some days before returning to New York the latter part of the month.

Captain Watson was hailed as a hero today as soon as word of the rescue was received.

Disappearance of the plane Sunday had electrified the whole east coast of the island. Scores of small fishing craft put out to search for the lost party, and Eskimos in the kayaks paddled through the ice floes.

Several airplanes and a number of motor boats took part in the search.

The Danish Consulate here received a wireless from the Greenlandic Trading Company in Copenhagen the Hutchinson party and extend every possible assistance.

The plan of taking the party back to Julianehaab where the flight, which ended Sunday started, was viewed as more feasible here.

Angmagssalik is nothing but a tiny colony and has provisions on hand barely sufficient for the needs of the local colonists through a long winter.

The Lord Talbot is only a 325-ton vessel, manned by Captain Watson and a crew of 12. There is little room aboard the ship to accommodate an additional eight persons.

HOPEFUL SIGNS OF RECOVERY

By sundry observers, and amongst them some expert economists, it has been held that a strong psychological element impletes the problem of the world trade depression, and that if the fear of a general collapse could give place to a steadier outlook upon the difficulties of the situation, focus upon the difficulties of the situation, the restoration of confidence would itself become no small asset in anew starting up the wheels of industry and movement of commerce. Nobody seriously believes that Frankenstein robot created by human ingenuity and skill is itself some steel-plated monster that can become overlord of the human forces to which it owes its existence. If errors, and even colossal errors, have been made either in calculation or structuring or policy, they can be corrected however slowly and heavily the process of reconstruction and readjustment may be in making itself felt. And, happily, there are at present certain signs that would seem to warrant the opinion expressed in many influential quarters at once that the depression has reached its nadir and that the outlook is improving. The fiscal eclipse has its own corona. It has had a salutary effect in fastening public attention upon retrenchment and reform and in hastening those wild impulses of speculation which disorder the imagination, throw things out of gear, and play havoc with the principles of rational thrift and sound economy. The illusory book-keeping device has spent its force, and the hark-back to realities is itself one evidence of the ground being cleared for rebuilding the waste places. But if it be true that "fear makes the insect like the leaf it feeds upon," there are good reasons for believing that the new spirit of hope which is now awakening will be able to invest the slag-like stuff now seething in the crucible with heat enough to produce a decided change for the better, although the "moment of propulsion," as the old-time alchemist called it, will not in any single flash turn the contents of the crucible into a little "lake of gold". All the same there are signs of a nature that suffice to inspire confidence without at all desiring to minimize the stupendous difficulties of the economic problem that responsible statesmen confront. And these may be noted as indicative of the fact that nations are making a resolute attempt to set the house in order and to establish a foundation of fiscal reform which involves sacrifice in a self-enlightened way, yet, because it does not, it is claimed the safe and sane method of removing flimsy structures and replacing them by a better type of fiscal architecture.—Montreal Gazette.

BRITISH TOWN-PLANNING

For a good and years past the subject of town-planning has been discussed in Montreal; but it is to be feared that very little practical work has been achieved—largely through the laissez-faire attitude of the civic and Provincial authorities. Town-planning is a matter of very real importance, and when it is properly pursued it results in material benefits, as well as in a vast improvement from the purely scenic viewpoint. It is of interest, therefore, to note what is being done in the Old Country in this connection while we remain largely supine.

A bill entitled The Town and Country Planning Act has just been passed by the British Parliament which has for its specific object the strengthening of the hands of local authorities. It replaces the Town Planning Act of 1925, which was strictly limited in its application, and it provides for town planning schemes to be made in regard to any land, whether open or built over, rural or urban, with the object of controlling the development of the whole area including in any one planning scheme.

Under the former Act large regional schemes had been put into operation. These may be embraced, either in whole or in part, in any scheme approved under the new Act. The scope of this Act covers practically all matters such as streets, driveways, footways, the stopping up or the diversion of existing highways, the provision of open spaces, whether public or private, the preservation of sites or places of religious worship, sewerage, drainage, and the reservation of sites for aerodromes; the erection of new buildings, the demolition or the provisions to secure safety and convenience on the roads.

It is anticipated that the new Act will greatly facilitate the extension and completion of the town-planning schemes begun under the Act of 1925. Under the latter urban and rural schemes were frequently merged, and joint town-planning schemes now cover one-third of the entire area of the country, with the result that living conditions have been materially improved both in town and country.

There is in all this an example which ought not to be ignored.—Montreal Star.

THE LONELIEST HEART

By Aline Michaelis

Which is the loneliest heart that beats to-night
If we could truly read
Each hidden struggle and each secret plight,
Each brother's stress and need?

Ah, does it throb on some forgotten isle,
Unmarked on any chart,
Or in some crowded city where no smile
Bids weariness depart?

The loneliest heart, wherever it may dwell
Is one that thrust aside
Another heart which loved it all too well
And, loving, starved and died.

The loneliest heart is that which now must know
Only in dreams the touch
Of clinging hands of one who long ago
Put faith in it too much.

HUNTING DOGS HAINT going to have much fun this fall being debarred the privilege of running deer, and local sportsmen are sore because the government has been and gone and done put a ban on hunting with dogs. Says one enthusiastic deer hunter: "How the Sam Hill are we going to find the deer without dogs, we can't smell 'em and the deer can smell us, can't sneak up on 'em behind because they aren't going to bleat out where they're hiding. What the deuce did they ban the dogs for, the dogs dont bother the deer, don't often get within a mile of 'em, just start 'em down the runways and that's all. Some folks think the dogs annoy the deer, bite 'em and bring 'em down and all that—pish and tush to that and a couple of poohs! poohs! any deer can hold his own against one dog or a pack of dogs. Such a law is phoney and only benefits professional guides who can smell a deer most as good as a dog".

DISPOSING OF HOUSE REFUSE SAVES HEALTH

Advice is Especially of Interest to Rural Districts

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

House refuse, if not properly disposed of, is a menace to health. Here sentiment and great care must be exercised. To have a weekly house cleaning day is not sufficient. House refuse demands daily attention.

In country districts, where ashes, etc., are not regularly collected by the authorities, rags and all combustible materials are best burned. Animal excreta, vegetable refuse, and other substances that do not burn readily or at all, can safely be buried, provided the hole is dug several feet deep. An added precaution is to cover or coat the refuse with ashes. This method will obviate the possibility of foul odors.

It has been estimated that for every thousand inhabitants in a city community the annual ash bin refuse alone amounts to over two hundred and fifty tons. Those who live in the cities should always cover ash receptacles. And, of course, garbage cans should be adequately covered and be preferably of galvanized iron or similar material.

House drains should always be a matter of great concern to a family and particularly to the prospective home builder. Such drains can be made either of iron or earthenware. The size of these depends upon their use. Main lines are about six inches in diameter and branch lines four. Besides, drain pipes should always be laid in straight lines. The slant of the pipe should likewise be of a level to insure the easy flow of water and, in other words, take advantage of the force of gravity.

Joints between pieces of pipe should be most carefully worked so as to prevent leakage. To protect them adequately a covering of cement may be employed. Traps should always be placed along any sewer line so as to secure adequate ventilation.

Waste pipes are usually about three inches in diameter and should be of lead. Those that take care of bath tubs, sinks, wash basins and the kitchen sink ought never to connect directly with drain or soil pipes.

Sewage disposal is always a problem whether it be in the city or in the country. When it is run by pipes into the city after, in the case in large communities. great caution must be exercised that the sewage is carried well out to sea and that tides do not carry it back to shore. Such an undesirable should always be under water.

Cesspools, which are in use in various types, are often the only means as well as the best for removing refuse from the house. This refers particularly to the country home. If a cesspool be modified and becomes a self-digesting, two-compartment septic tank—a structure which is highly to be recommended—the disposal problem is usually solved.

Various methods in use for the so-called "purification" of sewage by chemical means and by precipitation, as a rule, are useless. If such chemical means are employed, from six to twelve gallons of quicklime to each gallon of sewage.

Cesspools and septic tanks should never be placed closer to a dwelling than fifty feet. Special care should be taken that such receptacles are at least one hundred feet from a well or spring. Every pools must, of course, be emptied regularly, which can only be properly ventilated.

The proper disposal of house refuse of all kinds depends a great deal upon individual requirements and the location of the house. Sewage and refuse, however, should be got rid of in the quickest way possible as well as in the least objectionable, and always as far away as far away from inhabitants as possible.

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Persons subject to cramps in the legs should be careful when swimming. Those who have this trouble readily or who don't warm up quickly after one or feeling in bathing should never stay in the bathing should never stay in the water over fifteen minutes at a time.

More Red Men in Country Now Than When White Man Landed

Ottawa, Sept. 14 (CP).—Department of Indian Affair officials expressed the opinion yesterday there are more Indians in Canada now than when the first white man landed in this country. When it is remembered that in the census of the Dominion given the total number of red men as 122,000 as compared with the last department census total of 108,612.

A considerable difference of opinion from time to time has been expressed as to whether there are as many Indians in Canada as when French and English settlers first came here. Indian Department heads are inclined to the belief there are more. Of course it can never be definitely decided, as the Indians who roved through the primeval forests weren't worried by census collectors.

It was explained at the Bureau of Statistics that the reason for the difference is that some bands have refused to sign treaties making them wards of the Dominion Government in return for handing over their lands. Consequently they would not be included in the total prepared by the Department of Indian Affairs, but in census returns of the bureau. One of these bands is west of Red River, and Archers in the Northwest Territories.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

There are times when almost any girl likes to do a flop, lop, sprawl in her chair, she's tired or warm or mad about something. But when she gives way to this form of relaxation let her go off by herself where nobody sees her. Sprawling never will work short skirts, it was never a pretty attitude. When young daughter does it it's up to mama to make herself obnoxious for the moment, tell daughter to mind her knees and foot, use her backbone for the purpose for which it was designed and therefore look like a lady!

Nobody needs a course of physical culture to understand posture, or to achieve it. Two simple rules make for graceful movement add harmonious lines. They are: keep the backbone stretched to its fullest length at all times—walking, standing, sitting; carry the chest full and high. There's no such thing then as crunching into a humble attitude, shoulders forward, looking slack.

When sitting occupy all of the chair seat. Don't teeter on the edge of the chair, or on one thigh bone. Doctors claim that there are certain deformities, which might well be called chair diseases. The wrong sitting position has a deplorable effect upon the organs of the body productive of back ache. There must be an inward curve to the waistline which will automatically lift the chest cavity, send hips back where they belong, create a sense of energy and well being that is the reward of body balance.

The typist, the seamstress, any worker who must sit for hours at a stretch should have attached to the back of the chair a small pad that fits into the small of her back. The pad is not for the purpose of support, but to prevent the spinal column from losing that all important curve. Chairs are designed with backs that supply this need. They can be found.

Incorrect sitting position interferes with free, deep breathing. It cramps the lungs. Back muscles go slack, and that's bad because the beautiful figure is dependent upon strong muscles. If women would get themselves up on the question of posture as they get excited about a few excess pounds, the public eye would be wonderfully eased, as it takes in the throngs of fashion on the by ways. Not one woman among 100 carries herself in a distinguished manner. Sad! If they only realized that it isn't the clothes that make the maid as much as the way they wear them that makes them chic and smart!

Poor posture is productive of pelvic displacements, inner organs descending into the lower abdomen, intestinal functions interfered with and retarded.

Aside from health benefits there is the good effect that posture has on mentality and appearance. A girl feels snappy when she is physically on her toes, carrying herself splendidly. A slouchy walk is indicative of despair. The woman who is full of courage, ready to take the world by the hair and fling it into space, naturally walks tall, minds her poise. Posture is largely a matter of the mind. You must think erthierringly. Think beauty. Think splendor. All very necessary since round shoulders, bent backs and bulging abdomen do not reform themselves, but become worse as the years pile up.

Do You Set Pretty or Slump?

Self-Sufficient Salads

(By Barbara B. Brooks)

During the middle ages, salads were just bits of lettuce or chicory dipped in salt and eaten only by the poorer classes of people. The rich were disdainful of "salds" because greens were so low in cost and so common. Only herbs and greens were used in them. It was not until the close of the Seventeenth Century that fish, chicken and lobster were used and not until the Eighteenth Century that fruit was used. Gradually, almost all kinds of meats, fish, fruits and vegetables have been admitted to the ranks of the salads. Today we even use some of the foods high in starch, such as rice, macaroni and spaghetti in combination with something crisp and tart. Furthermore, salads have changed their social position and become a requisite of the complete meal for the millionaire, as well as for those of more meager means.

For luncheon, intelligent men and women often select a salad, a beverage, some form of bread, and occasionally a dessert. You can see evidence of this choice in any restaurant or cafeteria, in the house or in the apartment. A salad has become almost an institution, especially with North American people. ¶

The ancients had more leisure time than we busy bodies of today and they could well afford to linger over a meal and to eat from many dishes. We want food in an easily assimilable form, we want it appealing to the eye and palate, nourishing and capable of being eaten quickly. Thus self-sufficient salads" or whole-meal salads are very popular because, if correctly prepared, they have all of these characteristics.

The following combinations for luncheon leave the consumer satisfied and nourished.

Beatrice Fairfax Letters

How to Get Better Acquainted

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You seem to give others such good advice that I am almost sure you could help me. Here's the case:

I have met a very nice boy, and would like to know him better, but I don't know how to go about it. He speaks to me and is quite friendly, but fails to make a date. What shall I do?

Betty.

He's probably one of the shy kind and is waiting for you to take the first step. Ask him to a party. You might invite him to call, and if you have a piano, he will be delighted to get up a card game, or some sort of little party for you and your friends.

Too Hasty a Wooing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This summer at the beach I met a young man and he also lives after noon, by six we were in love, and by nine I proposed to be engaged marriage, I accepted him in more or less of a joking fashion and we had a crowd of us together. I want to go home early the next day and so did not see him, but he called at my home when I was out. Would you write to me and call Indentically, Miss Fairfax, I am interested in him.

Uncertain.

"Marry in haste, repent at leisure" seems to have escaped your attention, so do not be in any kind of hurry. Chain lightning affairs rarely prove correspondence of a few hours to propose marriage—calling at your home is the best.

Tired of Being Called "Model"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It seems to me if anyone else refers to me as a "model son" I'll do something violent. We live in a nice town where everyone knows everybody else's business. I've been decent to my mother, but not more so than any young man not a cad would be.

I fell in love with a girl and proposed to her, but she refused me saying she could never live in my ideals, that everyone said I was a model son. She loved me very much as my mother would like to have me marry her, but that marriage since that refusal which hurt my feelings, I am still mad about this girl. Have any of your correspondents written you about similar cases?

Rebellious

Yes, I've had letters about yours before, and the trouble seems to be a sort of prejudice against boys on the part of these girls. Your girl didn't want you to be too conscious of the resents and also fears your devotion to your mother. This always seems a foolish bit of reasoning to me, because there is more in that old maxim that a good son makes a good husband than the cynics will allow. If your mother does not expect you to make your home with her after your marriage, you might explain take up the question with the young lady who objects to a "model son."

THE GREETING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Frequently my fiance and I visit some friends of his who are older than we are,—and it usually happens that Mr. Blank will greet us at the door and take us inside. Mrs. Blank is upstairs, and in short time she comes down to the living-room and I would like to know if I'm supposed to rise to greet her. We aren't old friends and as she is very correct in everything she does, I wondered if she noticed that I didn't rise to greet her when she come into the room. (She is about thirty-eight with a girl in Junior College almost as old as I am, so I didn't think it necessary.)

2.—I don't like to say "I am very pleased to have met you, Mrs. Blank." Isn't there anything that is just as correct and that sounds more refined?

3.—I have been living in this city for about five months. During that time married women have been kind enough to invite me to their afternoon meetings but as a single girl like, I live in a rather small but presentable apartment which could accommodate about four guests nicely. Do you think I should have one of those couples over at a time? Or do you think that would be too long and drawn out? Should I really like to reciprocate in some way as they have been most lovely to me, but I feel that a gathering with all of them at once is a little more than my purse could stand right now. Can you suggest some way that I might accomplish this?

M.

1.—Rise to greet your hostess when she enters the room. This is a gracious and polite tribute that all should oerge. The fact that this friend is older than you, and the fact that she has a daughter her almost your age gives even more of a reason why you should not omit this social amenity, as a matter of fact, when we are in the home of another we should always rise, it is better to err on the side of kindness than to be indifferent to social grace, than it is not to rise.

2.—Your question on etiquette in her social point of view, you should be especially careful about this sort of social compliment I suspect. You won't be sorry, dear friend, if you do not say that you are glad you may be sorry if you don't.

3.—I agree with you that very often the world "pleased", charming though this is true in itself, is often somewhat awkward to say. For myself I very much prefer the high-hearted word "happy". Try this, next time, and see if you don't feel better. "I am happy to have met you, Mrs. Thompson," or very too, "It has been such a pleas-

Correct Manners

MOURNING ATTIRE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My father-in-law died one month ago. How long should I wear black? I do not like black, but I would not like to appear disrespectful to him as I cared very deeply for him.

One sister-in-law wears black and one does not, and she says that it is optional to do so.

Please tell me what is proper. I am thirty-five years old.

M.

What you wish to do is, in this case, the proper thing to do. That is, our custom concerning the wearing of mourning depends nowadays only on our choice. You won't be showing your father-in-law the slightest bit of disrespect by not wearing black.

In the summer and in your home you may wear the wearing of all-white is as deep mourning as black. And these days and days of white are correct.

Or wear black dresses, if you wish with the pretty and generous white lingerie touches. Or wear black and white prints, or designs patterned with white designs. Or dark brown and white prints. Or simply modify all of the colors of your dresses that you buy now, not wearing black but wearing dark shades.

The sister-in-law who says that it is not correct to wear mourning is not right in this statement, but it isn't necessary.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am twenty-three years of age and I am to be married. I would like to have my married sister attend me. Friends tell me that they never heard of a married woman being an attendant at a wedding. Wouldn't this be all right? I would rather have my sister than a girl friend.

C.

By all means have your older married sister as your attendant. There is no law that says a lady may to have married attendants as it is to have unmarried attendants. No distinction should be cannot understand how anyone living today can still have heard of a married woman being an attendant at a wedding.

THE MOURNING VEIL

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it permissible for a widow to omit the mourning veil when funeral services are just conducted at the home?

F.

Yes.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers)

YANKS REMOVE LAST OBSTACLE TO WIN FLAG

Score Victory Over Indians to Cinch American League Pennant

CUBS NOT IN

Margin For Windy City is Now Five and One Half Games

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Having sailed away the American League pennant, the Yankees could sit back today and watch the progress of the race in the National and figure out the Big Six with their share of the World Series receipts.

Joseph McCarthy's young men assured their participation in the set by brown October classic with yesterday's 9 to 3 victory over the Cleveland Indians. They can coast all their remaining games if they feel so disposed and still finish a lap ahead of the Philadelphia Athletics.

While there still is some semblance of a fight for the National League diadem, the Yankee scout service may feel privy to the cementing ministrations on the Chicago Cubs. Unless all signs fail, the Cubs will be in there battling them when the series opens at the Stadium on September 28th.

Cubs Divide

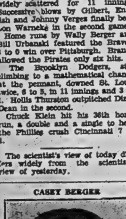
By dividing a double bill with the New York Giants yesterday while Pittsburgh was being whitewashed by Ed. Brandt of Boston, the Cubs increased their lead to five and a half games, with 12 to play.

A little rapid calculation reveals that they need to win only seven to assure themselves a tie with the Pirates and eight to make things look north side supremely happy. However, they probably will get by with fewer victories than that, as the Pirates are not exactly ablaze right now.

American League

George Pipgras, veteran retainer, accepted the honor of pitching yesterday's climactic game for the Yanks. He held the Indians to eight hits and was master in several trouble, while his team-mates piled up 18 blows off Clint Brown and George Connally.

The Athletics, who at this time a year ago were preparing for their third straight world series, sat idle as the Yanks acted it up. The third place Washington Senators were taking a 4 to 1 trimming from the lowly Chicago White Sox, Mill Gaston holding them scoreless until the ninth. Then Joe Cronin Browns improved the day by whipping the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 4, with Rump Hadley's five-hit pitching.



The Cubs and Giants battled in front of grand inades at the Polo Grounds, the Chicago Cubs closing the first 3 to 1 behind Charley Root's four-hit pitching, but dropping the nightcap 3 to 2 as Hal Schumacker kept their 13 hits very widely scattered. The Cubs' victory in Successive blows by Gilbert, Engelhardt and Johnny Vergez finally beat Lon Warneke in the second game.

Home runs by Wally Berger and Bill Urbanski featured the Braves' 3 to 0 win over Pittsburgh. Brandt allowed the Pirates only six hits.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, still climbing to a mathematical chance at the pennant, downed St. Louis 3 to 2 twice, 8 to 5, in 11 innings and 3 to 1. Hollis Thurston outpitched Watty Dean in the second.

Chuck Klein hit his 36th home run, a double and a single to help the Phillies crush Cincinnati 7 to 1.

The scientist's view of today differs widely from the scientist's view of yesterday.

Some of the older members of last year's squad were seen in action last evening and Coach Shiels reports a number of other seasoned players out before the schedule opens.

In Toronto they are trying to revive flyweight and bantam weight boxing. The Maple Leaf Gardens will be the seat of a world's championship bout on Monday night when Pandora Al Brown will defend his bantam weight title against the French Canadian Emil "Spider" Pladner. Not so many years ago Toronto cud-dyed any city in the world for crowds to witness these lighter boxers in action. Monday night's bout should be a natural as this is the third time in which Pladner has been in the ring trying to wrest Brown's title.

No decision has been arrived at by the Toronto Maple Leafs regarding their 1932 training quarters for the season. Owner Ted Dey says there is a rumor abroad town to the effect that the world's champions demand a certain amount of remuneration from the city or community in which they train each fall. There is absolutely no foundation in such statements as the Leafs merely train outside of Toronto for the sole purpose of making professional hockey fans for the coming season. All they ask is that ice be provided for them on or about November 1st, in return for this they usually play two or three practice exhibition games. Three professional exhibition games played in Belleville would give the boys around $1,000 in the net profit. That figure is not exaggerating by a long shot however. The New York Rangers will train in Kitchener this year, we see.

It is not commonly known that professional hockey broke out in the United States in 1897. It did, however, but the Brooklyn promoter who had the brain-wave was forced to abandon the team because ice was not available and because there were all too few fans. Cleveland built the first indoor arena in the States in 1904.

We wish to congratulate Tom Lasley upon his recent achievement of entering the hall of fame or golfer's paradise, namely—"a hole in one". Tom made his perfect drive off the fourth tee and the 166th while on the Lake Shore drive, rolled into the fourth hole for a "hole in one". The feat was performed last Sunday afternoon at the Bay of Quinte Golf Club, when Tom was playing a round with Teddy Dagg. The distance of the drive was 166 yards.

Casey Berger who is substituting for the Masked Marvel, Wednesday, won his bout in Niagara Falls over the week end, we notice. The ex-California football star may find the going pretty hard against Scotty McDougall however. The best that interests us most is the Hari-Kopat "go." We want to see the flashy Dutchman use his speed against the rugged Kopat. Meanwhile, who battles Red La Rogue, a former Belleville lad here but Ned Minnolla of Peterboro will have to many reporters in the bunch at the tale though. Campbell and Kersey will most likely be the Belleville battery while either Bowman or Osborne will hurl for the visitors with McGill on the receiving end.

Today's question: What year was the Western Canada League organized and what hour of the day were games started, also was Beans Reardon one of the umpires in the league in its first season? asks Ripley.

The Western Canada League was organized in the spring of 1907. The league was popularly known as the Twilight League, owing to the fact that during the entire season games were played after six o'clock in the evening. Reardon did not umpire in 1907. He made his debut in 1908 with the Western Canada League.

It is from the home the nation draws the breath, and the better the home the better the nation.—Mrs. Stanley Baldwin.

MAY BREAK ALL RECORDS

Providing Cubs and Yanks Participate in Fall Classic

New York, Sept. 14.—Baseball looks to the 1932 World Series to break all records for attendance and receipts, provided that the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs represent the American and National Leagues, respectively.

The Yankee Stadium, with its seating capacity of 62,246, will produce a maximum "gate" of $234,000 for the series. A sell-out would mean the single game record for attendance, set at 63,600 by the Yankees in 1926, and for receipts, set at $224,130 at the same park in 1928.

With the addition of 9,000 bleacher seats to be erected for the series, Wrigley Field, home of the Cubs, will seat 37,300, and produce a maximum gate of slightly more than $200,000.

Thus if the series should go the full limit of seven games, there would be the possibility of an aggregate attendance of more than 435,000, and total receipts of more than $1,500,000.

Five Farms Course, Baltimore Country Club, Sept. 14.—In a day of dramatic surprises punctuated by an unprecedented onrush of American's new golfing talent, the highly prized qualifying medal for the United States Amateur Championship was captured by a 30 year old colleges star yesterday. Johnny Fischer of Richmond, and the University of Michigan, with a record equalling tally of 68-73—141 for 36 holes.

He finished one stroke in front of 18-year-old Wilfred Crossley, Harvard freshman, and Ryle P. Hall, wealthy Philadelphia banker, tannic star by preference and golfer only by request.

C. R. "Sandy" Somerville of London, former Canadian champion, qualified easily enough by posting 77's alongside his 73 for a scorching 18 holes, for a 36 hole total of 150.

Adolf Hitler and Nazis Gird Loins for Fifth Major Election This Year

Meet Opponents in Way They Deserve and Must Expect

12TH FIGHT

Speaker of Reichstag Addresses Polite Note to President

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, leader of Germany's National Socialists, opened his campaign today for Germany's fifth major election this year by warning the opposition parties his Nazis will meet all opponents in the way they deserve and must expect."

"Attack is the best means of defense," Hitler warned, following a meeting of the Nazi leaders. "And opposite to measure against me will be a weapon, that will turn upon the opressor."

"This will be our twelfth electoral fight," said William Frick, one of Hitler's chief lieutenants, "and this time we'll win."

Meantime, German Goering, Nazi President of the Reichstag, told President Von Hindenburg in a letter, that the Reichstag expects the immediate withdrawal of the dissolution decree and the resignation of Von Papen, Government.

His letter was written with careful politeness, but he maintained his defense of his conduct in refusing to recognize the Chancellor's decree until after the non-confidence vote was taken.

TIDE TURNING FOR DEMOCRATS

Roosevelt Elated Over Success Obtained in Maine

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 14 — The Democratic victory in Maine means "the tide in this country has definitely turned from the Republican leadership," Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Tuesday wired Governor Brann, Democratic winner in the gubernatorial race in that state.

Roosevelt also despatched messages of congratulation to E. Carl Milliken, of Rockland, and to John Utterback, of Bangor, Democratic victors in the congressional contests.

A message of regret at his defeat was despatched to J. R. Connolly, of Portland, Me., nominee for governor.

Roosevelt hailed for 45 minutes in St. Louis, where several hundred enthusiastic persons applauded him. The governor told them the Maine election is an omen of what is to come in the general election this fall.

PLANE IS WELL ON ITS WAY

Sighted By Vessel 1000 Miles East of Boston

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—A sharp lookout was kept at coastal towns in the British Isles early today for the airship "American Eagle" enroute from New York to Rome, following reports last night that the plane was sighted over the ocean 1,000 miles east of Boston.

The ship, piloted by William Dierich and carrying two passengers, Miss Edna Newcomer, undergraduate nurse, and Dr. Leon Piscuil, New York physician, was reported to have crossed the North Atlantic coast before afternoon if it maintained its ordinary speed.

The steamer Winnebago reported it had sighted the plane at 10.50 p.m. Greenwich mean time last night (3.50 p.m. E.S.T.) at latitude 41.54 north and longitude 43.54 west. This position is on the southern steamship lanes about 1,000 miles due east of Boston.

BRITISH TAX IS CHALLENGE

Dublin, Sept. 14 (C.P. Cable) — Following a meeting last night of the Irish Labor party, a pronouncement was made in which it was declared the action of the government of the United Kingdom in levying a tax on Irish farm produce is a challenge to the Irish people on a political as well as an economic issue which again raises the question of "subjugation or independence, equality or subordination."

The declaration urges the Free State government to arrange to supply every family during the coming winter with sufficient fuel, food and clothing, and advocates the creation of an organization which, acting on behalf of the government, will undertake the sale of Free State cattle for British markets, the profits arising from the loss between the guaranteed price and the prices obtained.

VOLUME OFF PRICES UP

Recuperated Quickly From Swift Decline of Tuesday

Toronto, Sept. 14—Stimulated by the reversal in trend late Tuesday and encouraged by the action of international exchanges prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange today gave further demonstration of the recuperative powers of the list. Volume, however, fell off materially.

C.P.R. was about the most active issue and gained better than a point to 14. International Nickel was again above 11, for a net gain of 3-4 and Brazilian Traction and Ford of Canada fractionally higher.

Consolidated Smelters and Page Hersey, suffering most in yesterday's reaction, made good ground today, with the former advancing 3 3-4 and the latter 2.

RECOVERY IN MARTRENEWED

Gains General Among Price Changes at Midday

Toronto Ont., Sept. 14.—Yesterday afternoon's rally in stocks renewed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today, gains being general among price changes at midday. Advances ranged from fractions of yesterday's record rate.

Noranda and International Nickel led the active trading, rising to $31 and $11.95, respectively. Base metal issues followed suit, but Hudson Bay was up 10 to $2.85 and Pend Oreille 4 at $4. Lindsley were a strong group. Falconbridge gaining 11 to 87. Ventures 4 to 2.50 and Sherritt Gordon and Sudbury Basin a couple each.

Golds remained relatively inactive.

MARKET CREPT UP 1 TO 2 PTS

Bulls Appeared Chastened and Board Resumes Poise

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.— The Stock Market regained its poise today, after the convulsions of the past two sessions, but bulls appeared chastened, and showed little inclination to attempt a renewal of the rally.

The market crept up 1 to more than 2 points, probably reflecting short covering, during the morning, but slid back after midday, losing most of its gain. The list hardened again, however, and it came close to the previous day's prices. Trading was in less than half of September.

Among issues registering extreme gains of around 2 points were U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, Case and International Harvester, but these gains were largely offset by declines. Utilities responded to the weekly power output report with numerous gains of 1 to 2 points, apparent in such issues as Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, National Power and Light, American Power and Light, Detroit Edison and Brooklyn Gas, but these advances were not fully maintained. White Motor jumped 3 to 4 points, the Studebaker Merger plan, but Studebaker was barely steady.

BUILDING OF BRIDGE URGED BY DELEGATES

Report to Be Given in February to State Legislature

THREE SITES

Cost Would Be Six Millions Although Much Needed

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Sept. 14 — A suggestion that the assistance of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be sought for the construction of an international bridge across the St. Lawrence river was before the State Chamber of Commerce today following a hearing on the bridge project here.

The suggestion was made by Alton B. Newell, president of the Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce as delegations from the Province of Ontario and the State of New York appeared before the Commission authorized by the legislatures of both Canada for construction of the bridge.

The bridge commission is to report to the State Legislature in February with recommendations on the project, State Senator Chas. Orville Reads the commission.

Mr. Newell's suggestion was taken under advisement for comment by the legislative group. The estimated cost of the bridge is six million dollars.

Three Sites Proposed

Sites for the international bridges were suggested by a previous commission. The first would be at Chimney Point, near Ogdensburg; the second at Collier Landing, on the Grindstone Islands, and the third at the proposed power dam at Massena.

Yesterday's witnesses, among them business men and officials of Ogdensburg and John G. Tulloch, collector of the port, presented evidence. Senator Read said the bridge here requires a bridge.

Frankin M. Little, publisher of the Ogdensburg Journal, said that with the St. Lawrence Seaway Development in prospect, traffic across the river will grow. The seaway, he said, is for expenditure of $80,000,000 in this area.

Among other witnesses were Assemblyman Rhods Fox Graves, of Gouverneur; former Mayor Daughter of Prescott and Hector Carruthers of the Ottawa Auto Club.

Afterward the commission toured the bridge site at Chimney Point in a motor boat.

MONGREL DOG BITES GIRL

Marion Orr Taken to Doctor For Treatment

Marion Orr, daughter of Vernon Orr, 7 Grove street, was severely bitten by a mongrel dog about 2 p.m. yesterday afternoon.

Little Miss Orr was taking the family dog for a walk when suddenly her dog made a race at another dog on the other side of the road, caused and as Miss Orr attempted to take her dog by the collar and part the fight, the other dog, which is alleged by the police to be owned by Mrs. Williams of Gordon street, grabbed the little girl by the wrist.

The mongrel dog held on to its hold, shaking the little girl into the little girl's wrist. Her loud screaming of course attracted the attention of the neighbours, who came to her rescue. By this the united efforts of a number of nearby neighbours to pry the dog's teeth from the wrist of the little girl's wrist.

Later Miss Orr was rushed to the office of a local physician, where medical attention was immediately administered. The police were notified and are investigating.

NO FEAR

Future Not so Glossed as Period Between 1924-29

Toronto, Sept. 14. — Suggestion that the very civilization Great Britain had greeted might destroy her in the end was made here last night by Dr. T. E. Gregory, of London, one of the world's leading economists in his address at the Convocation Building of the University of Toronto. Cabinet ministers, professors, bankers and outstanding business men were in the audience.

The speaker questioned whether the British ideal of international trade and cooperation would turn out or whether the American ideal of high tariffs and restriction of trade and more in mechanization of production would prevail in the next two decades.

"So we want civilization of the kind my country has greeted and which may destroy my country in the end, or the kind America has created and may carry to a very triumphant conclusion?" Dr. Gregory questioned.

"We have no fears of the present depression continuing in its most acute phase," he said. "But there are factors in the international situation that make the future not so glossed as the period 1924-29."

Missionary Convention at Trenton Draws to Close

TRENTON, Ont., Sept. 14.—(By the Canadian Press)—Delegates to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada wind their way home today after a two-day meeting held here. Closing sessions yesterday were marked by the address of Dr. Ernest Cho, who described the work of the United Church in Japan. Dr. Cho has served as a missionary for a quarter of a century in his native land.

Dr. Cho was present two weeks in British Columbia, and found the Japanese people of that province were becoming more and more interested in Christianity and that the spirit of Christ was an ever growing factor there.

An outline of the conditions in Western Canada was drawn by Rev. Mr. Peter Dwyer to be benefit of the delegates. Rev. Dennis G. Ridout of Toronto, the home manager and editor of the "missionary record" described the work of his department in disposing leaflets and other church literature.

He followed a line which showed a hole in the spine and found a small bullet object in the right hip, which I delivered to the coroner. I believe this would cause death.

I had the body X-rayed but found no other bullets in the body.

Stranger Than Accused

Dr. Hay could not say whether the deceased was intoxicated before his death. The deceased, said Williams, was in a condition to be physically, weighing about 170 pounds, stronger and heavier than the accused.

Constable Cameron, last witness called by the Crown before court adjourned for lunch, told how wife lives in the Mcllquham house, gave evidence to the effect that he had secured the revolver from Frederick Mcllquham after the shooting and handed it over to the police. "William Mcllquham was a regular maniac when he was drinking," said Cameron, "and we had to get out of the house when he came home drunk. He always wanted to fight and his mother was the only one who could handle him."

On the night of the killing, William Mcllquham was drinking with Fred and William were in an alcoholic condition and had to go and come down until he heard the shots.

Court was adjourned until afternoon.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

She heard the front door of the flat close, and, despite her own uncertain steps along the narrow hall that led to the bedroom.

The room was filled with sudden light as Miss Steed switched on the wall with his hand on the electric light switch. His gray eyes darted with rain, and the bottoms of his trousers were yellow with mud. Mary Faith noted his face had darkened the gold of his close-clipped hair.

"Where in the world have you been, Kim?" she asked, her eyes sweeping him from head to foot. "Sweeping him from head to foot. "Out in all this downpour—as sick as you've been."

"I'm sick this minute," he said suddenly "so keep all your heckling until tomorrow morning—will you, please?"

She could see that he was sick. His was shaking at every word. He was taking off his sodden clothes and got into bed.

He closed his eyes and went to sleep almost instantly. She sat there looking at him with anxious shadowy eyes for a minute. Then she hung over his bed and picked up the clothes that he had left in a heap on the floor by his bed.

As she hung his damp wrinkled coat over the back of a chair by the window she saw a bit of satiny cloth protrude from one of the pockets. She pulled it out and looked at the printed in red and gold letters:

THE GOLDEN PHEASANT

TAVERN

The Golden Pheasant Tavern. Why, that was the place where she and Kim had stopped for refreshments on their way to Garrstaville the day they were married. It was twenty miles from the town at the very least. It came flashing into her mind like a picture on a silver-screen—a little white house not far back from the road, with nothing to give it its name but a gilded sign on its roof and a weather vane. Who had been there with him? she wondered.

She turned and looked at him, his straight, fine feathers looking finer than ever in his tousled, rumpled back from a broad high forehead—that was the badge she was to people of strong intellect and splendid character.

"And yet he behaves just like a bad little boy," she thought. "He tells me lies and sneaks away from me, just the way he used to do with his mother——"

Well, in the morning she would have all the truth from him. She would tell him that she didn't want to be his mother, his governess, his partner—and that he would have to play fair with her——

Her brain stopped at that point. She knew that no matter what he did or how he treated her she would go right on as she was going with him. She knew she loved him too much ever to lay down any ultimatum to him——

CHAPTER XXXII

In the morning he was so sick that after she had taken one look at him she telephoned Dr. Thatcher.

"Promptly," he said gravely when he arrived. "Bad case of it, too. I thought I told you to keep this fellow in the house for a few days, Mrs. Farrell."

Mary Faith wrung her hands. "He would go out yesterday. He started to work on the office after dinner when the sun was shining—no one would have dreamed that it was going to rain.

"He was out half - the night," she said. Kim's voice came from the doorway of the room. "Not very long—one hour and a half—not more than twelve o'clock. I suppose he'd been out eating and drinking with some of his cronies."

"It isn't it was some woman he was with," she said sharply to Mary Faith when the doctor had left. "He's the beautiful father all over again!—This is just the sort of thing Amelia was against all the years she lived with that beautiful dunce—like father, like son," as they say——

Through the open door of the little room across the hall Mary Faith could see the baby, perched up in his bed like a little bird, watching her with his bright blue eyes. He laughed when he saw her look at him and waved his small hands.

She waved back at him. "If I never teach him another thing," she promised herself solemnly, "I'll promise to be honest and to be square."

For ten days Kim lay in bed. And day after day Mary Faith sat by the window or his room, sewing or reading, hovering over him with medicine or the thermometer. One night when his fever was very high he had a touch of delirium and called for her even when she was sitting on the bed beside him.

"No—no—I want to talk to Mary Faith," he said crisply, beating back the hands with which she tried to quiet him. "I must talk to Mary Faith——"

So after all I'm the person he thinks of and wants 'way down deep in his mind," she told herself, her eyes misty. Many times he goes to the Golden Pheasant——"

Claire's name and the thought comforted her and sustained her through the anxiety of the next few days.

Then Mrs. Farrell caught a little cold. She insisted that it was a bad attack of hay fever and summoned a utter medico—Thatcher, that she needed a change of air.

"I thought first of going down to Garrstaville for a few weeks," Mary Faith heard her tell Kim. "But I decided that the dust in the country roads and the hay fields would be bad for me, so——" I'm going to visit cousin Lucy Ledges."

Lucy Starks was Mrs. Farrell's second cousin, an elderly spinster who taught school in Hampden Ledges, a little town among the hills in the southern part of the state. Mary Faith had met her once, but she had sent a hand-made dress and a friendly little note when Kim and she had been reading the note, Mary Faith felt that she knew Miss Starks very well indeed. Her writing could belong only to a person who was calm and well-poised and methodical.

She knew that Cousin Lucy lived alone, and she planned to be accepting a small house on a side street. She wondered, as she packed Kim's things, just what Cousin Lucy's state of mind would be when her guests began to throw burnt matches on the floor of the neat little kitchen, cramps her head to leave Smyty coffee cups around the house, when she asked foolish questions and made endless small talk.

Mary Faith had a shamed feeling of relief when she saw that Mrs. Farrell intended to stay at Hampden Ledges for a long time. Four days after Kim left for Garrstaville a little brown valise were packed.

"I'd have taken you to Garrstaville myself," she said to Mary Faith the night before her departure, "but I thought it would be almost impossible to get it into the car with Kim and you. He will have to be arranged without any trouble."

Mary Faith was glad that she was to watch the effect of her words on Mary Faith.

"The doctor's car!" Mary Faith repeated, a puzzled look coming into her wide, gray eyes. "You mean Dr. Thatcher's car?"

"Yes. I forget to tell you that he's going to drive me down to Hampden Ledges. It's only eighty miles, and it's a beautiful drive, through the hills. Don't drive so, Mary Faith. I'm not just an old grandmother to you, but it seems that I'm still an attractive woman to men of my own age!"

That night Mrs. Farrell went to bed with an extra layer of cold cream on her face and kid curlers in her gray-blonde hair; and the next morning—an hot, rainy Sunday—she drove away with the doctor, looking gay and almost young, her eyes shining happily from under the brim of her new hat.

"It'd be funny if the two of them got married, wouldn't it?" Kim mused, as the doctor's car purred rhythmically out of sight. "They're known each other for years and—well, strange things have happened, you know."

The more thought that stranger things had happened lifted Mary Faith's spirits wonderfully. She had a certain affection for Kim's mother that there was no doubt that she was a very irritating person to have around. She insisted upon handling the housekeeping money and she had no idea of economy. She bought veal steak at sixty cents a pound when veal chops at forty-two would have done just as well. She ordered alligator pears when they were out of season and she bought pink perfumed soap that costs a quarter a bar, when she knew pink-soap Mary Faith and Kim preferred scentless white soap for less than half the money. And she was forever bringing home some nonsensical and unnecessary —— to the baby.

"But she loves Kim and she's loyal to him." Mary Faith would remind herself.

For the next few weeks Kim came home early every afternoon. Mary Faith would make a cup of tea for him, and then he would lie on the old sofa and read or sleep until dinner was ready. He seemed to enjoy the peace and quiet of the flat. The uneventful hours that he spent listening to the radio or reading "on the front step with Mary Faith. He would tell her that she was the loveliest thing he'd ever seen, much too good for him. Mary Faith was very grateful for all her happiness. She told herself that it had always been written in the stars that her life with Kim should turn out to be just like this.

And then, during the last two or three days of that extraordinarily hot dry month of July, she noticed with growing concern, a certain restlessness in Kim.

One evening Kim did not come home for his dinner until half past seven. He offered no excuses for his tardiness and he had biscuit and the chicken she had broiled for him that Mary Faith had had ready to serve at six o'clock.

He soon went to bed, and Mary Faith found herself thinking of something Mrs. Farrell had said about him long ago.

Her mother's words seemed to fill the hot little kitchen.

"This is the sort of thing you'll have to learn to expect if you marry Kimberley," Mrs. Farrell had said. "Meals spoiled because he's not here to eat them on time! Whole dinners put away untouched sometimes because he doesn't show up at all!——

Kim was always when Mary Faith turned out the kitchen light and went into the bedroom. The light from above the bed gleamed on his blond hair, and he looked as innocent as a child when Mary Faith bent to kiss him.

He had been drinking. She knew it as she leaned close to him and felt his warm breath on her face, felt his warm hands pulling her down, and she drew back without comment.

She went out to the back porch to think. If Kim had been drinking, what did it mean? Did it mean that he was bored once more with the life he had been living?

"That's probably all there was to it," she comforted herself, "and after all he didn't stay out late drinking.

Presently she got up, locked the doors of the flat, and went quietly into the big walnut bed beside Kim.

Through all the gray wells of sleep she must have known that she was there, for he murmured drowsily and stretched out his arm toward her. And at his touch, sheer love for him—for his weaknesses and his faults as well as his virtues—welled up in Mary Faith's heart.

She would rather be here, she told herself in this half little one than anywhere in the most magnificent house in the world——And then she checked herself thinking of the most magnificent house she had ever been inside of—the house in Rose Valley. It would be lovely at this time of the year, with the trees rustling around it and the green gardens and the fields of ripening grain stretching out like magic patchwork on every side. She had never been in Mrs. Nesbit. She did not regret it now.

Kim stirred in his sleep and awoke. "It's stifling in this room," he murmured. "I sure did envy Jack Malcolm tonight, living at the Athletic Club, with an electric fan in his room and a waiter bringing him cracked ice every time drinks!"

"What's Jack doing at the Athletic Club, Kim?"

"Oh, he's been there for a week. Didn't you know it? Claire went to Detroit to visit some friends, and he's living at the club until she comes home. So he says. I rather think that they've had some kind of a row. I wouldn't be surprised if she did not come home at all."

CHAPTER XXXIII

Mary Faith said to herself that it wouldn't break her heart if Claire never did come home. It would only her down to the ground if she ever did see Claire's dazzling beauty and restless blue eyes again. All summer she had been dreading Claire's return, and the return of all the things that Claire stood for. The card games and the cocktails and the promiscuous kissing that went on in the flat above Hallworth Place—the useless antics of grown-up children," as a brilliant playwright had called such entertainments.

Two nights later Kim telephoned at five o'clock to say that he would not be home for dinner. Some men he knew had asked him to go with them to a clam bake at the Shore Club, he explained.

"No women present," he added, with a laugh.

"In that case, your jealous wife will let you go," Mary Faith answered him cheerfully. "Have a good time, Kim."

That was glad that he was going to the Shore Club. It was fine for a man to spend an evening with other men occasionally—to get their viewpoints on things.

And the Shore Club. . It meant something for a man to be invited to it there. It was a solid sort of institution, where the oldest and best families in the city played golf and danced and gave dinner-parties.

So Mary Faith, who had no social ambitions of her own, was filled with a sense of pride in Kim as she turned away from the telephone that afternoon. He was beginning to know the right sort of people, to go to the right sort of places. He was liked and respected by his business friends.

It was a beautiful afternoon, sunshiny and breezy. Mary Faith put the baby into his perambulator and started off for a walk through the park. The baby, pink and bright-eyed from his afternoon nap, sat up against the pillows of his little coach and played with a rubber rabbit that Jean Bartlett had brought him. It was cool and green under the trees. Mary Faith spread a blanket for him near her favorite bench to watch the effect of her words on and sat watching him in great contentment while she darned Kim's socks. By the time she had finished them and put them into her mending bag, it was six o'clock and the factory whistles were blowing in the distance.

"Time to start home," she said to the baby. "Time to go home and find the baby's bottle!"

She also decided all at once that she wouldn't go home for dinner. She'd go back to the flat for the bottle and then take the baby to Mrs. Puckett's. He would be nice to show him to her friends.

Mrs. Puckett was sitting on the front steps, reading the evening paper, when she came. Within half of the old red brick building with its shutters and its bay trees and its starched white curtains, Mrs. Puckett was standing in the doorway talking to and she came hurrying down the steps when she saw her with a cry. She was a little out of the perambulator, exclaiming over his adorable littleness and his amazing beauty.

"Look at those eyelashes, Mary Faith! If I'm not years to a "I" she cried. "And look at his little hands and his feet—his little velvet feet!"

She horrified Mary Faith by giving him a crust of bread to chew on when they all went in to dinner.

"Pshaw, he can't eat it, Mary Faith. He hasn't any teeth," she said. And when Mary Faith wouldn't let him have it, she went upstairs and came back with an old-fashioned ivory teething ring.

"There!" she said to him. "That's all your smart young mother will let you have. But your Aunt Puck-ie knows how to make you a little muslin bag full of raisins when you really begin to cut your teeth."

FINAL TOUCHES BEING ADDED TO HYDRO BLDG.

Final trimming on the new hydro office on Front Street, which will soon be ready for tenancy, is now being undertaken by the staff of workers who have been employed on the building for the past several weeks. Plumbing and heating system has nearly been installed, together with the lighting system which is already in. At present painters are adding the final coat of paint to the face of the building.

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 30

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Mugambi, weak and suffering, slowly trailed the retreating Arab raiders. As the days passed his wounds healed and his strength returned until his giant frame had regained its former mighty powers. Meanwhile the Arabs had reached their fortified camp, and there Achmen Zek awaited the return of his lieutenant, Albert Werper. During the long, tough journey Jane Clayton had suffered more than the imprisonment of her impending fate than from hardship.

She prayed that she had been captured in the hope of ransom, for then no great harm would befall her at the hands of the Arabs. But there was the chance, the horrid chance, that she would be taken for Tarzan's harem. Jane Clayton had never been in spineless terror before danger. Until hope proved futile she would not give it up. But now, as Tarzan lived there was every reason to expect expect aid.

Tarzan would come! No man or beast that roved the savage continent could boast the cunning and the powers of her loved one. She counted the days that must elapse before he could return from Opar. Then she would be rescued and avenged. That he could find her she had not the slightest doubt. Nothing could elude his keen vigilance. And while she hoped, there came through the dark jungle another. Terrified by night and by day, came Albert Werper.

A down times he had escaped the claws and fangs of the great beasts by what seemed a miracle to him. But at last he had come in sight of the palisade behind which were his fellow companions. At almost the same time Mugambi came out of the jungle before the walled village. He recognized the tattered Werper as the one time guest of his master. The black was upon the point of hailing the Belgian when something stayed him. His suspicions were aroused.

Deficit Placed at $226,-510,977 By The Auditors

INFLATED PRICES

Paper Profits of Thousands Turned Into Heavy Losses

Chicago, Sept. 14.—An auditor's report blanketed in red figures showed a staggering deficit of $226,-510,977 on the balance sheet of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., an investment trust.

One of the leading suits in the house of cards Samuel Insull built above his vast empire of public utility operating companies that crash in the North American continent, Insull Utility Investments, Inc., had lost $6,751 cash in the bank when it collapsed in receivership last April. Other holding and operating Insull utility companies headed by Insull also went into receivership last spring, and he retired to Paris.

Responsibility for the debacle was not fixed by the accountants. There was only the hint of the auditors that inconsistencies in the bookkeeping system prevented a showing of losses on the accounts from the beginning of its organization in January, 1929.

Paid High Price

In his struggle to retain control of his gas, electricity and transportation systems, Insull acquired stock with Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland financier. He bought at inflated prices, and the report showed Insull paid Eaton $22,000,000 for certain stock with only $2,000,000 at the open market price.

"Income from cash dividends, and interest," said the report, "has been insufficient to meet operating expenses and interest charges since 1929."

It said that loans were made by Insull Utility Investments, Inc. to Insull Coal Company, a subsidiary, and the latter used the proceeds of these loans to trade in the securities of Insull Utility Investments, Inc.

In Federal District Court there was filed a petition for leave to intervene in the receivership proceedings. The petitioner alleged that favored friends and associates of the Insull organization profited by $78,900,586 from stock transactions, presumably by purchase at favorable prices and sale on the open market.

Jury Found Defendant Not Negligent in Handling Car

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 14—(CP)—Action against Michael Stopek of Toronto, for $10,000 damages was dismissed in Supreme Court yesterday when the jury, after deliberating half an hour returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. James D. Lyzaa of Ottawa was the complainant.

Lyzaa instituted the action after he was injured in an automobile accident on a hill from Kingston last April. He was picked up by Stopek's car and severely injured, when the car later plunged into the ditch and struck a culvert.

The jury's verdict found Stopek had not been negligent in the operation of his car.

3 IN FIELD IN S. HURON

Independent Denies He is Leaving By-Election Fight

Stratford, Sept. 14.—"My nomination papers will most certainly be filed on nomination day, and I will be in the fight to the last." This was the answer of William Cooper of Kippen, former Liberal and now Independent, when asked Tuesday if he would be a candidate in the forthcoming federal by-election in South Huron.

A three-cornered fight, to elect a successor to the late Thomas Michael Gaffney, now appears a certainty.

Following the withdrawal of William Black, Seaforth, as Progressive candidate, rumor had it that Mr. Cooper would be the latter, as an Independent candidate, leaving a straight fight between the Liberal, William Golding of Seaforth, and the Conservative, Louis Reder of Stayownith.

WANT A VOTE IN YEAR 1932

Order Served on Mayor to Show Cause Against it

New York, Sept. 14.—Tammany Hall struck back at Mayor Joseph V. McKee Tuesday, serving him with an order to show cause why he should not be a special election for the mayoralty this autumn. The move followed the mayor's action yesterday in seeking to prevent such an election.

If no election is held, he remains in office until Dec. 31, 1933, filling out the term of ex-Mayor James J. Walker, resigned.

David Klein, chairman of the executive committee of Tammany Hall, obtained Tuesday's order through John T. Dooling, chairman of that organization's legal committee.

TWO KILLED IN TAIL SPIN

Instructing Pupil at Time of Crash—Both Burned

Montreal, Sept. 14 — Captain Blaise A. Leboeuf, chief instructor of the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club, and C. W. Chambers, also of Montreal, were killed last night when one of the club's planes crashed near St. Hubert Airport.

Captain Leboeuf was instructing Chambers in "spinning." The machine went into a dive, and Leboeuf was not able to right it. The plane caught fire almost instantly after the crash and the bodies were considerably burned. It is believed, however, that both men were killed by the crash.

GORGULOFF IS GUILLOTINED

Paid Penalty For Shooting President Paul Doumer

Paris, Sept. 14—Dr. Paul Gorguloff, Russian physician who shot and killed former President Paul Doumer last summer, was executed on the guillotine early today.

Gorguloff died just as dawn was breaking. The execution was carried out swiftly and just 40 seconds elapsed from the time he descended the steps of the van which brought him from the prison until his head rolled into the basket.

The Russian fanatic's last hope of escaping the razor-edged knife of "The Widow" passed when President Albert Lebrun, who succeeded Doumer, rejected his appeal for a commutation.

EIGHT CASTAWAYS LANDED SAFELY

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 13 (AP) —The British trawler Lord Talbot, which rescued the "Flying Dutchman" in Greenland, reported by wireless to the owners here today that the eight castaways had been landed safely and that the trawler was proceeding back to the fishing grounds.

The message did not say where the Hutchinsons had been landed.

BERYL MERCER AND BETTY JANE AT THE CAPITOL

There is probably nothing so emotion stirring as the anguish of a child. In "No Greater Love", the picturesque tale causing the tears to flow copiously at the Capitol Theatre today and Thursday, a child's sorrow and then her happiness tear your heart to pieces.

The story is about a little girl who is not only a crippled little shaver, but the death of her mother leaves her without relatives, money or home. Little Mildred's case is investigated by Charity and found worthy, but so also are the workings of their red tape that it is long after Mildred's mother has died and she had been taken into the home and heart of Sidney Colman that they get around to their good deeds for the poor.

Beryl Mercer, whom Mildred and her little playmate, Tommy Burns, call "Uncle Sidney", has won the permission of Mildred's Aunt Blade, Seaforth, as Progressive candidate, rumor had it that Mr. Cooper would be a candidate as an Independent candidate, leaving a straight fight between the Liberal, William Golding of Seaforth, and the Conservative, Louis Reder of Stayownith.

Instructing Pupil at Time of Crash—Both Burned

Montreal, Sept. 14 — Captain Blaise A. Leboeuf, chief instructor of the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club, and C. W. Chambers, also of Montreal, were killed last night when one of the club's planes crashed near St. Hubert Airport.

Captain Leboeuf was instructing Chambers in "spinning." The machine went into a dive, and Leboeuf was not able to right it. The plane caught fire almost instantly after the crash and the bodies were considerably burned. It is believed, however, that both men were killed by the crash.

GORGULOFF IS GUILLOTINED

Paid Penalty For Shooting President Paul Doumer

Paris, Sept. 14—Dr. Paul Gorguloff, Russian physician who shot and killed former President Paul Doumer last summer, was executed on the guillotine early today.

Gorguloff died just as dawn was breaking. The execution was carried out swiftly and just 40 seconds elapsed from the time he descended the steps of the van which brought him from the prison until his head rolled into the basket.

The Russian fanatic's last hope of escaping the razor-edged knife of "The Widow" passed when President Albert Lebrun, who succeeded Doumer, rejected his appeal for a commutation.

BERYL MERCER AND BETTY JANE AT THE CAPITOL

There is probably nothing so emotion stirring as the anguish of a child. In "No Greater Love", the picturesque tale causing the tears to flow copiously at the Capitol Theatre today and Thursday, a child's sorrow and then her happiness tear your heart to pieces.

The story is about a little girl who is not only a crippled little shaver, but the death of her mother leaves her without relatives, money or home. Little Mildred's case is investigated by Charity and found worthy, but so also are the workings of their red tape that it is long after Mildred's mother has died and she had been taken into the home and heart of Sidney Colman that they get around to their good deeds for the poor.

Beryl Mercer, whom Mildred and her little playmate, Tommy Burns, call "Uncle Sidney", has won the permission of Mildred's Aunt Blade, Seaforth, as Progressive candidate, rumor had it that Mr. Cooper would be a candidate as an Independent candidate, leaving a straight fight between the Liberal, William Golding of Seaforth, and the Conservative, Louis Reder of Stayownith.

"WHITE ZOMBIE" SPOOKY PLAY AT THE BELLE

An eerie, spooky motion picture which for sheer mystery outdoes all its predecessors is "White Zombie," the startling United Artists feature which opens at the Belle Theatre for two days—matinee daily.

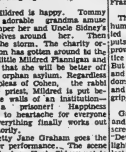
This picture may safely be said to be in a class by itself. For it deals with a subject which heretofore has been little short of superstition, and a not very well known one at that. It's story deals with occult practices in remote sections of Haiti where demons, or dead bodies, are dug from their graves and, by a process of sorcery, re-animated and put to work in the fields and mills as slaves.

Legged is Starred

Whether or not you believe what you see in this picture, all will be enthralled by its presentation. Particularly when you learn that there is a wealth of evidence to bear out its authenticity. The entire picture is done with such artistry and with such conviction and originality that it stands out as a live its substance.

Certainly, "White Zombie" exerts the greatest appeal upon the emotions of any recent motion picture. And this appeal is infinitely heightened by the strain the story puts upon credulity. But when one recalls that several eminent American writers have endorsed the existence of these zombie creatures, one is staggered by this fantastic exposition.

Bela Lugosi, creator of "Dracula" carries the main burden of "White Zombie," and no more sinister character portrayed can be imagined. Lugosi is far and away the leading exponent of this type of role, and he surpasses himself here. He is ably assisted by a cast including Madge Bellamy, Joseph Cawthorn, Johnny Harron, Ralph Fraser and Brandon Hurst.



Story is Staggering

The story concerns itself with a human field who digs freshly-buried bodies from their graves and puts them to work. Science has proven the existence of this practice among the natives of Haiti. But in this instance white men and a white girl come under the domination of this sinister demon and the result is one of the most gripping stories in recent memory.

"Devil and the Deep"

Gary Cooper, Tallulah Bankhead and Charles Laughton, the new screen sensation, are featured in "Devil and the Deep", which delighted large audiences at the Belle last night, and closes its local engagement tonight.

Each day attending the Belle tonight will receive a beautiful picture of Miss Bankhead in treasements of the management.

Chicago's Mayor Resents Slurs Cast Against His City

New York, Sept. 14—Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago, arrived on the liner Bremen Tuesday night after a six weeks' tour of Europe.

He told newspapermen that the Europeans believe New York and Chicago to be the two wickest cities that the two cities "should get together and start a campaign to dispel that erroneous impression."

There was little drinking. About two out of three people I saw drinking were Americans. Next to Americans, When and if Congress modifies the Volstead Act people here will drink that way, too."

He said in spite of the Maine elections, he said:

"As Maine goes, so goes the nation. It's a true index and it's time the Democrats had a chance to show what the Republicans have been using it for 40 years."

Monoxide Gas Nearly Overcomes Lad Sneaking Ride in Back of Truck

A stolen ride on a small truck which J. Chandler, 30, 60 address unknown, shared by the unsuspecting outskirts of Cobourg some time ago, resulted in an effort to obtain a lift to Belleville almost ended in a death ride for the youth who was brought into this city, early Tuesday morning in an almost unconscious condition from the effects of carbon monoxide gas he had absorbed when it escaped through the floor boards of the vehicle from a loose muffler. When the truck was brought to a stop at a cafe on lower Front Street, the feet of the young man were observed sticking from between several crates. An effort to arouse him by hand shaking failed to arouse him. It was only when he was pulled to an upright position that he was aroused sufficiently to tell the story of the effects of the gas. A cup of coffee from the restaurant, given by the scared driver of the truck, Mr. Peter Salvati, Kingston, helped complete the recovery. When the youth had managed to shake off the effects of the trip he set off on foot apparently none the worse for his adventure.

Alex. Stoughton of McArthur's Mills, was sentenced to two months in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of stealing a sweater and other wearing apparel from a construction camp in North Hastings. In default of payment of the costs of court a further sentence of one month was added.

Upon their arrival at the county jail under guard none of the young men had paid the costs of the court proceedings.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 14. —An increase of 3,000 in the number of American tourists entering Canada at this port of entry in August is shown in records released yesterday. The figures for August 1932 are 39,000 as compared with the 35,-000 of August 1931.

TRADE BOARDS AGAINST HOLIDAY NOV. 11TH

Remembrance Day More Fittingly Observed by Silence Than Holiday

Boards of Trade Resolve Against Legal Holiday, November 11

UTMOST ECONOMY

Urge Appointment of National Committee to This End

Halifax, Sept. 15—John W. Ross of Montreal today was elected president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Col. W. L. McGregor of Windsor, Ontario.

Vigorous protest against the proposed order of introducing resolutions interrupted the proceedings.

Col. J. H. Cooper of Toronto declared the section of having resolutions introduced by the resolutions committee before the annual convention long an opportunity of seeing and discussing them was "undemocratic and unconstitutional."

A. B. Gundy of Toronto, the first president of the Chamber, explained, that the procedure had been established seven years before, when it was felt that it was useless to settle and decide matters much beyond the date they would. There was no attempt to railroad resolutions through, he said.

Resolutions Passed

In a few moments the business of the convention was running smoothly again, and the following resolutions were passed.

1. Approval of the policy of the Department of Railways and Canals in its effort to establish the feasibility of the Hudson Bay route for the transportation of goods of all classes to and from Western Canada.

2. That the form of observance to be two minutes silence with suitable ceremonies, rather than a legal holiday, for November Armistice Day;

3. That all the Provinces of the Dominion should have reciprocal agreements whereby double succession duties would be avoided and that the Canadian Chamber of Commerce support all efforts toward this end.

4. That the Canadian Chamber of Commerce reaffirms its previous declarations as the immediate need for the utmost economy in every direction and particularly in non-productive expenditures on the part of all governing bodies, and that the appointment of a national committee for this purpose be heartily endorsed.

More Economy

"Sound financing in government was the subject before the convention at the afternoon session by Vice President J. G. Harrison of Saint John.

Gordon Scott, member of the legislative council of Quebec, declared Boards of Trade were not responsible for extravagant expenditures by Provinces. On the contrary these Boards had aided and abetted the politicians in spending money in the directions the money had gone.

SUSPECT HELD AT HAMILTON

Police Seek Man Responsible For Several Robberies

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 15.—(By the Canadian Press)—Police today held James Brown on a technical charge of vagrancy while they sought to clear up a series of robberies which have alarmed residents of the south-western section of the city.

Brown was remanded in custody for 48 hours when he appeared in police court.

Detectives said the man had been picked up by Motorcycle Officer Howard Morrow after D'Arcy Henchey, dairy driver, told him he had seen a man standing outside a dwelling with a flashlight in his hand.

Brown, Morrow said, had at his approach but stopped and surrendered when he fired a shot in the air from his pistol.

He was said to have had a number of flashlight batteries in his pocket. Morrow said he found a pair of gloves and a skeleton key on the ground near where the man was standing.

PAY TOLL OR MAKE DETOUR OF 14 MILES

New Liskeard, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)—Motorists who have had occasion to visit Ville Marie lately tell of a farmer on the Quebec side of Lake Temiskaming, who turned to good account the bridge which he built and did so much damage over this district.

A bridge that spanned a good sized creek between North Temiskaming and Quinlan, was washed away by floods. The settler whose property on the creek, at this point, got permission from authorities, it is said, to erect a temporary bridge and now the charge of a toll of 50 cents is charged each way, motorists state, and the alternative is a detour of 14 miles.

CASH PAYMENT IS OPPOSED

Hoover Addresses Note to Legionnaires in Convention

Washington, Sept. 15 (AP)—Stern warning of the immediate cash payment of the bonds in his judgment would be "a disaster to the welfare of the nation" was given to the country and veterans today by President Hoover.

"I have consistently opposed it," Mr. Hoover said. "In the public interest I must continue to oppose it."

His 700-word statement to the press was directed at the Kansas City Legion Convention in Portland, Oregon, which today was virtually certain to record itself in favor of full and immediate payment of adjusted service certificates. Already this course had the recommendation of the convention legislative committee.

CONTROL OF BANKS SHOULD BE NATIONAL

Labor Congress Blames Banks For World Crisis

30-HOUR WEEK

If in Force More Would Be Provided With Work

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 15.—(By Jack Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Criticism of Canadian and World Banks for having "precipitated the present world crisis" featured discussions at the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada Convention here today, with the Congress finally going on record as supporting the principle of National Control of the Banking System.

The Congress also discussed a resolution introduced by the Toronto District Labor Council which called for the immediate release by press vigorously for a 40-hour week for all employees coming under the minimum wage law, but refused it to the resolutions committee to have the government reduce the hours to 30 instead of 40.

However, in order to avoid any misunderstanding, Tom Moore, President of the Congress, pointed out the Labor body was still endeavoring to obtain a 40-hour week by legislation. But that the 30-hour week was requested on all Government contracts.

Uniform enactment of the minimum wage law was demanded by several delegates, who pointed out there were wide discrepancies in the measure by which employers were finding "loop holes." The lot of girl employees was again stressed.

Discussion Warm

Discussion on banking became warm at times, as various speakers blamed the banks for most of the world's evils at the door of his bankers. Controller James Simpson, Toronto, a vice-president of the convention, declared the question of banking was vital to the interests of all classes. The Bank of England, he declared, had made profits on practically every important change in the world's economic situation.

While millions of unemployed were walking the streets, he said, those with financial resources were living in luxury. The Congress, he believed should expose the "hidden power of the Government which is behind the Government elected by the people."

He attacked Premier R. B. Bennett for having failed to call a representative labor men in an advisory capacity during the Imperial Economic Conference.

SEND GANDHI TO A PRIVATE RESIDENCE

London, Sept. 15 (CP)— The British Government has decided, it was disclosed today, that as soon as Mahatma Gandhi begins his fast in prison strike, which he has said he will start on Sept. 20, he will be removed from Yerovda Jail at Poona to a place of private residence.

The announcement by the India Office said it is hoped that it will not be necessary to impose any further restrictions on Mr. Gandhi but that this will depend on whether the liberty accorded under the Gandhi-Ambedkar pact of civil disobedience or of any similar agitation against British rule or maintenance of law and order.

Newly Weds Showered with Fruit But Not in Spirit of Happiness

If is rather doubtful as to whether Norman Wesse, of Amelia-burg, was giving Mr. and Mrs. Lorne G. Biggs, a newly-married couple from Niagara Falls, a welcome shower or not, when his fruit and vegetables were strewn about the Biggs' car and their market course during the collision between the two cars about 8:15 a.m. on Wednesday.

Mr Wesse had his car parked indiscreetly along the south side of Market St., filled with vegetables and fruit ready to take his usual market stand on the north side of the street. When Mr. Wesse attempted to go ahead, he had to pull his car out slightly to pass a truck which was parked ahead of him on the south side of the street. Meanwhile the Biggs' car, As he pulled out from the south curb, he collided with the Biggs' car which was proceeding in a westward direction along Market Following the collision fruits and vegetables were seen rolling hither and thither about the street and both cars were somewhat damaged; although no injuries were reported to have been sustained by the occupants of either car.

The Wesse car was damaged to the extent of a bent windshield, left front tire punctured and left front fender smashed. The front fender of the Biggs' car was damaged and the bumper dislodged.

Upon the arrival of Constable Evans the damage was amicably settled between the two parties. The couple are likely to reform.

The newly-married Biggs couple left on their return trip to Niagara Falls following a delightful honeymoon in Eastern Canada.

Plan to Care for Needy Outlined By President Hoover

Citizens Requested to Aid V. O. N. Generously On Tag Day, Saturday

Day by day, night after night, ready at a moment's call, the Victorian Order Nurses in Belleville are carrying on their extensive programme of health in bedside nursing and health teaching. Bringing relief and encouragement to the sick, the Victorian Order nurse is eagerly welcomed and those who have called upon the services of the V.O.N. have appreciated keenly their quiet efficient work.

The activities of the V.O.N. are extensive. Bedside nursing is the first and foremost call on the nurses' times and the services of the highly trained and efficient nurses were in demand by hundreds of citizens last year, four thousand calls being made in the twelve months' period. Health teaching and child welfare work are also a part of Victorian Order work and in the latter comes, the weekly Well Baby Clinic. One hundred and fifty babies every month attend the clinics, which are conducted at no charge to the mothers who enroll infants there.

The Victorian Order is maintained not alone by the amount of fees that is collected by the nurse, only forty per cent. of the actual cost of the services being returned in this manner by the co-operation of the community in which the work is carried on. One can readily understand that with the present economic situation, many patients are unable to pay for the much needed nursing that the V. O. N. provides. No call is refused, however, and rich and poor receive the friendly care. Through the generosity of the citizens who contribute to the work, the Victorian Order is able to continue year after year in the city.

The local committee of the Victorian Order of Nurses is now preparing for the annual tag day which will take place on Saturday, September 17th will be aiding in a worthy community work. A contribution, however small, will be keenly appreciated and will have some place in helping carry on Victorian Order work in Belleville. Citizens are requested to have a tag on Saturday and the committee's appeal to citizens is to GIVE GENEROUSLY.

Recapitalization and Dictatorship of C. N. Contained in Report

Try Other Arrangements Then if Public is Not Satisfied

AMALGAMATION OUT

Non-Political Board of Three Suggested By Report

Ottawa, Sept. 15—Drastic recommendations, involving the establishment of a railway dictatorship in Canada and the complete elimination of the Canadian National Railways, are contained in the report of the Duff Commission on Transportation which, after two months' investigation, will submit its report to the Bennett Cabinet today.

The chief recommendations of the report are as follows:

1. Railway amalgamation is ruled out. The C.N.R. and C.P.R. are to retain their identities as separate systems.

2. Establishment of an arbitral board of three members, one member to be named by each railway and the chairman by the chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission.

3. Lopping off of one billion dollars of the C.N.R.'s capitalization, leaving a total charge of $1,500 million dollars.

4. Reduction in the size of the present 16-member C.N.R. board of directors.

5. "Relentless economy" in the operation of the C.N.R., involving the abolition of luxury trains and the order that the publicly owned road "have nothing to do" with any future changes on its new reduced capitalization.

6. An appeal to the public to test the operations of the C.N.R. on the more economical principles for the years and, if after that the publicly owned service is found unsatisfactory

ACCUSED ON STAND IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Describes in Simple Language Story of Killing

FIRED 2 SHOTS

Brother Obnoxious and Was Choking Accused at Time

Kingston, Sept. 15 (CP).—Frederick McIlquham, charged with the murder of his brother William, took the stand in his own defence today and described how he fired the shots which killed William.

McIlquham said he shot his brother during a scuffle when William was choking him. Their quarrel was said to have arisen when Frederick refused to drive, was playing the radio full blast early in the morning and related when Frederick attempted to turn it off.

McIlquham was still on the stand when the court rose at noon.

McIlquham, a thin, sickly looking man, appearing younger than his 37 years, described an illness which he said had partially deprived him of the use of his legs.

He said he obtained the pistol with which he shot his brother at Niagara Falls.

Witness said he came back to the city in 1928 and has had temporary work on city relief.

Describing the events leading up to his brother's killing, McIlquham testified he was awakened on the day of the tragedy, May 10, about 4½ o'clock. After about 10 minutes William came in very loudly, and went directly to the radio and turned it on full blast.

McIlquham left his brother and went upstairs to bed. Then he heard something downstairs and After about 15 minutes he went downstairs, where his mother was arguing with William.

Made Lunge at Brother

When he asked Bill to turn the radio off, he made a lunge at Frederick and the fatal fight ensued.

He said he fired two shots during a hand-to-hand fight in which his brother had declared he would kill him.

William, he said, had him by the throat at the time, and was choking him so that he could not see.

He had the pistol in his hand as he continued, and fired without aim to loose his brother's hold. At the first shot William strengthened his grip and the second shot was fired again and William released his hold. Frederick then waited for police to arrive.

McIlquham said he telephoned for a doctor and then for the police.

He told the court his brother was communistically inclined and that he had had many fights with him. On one occasion, he said, his brother attempted to run him up until he went to sleep from the effects of the liquor he had drunk.

Loon Strikes Troll and Coming to Surface Starts to Take Flight

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 15.—It is not unusual for one fisherman in making a cast with a fly and rod to hook a champion fish, but it remained for Archie Cook and his trolling hook and play a feathered fish on a troll.

Mr. Cook was trolling off ten-mile point. He felt a strike and imagined it was a dogfish. He started to reel in. Instead of a dogfish he was surprised to see the catch take flight. It was a loon.

The bird had mistaken the spoon for a small fish and had made a successful dive for it.

TIED ROPE ON WHALE'S TAIL FIGHT IS ON

Somerset, Bermuda, Sept. 15 — (CP)—A baby whale, which had been separated from its mother and strayed within coral reefs surrounding the island, is in a stiff fight with fishermen in a motor boat seeking to capture it. Following an unsuccessful and inexperienced attempt to harpoon the mammal, one of the fishermen jumped upon the whale's back and deftly tied a rope around its tail, immediately above the projecting flukes. Whale and rope took turns at towing each other, and finally the baby whale weakened and was brought ashore.

RESIDENTS TO MOVE TO CUTLER

School and Store Only to Be Rebuilt at Spragge

Spragge, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP). — Nearly 300 persons whose houses were destroyed here by fire yesterday, will have to leave the village permanently, J. J. McFadden, president of the McFadden Lumber Company, in which the blaze started, said today.

McFadden said a new school and a new store would be built at once so replace those burned, but "it is unlikely that any of the other buildings destroyed by the fire will be replaced."

The government, he said, would probably look after the homeless residents while they are moving to some other community, probably Cutler, an almost abandoned lumber town about eight miles away.

Appraisers sought to determine the extent of losses caused in the fire but said they could not do so until they had access to the company's records which were locked in the safe in the office and could be opened as it lay in ruins of the company office.

Surveyors expected to have it cleared by tomorrow.

WOLVES BURY FOOD AND THEN DIG IT UP

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 15 —(CP)—Walter Warren of Millertrapper, said today, bury food like dogs and dig it up later when they are hungry.

"They kill deer and moose in the fall," he continued, "and when winter comes and the big hunger makes the survival of the fittest the rule in the bush, they dig the carcasses out of the snow and eat them."

The wolves raid some herds of animals as early as September, he said.

TO INVESTIGATE INSULL AFFAIRS

States' Attorney Seeking Extradition of St. Insull Now in France

CHICAGO, Sept. 15. — State's Attorney John A. Swanson said today he had started an investigation into the affairs of the Public Utility Corporations formerly controlled by Samuel Insull.

Swanson, starting a series of conferences with members of his staff, said he planned to ask receivers of the companies concerned to furnish reports of their operations previous to last June when Insull abdicated as head of the vast utilities empire. The Cook County Prosecutor said he had asked Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor, extradition expert, to review treaties with Canada and France regarding International Extradition of Insull. Insull is living in Paris and his brother, Martin Insull, in Orillia, Ont.

CRAFTSMANSHIP IS WELL EXEMPLIFIED

Arousing considerable admiration from passersby, three splendid examples of craftsmanship are on view in Sullivan's Barber Shop window. A beautiful Napoleonic couch, executed with care and taste; a model sail boat and a splendidly finished miniature steroplane comprise the group, and each is the work of Leo Flagler, 334 Bleecker avenue. This young worker is to be highly complimented for his skill and artistry.

PRINCE EDWARD TO SURFACE ROAD

Men and equipment of the Municipal Road Spraying Company attacked the city Wednesday evening on their trip from Almonte, Ont., where they recently finished up considerable road work in that section. They are en route to Prince Edward County where nearly a mile of road in the district of Wellington will receive new surfacing. This company has recently completed several streets in Belleville and has been for some time past engaged in road work as far east as Cornwall. The large force of men and equipment is in charge of Mr. Wm. Smart, Toronto.

PARTIALLY BLOCKED SEWER CLEANED

A number of employees of the department of public works were busy throughout the early morning hours on Front Street Thursday morning, cleaning out the partially blocked main sewer under that street. This has been the first time in years that this particular sewer has needed attention. Little other work is being undertaken by the department other than road repairing and patching, and minor routine work.

NOT PLENTIFUL ON FIRST DAY

Duck season that ambiguous term which embraces besides wild duck, geese, Brant, Coot and Jack-snipe, was officially opened today, September 15th, and will stay open until December 15th, according to those few hunters who were out in the nearby marshes early this morning banging at luckless coots. Always to be found, ducks are as yet an unknown quantity. Only an occasional one has so far been seen. Invariably they have been flying high over elaborate blinds, which have already been built up, and have refused to decoy into the marsh. "Hunting won't be good for a month yet," say veterans who look forward to the profitable sport year after year.

TEMPERATURE IS ABOUT THE SAME

No variation in the C.N.R. temperature was noted during the past twenty-four hours. Yesterday the mercury rose to 77 during the heat of the day and registered a low point of 56. On Thursday the temperature was 74 and the mercury had risen to 76 at noon. Exactly 3 inches of rain fall was registered on Wednesday morning.

WHEEL DROPS OFF LETTING CAR DOWN

What might have proved a costly and serious accident had the car been travelling at a speedy rate, occurred last night on Bridge St., opposite Wallbridge and Clarke's store. James Wainwright, of Picton, and several friends were starting home from the wrestling bouts at the arena when they reached that point the left rear wheel of the car came off the car axle sending it rolling across the street to the curb. Little other damage was done the machine.

REAR END COLLISION BETWEEN TRUCK, CAR

Failing to observe the truck in front of him, suddenly stop, Mr. M. W. Mott, of this city, crashed his car into the C. P. delivery truck on the lower bridge about 5.15 p.m. Wednesday afternoon.

The traffic was quite heavy at this point at the time, there being two lines of traffic going eastward. The delivery truck was being driven by John Chappelle and was proceeding in the line of traffic in an eastward direction. The car driven by Mr. Mott was following the truck in the line of traffic, when the delivery truck suddenly and Mr. Mott could not stop his car in time and crashed into the rear end of the truck. Police Constable Evans investigated the accident and found that the Mott car was quite badly damaged. The radiator was pushed back some distance and was badly bent. The hood of the engine was also badly bent, while both headlights and front fenders were badly crumpled in the crash. No damage was reported to the truck.

No charges were preferred in the case.

MR. CHEERIO AT OPENING

Kiwanis Karnival Will Be Chuck Full of Features

All plans for the 1932 Kiwanis Karnival are now fully matured and it looks like the most successful event ever staged by the local service club. The Carnival starts on Tuesday night, next week, with a style show being arranged, and staged by Wolden's Limited with six pretty Belleville girls acting as mannequins and on the following three nights the fashion show will be supplied by J. A. McNabb Co., Wise and Company, and Church Bros. with furs by Delaney's every night.

Many startling and unusual features are being arranged for each evening.

The opening ceremonies on Tuesday night will be performed by none other a personality than Don Copeland (Mr. Cheerio) of CKGW fame. Mr. Copeland's broadcast is a ardent worker for the underprivileged of Toronto and although a busy man each day of his broadcasting programmes from Canada's Cheering Station he will find time to take an evening off and come to Belleville for the first night of the Karnival and add his bit to the efforts of the Kiwanis Club in trying to raise money for their welfare and charity fund.

Other interesting features have been arranged for successive nights but these are being kept secret for the present. The games will be entirely different this year while the younger folk will be able to dance as of yore. Come every night and enjoy the novel entertainment.

FATHERS AND SONS DINE

Bishop Marshall Gives Address at Eureka Lodge

One of the largest attended meetings for some time greeted officers of Eureka Lodge, A.F. and A.M. at their initial meeting of the season, held in the Masonic Hall Wednesday evening. Primarily a Father and Son get-together and banquet, the night was especially devoted to the furtherance of amity and closer understanding between fathers and sons. Such was the address given by the principal speaker of the evening, Rev. Bishop Marshall, who delighted, as only and original, but nevertheless thoughtful talk on closer relationship between father and son. This followed a sumptuous banquet, which had been served.

With Wor. Bro. R. E. Sanier occupying the chair and acting as master of ceremonies, many novel features were added to the night's entertainment, chief among these being several splendid selections which were given by the newly formed orchestra composed of some 6 members present, and with Miss Aselstine accompanying on the piano.

Tobacco can be successfully grown in Ontario, if the leaves taken from a field at the Hastings County Home, and exhibited by Mr. W. Sanderock, this week, are a reliable test. Specimens of the weed which was planted this year. The plants reached enormous proportions. Out of 1,500 plants, which were sown from seed purchased at Bishop's store in this city, nearly all have attained full maturity. The percentage of the leaves are splendid. One average plant which was shown has leaves three feet long and one foot wide. They maintain about the same average sire. At present the plants are turning from a vivid green, characteristic of the plant during early growth, to a smoky brown, showing the ripening process already taking place. In another week or so the plants will be ready for harvesting, stripping and curing, which will follow. Of fine Burley variety, the present crop would compare favorably with any in the province.

OBITUARY

LATE CHARLES CLEMENT

A number motored from Belleville Tuesday afternoon to attend the funeral of the late Charles Clement, who died Saturday afternoon in the Belleville General Hospital after an illness of eleven months' duration. Some eight or nine months of this period was spent in hospitals in Toronto and Kingston, and many operations were performed to try and save the young man's life, but in spite of every effort that could be made by physicians and nurses his malady continued to increase in severity until its fatal termination.

The funeral was held at the home of the young man's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clement, Green Bay, Deseronto, and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Harrison of the Deseronto United Church. Many were in attendance from Montreal, Toronto, Kingston, Belleville and other points and the floral tributes were very many, and of exceeding beauty.

The late Charles Clement was a fine young man, beloved by all who had the privilege of knowing him. He was 27 years of age and unmarried. His efforts and sympathies were always for the better things of this life. He was born and brought up in Deseronto, educated in the public and high schools of that town and then completed his schooling by a business course in Toronto. For three years he was on the advertising staff of Canada's Limited, of Toronto, doing catalogue and other general advertising work and when this concern closed their advertising department he transferred to the office of Bauer and Black. For five years he served on this firm faithfully in charge of their mail order department, until sickness terminated his business activities.

During his nine years' residence in Toronto he attended Sherbourne St. United Church and was always active in the service of the Central Y.M.C.A. He was latterly on the executive board of the Y.M.C.A. and during his long sickness was frequently in receipt of sincere tokens of sympathy, both floral and otherwise, from his friends and associates in Church, Y.M.C.A. and business life.

Charles Clement's family and friends now mourn the loss of one who was always bright, cheery and unselfish, always thinking of the other fellow, always reluctant to speak ill of others or spread gossip, and always strong on the side of righteousness, clean living and good works.

The late Charles Clement was a nephew of Miss Ella Embury of 20 Hillcrest Ave., and a cousin of Mr. Newton Thompson, 30 Bridge Street west, this city. He had been in Belleville many times visiting his relatives, attending the local Y.M.C.A. and on convention work.

THE SCRIBBLER
By Beryl Aldridge

The first page of Herbert Ross' Arithmetic was jammed with his young owner's scribblings. The second page was too. The forty-sixth page which was all about subtraction could hardly be identified as such, the twenty problems on the page were so covered with names; addresses, and "I love" notations. Not that Herb's Arithmetic got all the markings. Not by a long sight! The grammar, spelling book and in high school (the two years he attended that institution) the latin text books got the same treatment. It got so no one would lend him a book....knowing it would come back all scribbled up. It was a habit. Like chewing gum....or biting fingernails. His teachers reprimanded....attempts at shaming....were all of no avail.

His mother tried wearing out his nether end with a razor strop. It didn't work. After about the ninety ninth time she had erased marks from the bathroom walls.... the space above the breakfast table.... to say nothing of Father's drak when Herb studied there, she finally gave up in desperation and hid all the pencils. Thereafter all Herb's "homework" was done at school.

X X X

"Name?" Chief Detective Hagan's voice was brusque.

"Howard Jennings."

"Address?"

"1222 Hope Road." No hesitation there, he noted.

"Next.....your name and address?"

"John Smith."

"Oh, yeah?" The Chief's voice was as hard as his manner.

"Yes, sir, that's my name. My Mom liked plain names, I guess." the youth replied, nonchalantly with a grin.

"Yeah," the Chief went on. "Well.....what's your address, and what do you know about the Hamilton robbery?"

"Not a thing, Chief. I don't even know where the Hamilton place is. I just got in town. I'm staying at.....at the Y.M.C.A."

The Chief looked the boys over. They did look pretty honest. That Bradley, always getting mixed up. Just a dumb dick! Oughta been fired long ago!

"O.K. Bradley, take 'em in and lock 'em up awhile."

A few minutes later the veteran detective returned to his chief's office. "I'm going out and check up on these addresses, darned if they sounded on the level to me."

Chief Detective Hagan gazed after him, his head shaking slowly. There was nothing wrong with those boys....just young smart-alecks! Bradley suspected everyone, always.....

X X X

Two hours later Bradley returned, a crestfallen look on his face. He'd made up his mind to quit his job on the force!

"I guess I was all wet, Chief. Jennings lives with his mother. I looked the dump over. No jewelry around there. And Smith's registered at the Y all right, J. Smith —they let me assemble room."

"I thought you were mistaken, Bradley. Better let those boys go and follow up Harvey's tip," his superior advised, resuming his work.

The last was a thrust, Bradley knew. That new guy, Harvey, seemed to be the Chief's pet. Gosh! He'd sure thought he had the right birds.....those kids acted so queer when he picked them up.

Bradley stepped into the jail.

"Say, you, when do we get outa here?" he was greeted by young Jennings. "Pick up a couple o' mugs for walkin' around and let 'em rot in jail when you ain't got nothin' on em."

"How about callin' up my girl?" the self-styled John Smith asked.

"Sure.....go ahead." Bradley agreed and led the prisoner down the corridor and into the hall to the telephone placed by the door. He left the young fellow alone, staying within earshot.

"Hunnigh! What be a fast worker.....she's arrived in town....had only one change of clothes.....but still had a girl here, already!" He listened closely to the one-sided conversation. It had taken quite awhile to get connections, but finally he heard the fellow's voice.

"Betty? Listen, this is—John. Well say, they got Howard and me locked up...what? Oh! darned if we know what for....Yeah! Well, they're going to let us out before tonight.....so I'll see you.....sure, same place. Bye, Sugar....."

Bradley locked him up again and soon left the building.

X X X

"Did you turn those two kids loose?"

"Well..no, I haven't yet, Chief. I—I wanted to do a little more investigating."

The Chief looked at his subordinate with an exasperated expression. His ruddy face grew a shade redder. He growled:

"Hope you're satisfied.....and ready to release those kids. Harvey was in a few minutes ago.....he's about got the right birds tracked down.....got 'em located down in a speakie."

"Oh, yea?" Bradley was rarely in a mood to address his chief thus. "I'm sorry Harvey is wasting his time....but here are Mrs. Hamilton's beloved jew-els already found." He handed the jewelry which he had taken from an inside pocket, to the chief.

Sure enough.....there was the emerald dinner ring....the sapphire....the double-set diamond that Mrs. Hamilton had mourned so loudly, the emerald bracelet.....the diamonded studded watch bracelet and the cameo.

"You win," the chief smiled. But where's the thief?"

"Oh! He's safe enough. "He's sitting in your little cooler all ready to be turned loose....Hello Rose, is Mr. John Smith?"

Bradley motioned to his chief to follow. He took him out into the hall and over to the telephone. On the pad beside the instrument they read scribblings that repeated "John Smith", "Herb Ross," "Betty" and enough phone numbers to solve the Hamilton or almost any other robbery.

In fact, the casual chirography made the immediate vicinity of the police phone look like a leaf from any of Herbert's old school books. Thus the case proved just a cinch for Ol' Sleuth Bradley—scribblin' expert.

BUILDING FIGURES

There have been many indications within that last few months that business conditions are on the upgrade—that the first few steps have been taken up the first few steps have been taken up the hill on which the great tobogan ride of 1929 was staged. It would be an exaggeration to say that boom times are just around the corner, but all the signs and portents are that the crisis is over and that business will be noted. The daily improvement will be noted. The daily improvement will be noted. The building trades serve as a barometer and in this connection the August survey of construction contracts made by MacLean Building Reports, Limited, is interesting. This reveals that estimated values were in excess of those of June and July. The province of Quebec was in the van of this upswing, but August contracts being valued at $6,857,800, or 54.1 per cent. of the commitments for the whole Dominion. Ontario was in the runner-up position with 26.5 per cent. valued at $3,360,200. The other figures are given as follows: Maritime Provinces, $961,300 or 7.6 per cent; prairie provinces, $830,200, or 6.5 per cent., and British Columbia, $679,000, 4/5 5.3 per cent. It is set forth that in each of engineering contracts to the value of $39,666,400 have been awarded in Canada and that there have been commitments of $33,019,805 for business buildings. The identical proportion represents 20.7 per cent, or $20,685,300, and industrial as shown to have been 6.6 per cent., or $6,- 618,200. Quebec and Ontario are practically on a parity in the percentage column for the year to date. The eastern province has placed 38 per cent. of all contracts awarded in the Dominion up to the end of August and Ontario 37.6. The figures actually were $38,004,700 and $37,- 542,200 respectively. The prairies provinces report 11 per cent., valued at $11,- 008,800; the Maritimes, 7.6 per cent., or $7,597,300, and British Columbia, 5.4 per cent., or $5,836,700. The figures, while far below those of normal years, clearly indicate, expert students of them declare, that Canada's construction trade is on the way back.—Hamilton Spectator.

TAX-FREE HOMES

What is described as a "valuable suggestion to stimulate building in Canada" has been submitted to us for comment. The proposal comes from a plumbing supplies manufacturer in another city of Ontario and receives the endorsation of a trade journal devoted to the interests of that industry. It would undoubtedly appeal equally strongly to all connected with the building trades, contractors, plasterers, electricians, steamfitters, carpenters, bricklayers, etc., and first furnishers of the necessary materials to them, as well as the manufacturers of supplies. In times like these, when business is dull, when few homes are being built and when there is so great need of increasing employment opportunities, no one would wish to throw cold water on any scheme which promises to relieve conditions; but this particular plan might conceivably do more harm than good, and it certainly waves a red flag in front of existing house-owners. Briefly, what is suggested is this: The municipalities are asked to remit taxes for a period of five years on new houses erected under the plan, up to the value of $4,000. Likewise, taxes on home improvements—renovations, additions, repairs, etc.—would be remitted for a similar period as an inducement to put such work in hand immediately, and so speed up the economic recovery. That is as recognized as having now definitely started.

If a precedent for such a policy is required the housing of industries is offered to. The practice of selling civic land at low prices to secure new industries, the remission or reduction of taxation on them for a term of years and other concessions made with this object in view, are called as examples of what is frequently done for industry, but seldom or never done for private residents. But the two cases are hardly comparable; moreover, the bonusing system is out of favor, locally, at least. A still stronger objection is that residents who have already purchased their homes, many at enhanced prices, are required to pay onerous taxes, without any hope of relief. They would not take kindly to the idea of tax-free buildings for the lucky few. There is no lack of precedent for legislation in Hamilton and the greatest difficulty is disposing of property. What chance would the taxed house have in the market in competition with these privileged exempted buildings? It is suggested that the city would lose nothing by adopting the scheme, in that it would still assess the property as vacant land; and by effecting a reduction in municipal relief costs it would, it is argued, realize a considerable saving in public expenditures. But vacant land is a potential revenue-producer. When times are prosperous it is built upon and the municipality collects the taxes. The depression will not last forever, and in all probability will not last much longer. But the necessity for searching around for sources of taxation will remain for many years to come, under the best of conditions. Arguments can be produced in favor of single-tax methods, but partial application of the principle can only work hardship for the many.—Hamilton Spectator.

AWAY WITH CARE!

By Aline Michaelis

Away with care! Old folly's reign is done,
Old useless thoughts of woe!
With faces lifted up to greet the sun,
Brave-hearted, let us go!

Too long have anxious hearts been bowed by grief,
When, had they turned from pain,
Their time for weeping would have been as brief
As April hours of rain.

Away with care! There is new bliss each morn
For him who, seeking, goes
Unfettered by old memories forlorn,
Unvexed by by-gone woes.

There is a portent in the dawn of day
That hints of things sublime,
For when the night's dark veils are drawn away
Earth seems untouched by time.

The soul, as well, should fling its cares aside,
Should go in victory
With no regrets for any gifts denied,
Unfettered, proud and free!

FORTY-FOUR YEAR OLD STEAMER Observation, plying around New York, celebrated her last trip one morning recently with a passenger list of one hundred and fifty or more workingmen en route to work on a contract on Kliser Island opposite New York city. The boiler blew up and about fifty lives were lost while many were injured. The boat and boilers had been inspected and passed this year by official inspectors. This calamity recalls the burning of the steamer General Slocum about twenty-eight years ago in this same locality. The General Slocum, running as an excursion boat, was overloaded, caught fire and burned to the waters-edge near Hell's Gate known as "Hellgate's", a narrow turbulent channel. Over one thousand lives were lost, sacrificed to the graft practiced by life preservers were found to be stuffed with sawdust and useless for life saving. The steamer's safety hose was found to be rotten and every device on the boat was a sham. The General Slocum had been inspected from stem to stern and from keel to smokestack and certified by officials and seaworthy. Over one thousand lives was the price of that piece of defective inspection.

WORLD'S BASEBALL SERIOUS, as Ring Lardner would say, will soon be blatting through a million radios (begin September 28 in New York City) and a few million baseball fans will be enjoying their annual hysterical feast of balls and strikes from the bleachers, grandstand and radio room. Baseball is a grand old game, and as the national game of the United States is entitled to front rank in professional sport. Professional baseball is well organized business, gives good entertainment, and is the only organized business which can command the newspaper space it does, free for free advertising and the spending of immense sums of money to cover training camps and games in and out of town. Professional baseball would not last long without the boosting it gets from clever baseball writers and the indulgence of newspaper owners and shareholders, but it is doubtful if this assistance is appreciated. Professional pugilism and wrestling also owes popularity largely to the free newspaper boosting it receives, amounting almost to a business scandal that the sports promoters should have so much business acumen and the newspaper proprietors so little. Million dollar gates have been reduced with little or no paid newspaper advertising but plenty free sports writer boosts, kidding the public and building up expectation and interest of readers even to the extent of betting on the newspaper tips with the usual result that the Big Business Betters collected on the short and because the favorite stubbed a toe, or stopped to pick up a bank roll and the psychological moment. Oh, it's a great game but there are signs that the and will insist on getting a slice of the business they create for the sport promoters in the future.

DIET FOR USE BY SUFFERERS FROM KIDNEYS

No One Should Make Diagnosis of His Own Case

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

To be sure no one should make a diagnosis of his own condition especially when it concerns so serious a case as kidney disorder. Albumen in the urine is a sign of nephritis, the technical name for kidney disease. Swollen ankles and shins and puffy eyes—sometimes likewise may go with the condition. Nevertheless, these signs may be due to some heart impairment rather than to kidney disturbance. Then again, both the heart and the kidneys may be affected.

If the patient has been told that he is suffering from chronic kidney disease, the doctor, undoubtedly, has also told him that his protein intake must be reduced, likewise salts, and probably also water.

The problem of varying the diet to meet such requirements is often a puzzling one. Therefore the following menus are given. Theodosius Dr. Louis E. Bisch, has found them useful for those with chronic nephritis, plus edema.

HAITI ISLAND SETTING FOR THE "WHITE ZOMBIE"

"White Zombie," one of the earliest and most fantastic stories ever filmed, and the first talkie that was its premiere at the Belle tonight and Belleville crowd fans will thus learn, hundreds of them for the first time, of the occult practices in Haiti. In which the processes of recovery dead bodies are dug from their graves and put to work as slaves.

Rumors have been reaching us for years of these sinister practices, and one of the first films to throw light is thrown upon them by keen presentation. The story of "White Zombie" is based upon personal observation in Haiti by American writers and research workers and, fantastic as it sounds, its entire substance is based upon fact.

Lugosi Starred

Bela Lugosi who came into prominence in this country with his part in the screen version of Count Dracula in "Dracula" has the principal role in "White Zombie" and his portrayal even surpasses that of the part of a sinister fiend who delights in the raising of dead bodies in order to mak his sugar cane fields and his fields. He also has one of the Zombies for his personal bodyguard. a bodyguard which performs heinous crimes as the behest of their hypnotic slaver-ops.

Madge Bellamy who retired from the screen ten years ago in order to devote her time to stage work and who has been comeback in the principal female role. Joseph Cawthorn also plays one of the principal roles, as do Johnny Harron, Robert Fraser, and Brandon Hurst.

Photography Beautiful

The settings and photography of "White Zombie" are among the finest ever done for the screen. They include for example, a scene in the Haiti mountains which is one of the most beautiful in the city. history of motion pictures. This, and the tremendous mystery it all makes an unusually striking background for this weird story.

The story tells of a young American couple who are married and sail for a powerful drug which relegates her to the menial place of a sleepwalker She remains in this state for several weeks, and it is only after all but superhuman efforts on the part of her husband and friends that she is restored to her former self.

Barbara Stanwyck and George Brent are co-starred in the new season Warner Brothers hit, "The Purchase Price." The Football thriller mystery classic, "70,000 Witnesses," starring Phillips Holmes, Thelma Todd, Charlie Ruggles and John Mack Brown, will be presented on the same program, making perhaps the best double program here at the Belle on Sunday and Monday since the inception of this popular policy.

PLANE LONG OVERDUE AT CITY OF ROME

"American Nurse" Had Only Gas For 38 Hrs. of Flight

MAY BE LOST

Should Have Struck French Coast—All Lights Burning

ROME, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Italian air officials expressed apprehension early today in the absence of any reports of the trans-Atlantic plane American Nurse, after she had been out of New York for 38 hours.

The Commandante di Ciampino Airport was that the ship had gas for 38 hours and should arrive in Rome within that time. The air distance between Rome and New York is 4,000 miles, and previous reports on the American Nurse indicated that she was making a little less than 100 miles an hour.

An enlarged full moon occurred early last evening, making the route of the fliers over the Mediterranean extremely dark, and it was believed possible they may have lost their way.

Sighting of the plane would be extremely difficult in this dark sea, since the plane's lack of radio does not permit radio contact, eliminated any method that could have involved the American Nurse save the sighting of an airplane over Sardinia flying low in the direction of Rome. Italian time was 6 p.m. (12 p.m. Eastern Standard Time).

Report Hoppedish

The report was dispelled by the Associated Press when Carabinieri stationed on three of the island's headlining provinces said nothing had been seen or heard of the plane at 1.45 a.m. (7 p.m. Eastern Standard Time last night).

This means that the last sighting of the plane probably was over the Inter France, which reported she had sighted a plane at 10.45 p.m. (Greenwich time (11.50 a.m. E.S.T.) Crossing this (11.50 a.m. E.S.T.) flying eastward at 40.36 north latitude and 17.38 west longitude, or 400 miles south west of Cape Finisterre, Ireland.

This would indicate that the American should be down 2,000 miles at 4,300 between New York and Rome in 39 hours 45 minutes or a little less than 100 miles an hour.

If she kept that course she should have struck the French coast in the neighborhood of Bordeaux around nightfall.

Colonel Balbo ordered extra illumination at all airports along the route the fliers were expected to follow. He decided that because of superior lighting facilities at Ciampino Airport, it would make sense, a military report, would make better landing place than the large Littorio field, and so ordered that Littorio be kept dark in order that the fliers might make no mistakes.

200 Homeless, Destitute As Relief Trains Rush Aid to Stricken Village

Flames Wipe Out Half of Limbering Settlement

LOSS $500,000

Likely Sprague Will Become Just Another "Ghost Town"

George Brent and Bitbara Stanwyck in "The Purchase Price," opening at Bells Theatre, Saturday.

Sprague, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)—Bewildered in the midst of blackened, ruins, after a fire swept homes, a demolished business section, citizens of Sprague—more than half of them homeless—wondered today if this little lumbering settlement on the Canadian Pacific Railway was doomed to become Northern Ontario's newest "ghost town."

Flames wiped out half the village yesterday after getting a running start in one of the J. J. McFadden Lumber Company's yards. More than thirty homes in the south side of the village were destroyed, and the Ontario Hydro-Electric power unit, a big planing mill and a combination fire-fighters from the district checked the blazing panic.

Damaged to the extent of at least $500,000 homes, stores, hotel and boarding house ruins, Sprague may not be rebuilt, its near-destitute citizens learned by rumor today. All property is owned by the McFadden Interests, whose mills gave employment to virtually all the male population.

200 Homeless

Anxious to see that 200 homeless men, women and children are given food and shelter after himself leading yesterday's fight against the flames, J. J. McFadden, head of the lumbering firm, was unconcerned with immediate relief requirements to discuss the town's future.

But other lumber men believed Sprague, so quickly laid waste, would be deserted in a short time. The lumber business in this district, they said, was on the wane and possibility of the McFadden Co. rebuilding homes and stores they considered remote. Nearby Cutler, once a thriving lumbering town, has been deserted, except for Indians, for several years.

While the town's 300 men spent a weary night guarding the still smoking ruins, stamping out sparks as they appeared in the debris, food and clothing was collected for by neighbors. Mr. McFadden's home was among the number destroyed, and was turned over to the homeless.

Slept in Bed Cars

The little sleep obtained by the men and women was in box cars. Today relief plans were carried forward under direction of the lumber company president and Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health, who was at Blind River, only 12 miles away. W. H. Price, Assistant General and acting Premier, wired Dr. Robb to take full charge and do whatever he considered necessary to ensure there would be no distress following the blaze.

O. S. D. PUPILS NOW ON WAY

Largest Registration in History of School is Noted

Collected from points all over the Dominion of Canada—from as far west as Vancouver, to New Brunswick, on the east, pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf, who are about to begin their fall term are now enroute to the school, situated just a short distance west of this city. They are accompanied by nurses and teachers of the school, who pick up the children as they go.

It is an unforgettable sight to see the afflicted children, who are now reaching Belleville, talking excitedly over the summer's happenings among themselves, although brought cooped in little knots at each stop-over station and hold lengthy conversations with each other, even in a whisper is heard. Each word, however, is framed by the deaf mutes' hands and the motion is plainly discernible. So far the largest class has advanced with the new system of lip reading taught in the Ontario School, that is only occasional beginners, who revert to the "finger system" at times. All the pupils at present assigned on the movement of each coach, in a standstill, what is being said. To those, who see them for the first time on the city from points as far away as Sudbury and Cobalt, the sight is very strange.

According to the staff and executive of the school, registrations have never been so heavy as they are this year. So many applications have been received at the school by new pupils, that arrangements, with consequent overcrowding, is anticipated.

Work on the enlargement of the school is said by those who have been in contact with the plans made by the Provincial Department of Education, is in the final stages of preparation. It is confidentially expected by local authorities, that some of the work will be started in the near future.

REMARKS WILL BE REVIEWED

Judge L. St. G. Stubbs Speaks Mind From Bench

Winnipeg, Sept. 15 (CP)— The Federal Government today has been asked to review remarks from the bench made by His Honor Judge L. St. G. Stubbs. Statements made by the Judge a few days ago in which he said ten days were slightly resented by Crown law officers and the courts.

The cases under review concern the acquittal of William Strelka and John Shatsko to three months in jail for robbery. In passing sentence the Judge charged that "when the school boards shut off full classes they are making criminals and there is a criminal responsibility upon them. We expect a lot more of this sort of thing unless parents are put in the work or allowed to enter educational institutions."

In the second case an accountant was charged with theft from his employer to more than $2,000. In giving his decision Judge Stubbs referred to the case and described himself as a sore considerably larger, he said.

"If I were to find this man guilty and imprison him the Court of Appeal has held a term of 18 months is the proper sentence for this type of offence—what would be the proper sentence for this man? The prisoner was acquitted.

BATTLE ROYAL BETWEEN TWO BIG REPTILES

London, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP)— A battle royal between a rapacious 12½-year-old python and a much younger reptile caused much consternation in the alleyway of the Western Pair. When Major Wellner, the snakes owner, arrived on the scene, he found Goliath, the ancient python and another of the big reptiles fastened firmly to each others necks. Their 30-foot bodies were entwined around one another, and their tails were lashing furiously at everything in sight.

With great difficulty Wellner disengaged the battlers and they are now housed in separate compartments.

Expenditures Decrease by Four Millions in Ten Months

Objective of $4,500,000 For Fiscal Year Likely

Toronto, Sept. 15 (CP)— Decrease in departmental expenditures of the Ontario Government in the first months of the present fiscal year amount to $4,101,849, Hon. E. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, has revealed. The government, he said, would probably have obtained its objective of saving $4,500,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

Provincial revenues have shown a drastic decline, Mr. Dunlop stated, with the proceeds of motor vehicle license fees, gasoline tax and the recently-imposed wine tax.

The provincial treasurer expects a decrease in $1,250,000 in succession duties; $2,000,000 in Liquor Control Board earnings and $3,000,000 for the Lands and Forestry Department.

Only two departments, the Attorney General's and Northern Development, show an increase in ordinary expenditure. The former of $187,584 in the Northern Development Department is accounted for by an increase in expenditure of northcountry roads and bridges, and the latter's expenditure being partially in the nature of unemployment relief work.

No More Piles

How to End Terrible Agony Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of Pile sufferers do not know that the cause of Piles is usually poor blood circulation or blood in the lower bowel.

That is the reason with most Piles—the real reason why salves and suppositories do not give permanent relief, why cutting does not remove the cause.

Your itching, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you actually restore the cause — and not one minute before. Ritez-Hemoid stimulates the flow of rich internal medicine should be used. Ritez-Hemoid is recommended by Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, dries out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts.

HEM-ROID tablets have an almost unbelievable record of success. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when J. S. McKeown and druggists everywhere invite you to try HEM-ROID with a guarantee of money-back if it does not end those Piles, no matter how stubborn the case!

FARMERS HOLD WHEAT BACK

Selling Only Enough to Satisfy Debts Contracted

Calgary, Sept. 15.—Dissatisfied with the present price of wheat, Alberta farmers are holding their product off the market selling only when money is required to pay debts. This was definitely announced by the Alberta Wheat Pool today.

It was declared by the Pool this week was not in the nature of a strike, but started by the farmers in an effort to obtain what they consider a fair price for their product. At present they receive an average price of 28 cents per bushel, No. 1 Northern.

It was unknown at what figure the farmers would start marketing their wheat, but they do refuse to sell until they can obtain a price that will cover the cost of production and return a fair profit.

Alberta's wheat crop this year is expected to be around 160,000,000 bushels. The farmers will be unable to hold any great amount of this because of insufficient storage facilities.

SPRAGUE WILL BE REBUILT THIS SEASON

Mill Untouched By Fire Which Levels Entire Village

TAKES CHARGE

J. J. McFadden, Owner of Lumber Co., Takes Personal Charge

Sprague, Ont., Sept. 15 (CP) — This lumber town, almost completely destroyed yesterday by fire, will be rebuilt, J. J. McFadden, president of the McFadden Lumber Co., in which the fire started, told the Canadian Press today.

"Our mill is untouched and it is our plan to resume operations at least next season if not this fall," McFadden said.

Damage in yesterday's fire which rendered 300 persons homeless was estimated at $500,000.

Premier Bennett, General Charges

McFadden took personal charge of efforts to relieve distress among those whose homes were destroyed yesterday.

He was expecting the arrival of Hon. J. M. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health, from Blind River today and says steps the government may think necessary for the situation.

Mr. Robb received authority to make charge here from Hon. W. H. Price, Ontario Attorney General and acting Premier.

McFadden said the village might have to be rebuilt before his company could resume operations. It was too early he added, to say what work would be done or when it would be started.

Enough logs were left undamaged by the fire, he said, to keep the mill busy all winter, McFadden continued. He said the mill would be done in the bush during the winter.

Fire was still smouldering in the ruins today but there seemed little likelihood it would break out again.

ATTEMPT TO REGAIN LOSS

N. Y. Board Sold Off But Recovered to Show Advance

New York, Sept. 15.—The stock market again attempted to regain its balance today, and managed to recover moderately, although prices fluctuated rather nervously.

The market sold off moderately in the first hour; recovered to show advance of 1 to 2 points in the second and third hours, but fell back somewhat in the last hour.

Union Pacific, after going up 4 points, lost most of its gain in the early afternoon. Gains of 1 1-2 to U. S. Steel and Eastman Kodak. American Telephone were lost, and there were gains of fractions of a point or so from the best levels recorded. The sales were getting up 3 to 3 points had included New York Central, Case, International Harvester, Allied Chemical, Dupont, American Can and Eastman Kodak.

While signs of Autumn improvement in business continued to appear in corporate and trade news, the fact the best levels of Autumn business should be reached within the next month or two has resulted in the market begin to look ahead and see how far the betterment goes.

NATURALIST BETS ON SNAKE TO WIN

Battle Between Reptile and Spider is in the Twenty-Fifth Day

ST. CHARLES, Ill., Sept. 15.—Science is predicting victory for the common black spider in its long fight with the ten inch garter snake around which it spun its web twenty-four days ago.

Suspended in the air, with its head enmeshed in a strong silked rope, the snake began its twenty-fifth day of struggle to disengage itself from the web. Naturalists at the Museum of the Field Museum of Natural History, here was no chance to escape.

Under a magnifying glass the reptile was seen to be as securely bound as though it were held in chains of iron, but the spider is not content to let out its partisans. Two fashionably dressed females, among the crowd attracted to the scene of the fight, screamed yesterday as they watched the spider toss additional silken loops around the head of its victim.

SOMERVILLE 2 UP ON BLANEY

Had to Shoot Sub Par Golf to Attain Lead

Five Farms' Course, Baltimore Country Club, Sept. 15.—Jesse Guilford, living up to his long-standing reputation as the "Boston Bingo Gun", led Chick Evans of Chicago 1 up, in a close battle between two former champions, after 18 holes of their scheduled quarter-final match in the United States Amateur Golf Championship today.

Ross Somerville, former Canadian Champion, gained a 2 up lead over Bill Blaney of Toronto in the sectional match featured by sub-par golf. Somerville shot a 35-37-72, two under par, while Blaney posted 73.

Francis Ouimet of Boston, defending champion, making an uphill fight after being 3 down at the tenth, finished the morning 1 up all square with Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati, youthful medalist.

In the fourth match Chick Johnny Goodman of Omaha came back with a rush to tie Lawson with Maurice McCarthy Jr., of New York.

Sandy Somerville's round was the feature of the morning's play. He smashed par by one stroke with his sparkling 68, one under the record of 69 set by John Gaston of Cincinnati, medalist, in the qualifying round.

MANCHUKUO IS NOW A STATE

Born of Military Action in Recent War With China

Changchun, Sept. 15 (AP)— The state of Manchukuo, inaugurated by the world's commonwealths and born of the successful military campaign of the Japanese army in Manchuria last fall, was recognized officially by Japan today.

At a drab and listless ceremony in the old Japanese Administration building here, in the presence of Manchukuo officials and their Japanese advisers, Cheng Hsiao-Hsu, premier of Manchukuo, proclaimed Yokoyama Muto, special envoy of the Japanese Mikado, signed their names, using a tiny brush instead of a pen.

The treaty calls for a defensive alliance between the two states and marks the first recognition of the new state by any foreign power. The recognition was hastened by Japan so it could be incorporated before the League of Nations publishes its decision on the Japanese military occupation in Manchuria, following the report of the league's inquiry commission which is now on its way to Geneva.

The text of the treaty includes these provisions:

1. Japan agrees shall confirm and respect, insofar as no agreement to the contrary shall be made between Japan and Manchukuo in the future, all rights and interests possessed by Japan, or her subjects within the territory of Manchukuo by virtue of the Sino-Japanese treaties, agreements or other arrangements, or Sino-Japanese contracts, private as well as public.

2. Japan and Manchukuo, recognizing that any threat to the safety of either of the high contracting parties to locate her parties constitutes at the same time a threat to the safety of the other, agree to co-operate in the maintenance of their common security, it being understood that such Japanese forces as may be necessary for the purpose shall be stationed in Manchukuo.

Letters to The Editor

Belleville, Sept. 14, 1932

Dear Sir:

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

There seems to be a great deal of confusion in the minds of parents of children attending the Collegiate how one can obtain a pass. They are required to pay. Perhaps the chairman of the Board of Education will let us know what this money is required for. I understand the pupils have been informed that unless this is paid they will not be allowed to continue in their classes. With over one thousand dollars collected from pupils would be over one thousand dollars collected. Surely with such a sum of money in this school we should have a report to the public as to its expenditure! I am told by parents there are many children attending Collegiate whose parents are out of work and many more where the amount of money coming in is hardly enough to pay the actual necessities. To these the addition of another dollar means quite a hardship. I hope the chairman of the School Board will inform us why the money is required, who is responsible for its expenditure, and if any report of receipts and expenditures are received by the Board. As I have already stated, I am a delegate, I will content myself by signing myself

ENQUIRING PARENT.

Education Vital to Individual And Also to Society at Large

Mgr. Nicholson, Speaker at First Meeting of Knights in Fall

Belleville Council, 1008, Knights of Columbus, held their first regular meeting in their club rooms Tuesday night. After the routine business of the Council had been concluded, Grand Knight Francis Cowgan handed over the gavel to Bro. Frank Holden, Assistant Chaplain.

Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., was called upon to address the meeting. Expressing his pleasure at the large attendance at the inaugural meeting which he said was indicative of the interest of the members, the speaker referred to the fiftieth anniversary of the Order, which was commemorated this year. It was marked by the presentation of a statue of Cardinal Gibbons, patriot and churchman, to the Order in the people of the United States. This gift was accepted on their behalf by President Hoover. The members of the Knights of Columbus were endowed by their Head, he said, to translate into action their motto: "For God and Country."

The speaker also paid an eulogy to Mr. A. E. Collins on his election to the high office of State Deputy and felt that the honour was very worthily conferred on one who had distinguished himself not only as a Knight of Columbus but also as a citizen.

Children's Problems Vital

Monsignor Nicholson commended the action of the local Council in providing prizes for competition among the children of St. Michael's Academy. This was a full instance of their interest in a problem that is vital not only to the individual but also to society. It is important to the individual for education shapes his destiny hereafter. The most momentous work upon which society can be engaged at any given time is the education of its children.

A. E. Coulin, ... attends first fall meeting of Knights of Columbus.

"There is an instinct within us that prompts us to work not alone for the present but for the future —not alone for our own selves," the speaker added, "but for the community of which we form a part.

Men may pursue their own selfish ends but in the pursuit of them they are saved from the narrowness that self-aimless would bring with it a higher instinct within them, that tells them that there are higher aims than their own, that they add their aims are not meant for a greater end still that, in the designs of God a man's own happiness is best attained by such a seeking as will provide for the greater well-being of the world of which the individual is a solitary member. In fact, the two ideals—the ideal and the highest happiness as well as the highest perfection is wrought out by obedience to the greatest of commands, "Thou Shalt Love the Lord Thy God with Thy whole heart and Thy Neighbor as Thyself."

Education Vital

It is the working of this law even in the heart of a natural man that counteracts the selfishness of each individual by developing in him an instinct to work not merely for his own future, but also for a future that cannot be his and that he knows cannot be his in this world.

A man has need of shelter from the inclemency of the open heaven—an instinct which will prompt him to build a house that would serve only his immediate needs, but a higher instinct makes him build a habitation that he knows will shall stand as solid as ever when he himself will be mouldered into dust. This universal instinct inculcates a duty to leave the world better than we found it as men place the first beginning of things that we can only attain their perfection when the beginners shall have long been forgotten.

The history of civilization has been the effort, successful or unsuccessful, one generation to leave an inheritance to the generations that are to come after it. The success has always been measured by the effort, the intensity and its enlightenment, to leave not alone a better world to future men, but leave those future men themselves better too.

Where this effort has been made civilization has flourished. In other words the effort for the future must begin at home and home must have had that larger and more spiritual sense that the human heart has instinctively attached to it. It must have meant not alone four walls of wood or stone or brick that afford shelter to the children who will be the future men, but also, and still more, it must have meant the children themselves. Monsignor Nicholson, there be no work in which society can be engaged if it works to increase and perpetuate the advantages it has inherited or acquired more important than the work of education.

State Deputy Speaks

Mr. A. E. Collins, K. C., recently elected State Deputy for the Province of Ontario, was present and spoke briefly on the growth and the aims of the Order.

Organized in 1882, the first 50 years have witnessed a growth probably unparalleled among fraternal organizations.

Notwithstanding the care exercised in the selection of the membership, the Order has gradually grown until today in its 51 jurisdictions from the Canal Zone to the Arctic Circle and from the shores of the Majestic Pacific to the Rock Bound Coast of Newfoundland, may be found well organized Councils to the number of 2585 with a membership of approximately 700,000.

It has been the aim of the Knights of Columbus to combat social unrest and to promote the highest respect for the duly constituted laws of our land. No member can be a true Knight and principles of the Order can conscientiously disobey or flagrantly violate any law of the State.

Membership in the Order is synonymous with good citizenship.

In conclusion the speaker thanked the members for the honour recently conferred upon him and exhorted his hearers to be true to the principles of Knighthood, and loyal to the Flag of our Country, the symbol of righteousness, toleration and Justice.

Recapitalization and Dictatorship of C. N. Contained in Report

tory, that "some other arrangement be made.

The report is understood to be unanimous, signed by Rt. Hon. Lyman P. Duff, chairman of the commission, and all six of his associates.

Arrive at Two Causes

In a 50,000-word analysis of railway conditions in Canada, the commissioners it is understood, arrive at two causes for the present situation. These are, firstly, the shrinkage in traffic volume resulting from the present business depression, and secondly, unjustified and ruinous competition. Only the return of more prosperous times will cure the first condition, the commissioners admit. To remedy the second, that of uncalled-for competition, the board recommends what is virtually a railway dictatorship vested in three men.

This board will be empowered, according to the report, to order economies, including co-operation made. The railways, of course, will have the right to make representations to the board but the influence behind the latter's decisions will be so great, it is presumed, as to make its word almost mandatory.

Elaborate precautions are put forward to keep the board free of every semblance of political influence. Its members will be named for a stated term and no one will be eligible for membership, who, in the past five years, has been either a member of Parliament or a civil servant. The appointment of the chairman is taken out of the Government's hands, and given to one of the leading civil servants of the national administration, the chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners. The latter post is now held by Mr. Justice Fullerton, formerly of the Appeal Court of Manitoba.

It is understood that the report provides that in cases where the board encounters exceptional difficulty in adjudication two additional temporary members may be named by the master of the exchequer court. Again, it is seen, the favor of politics is avoided by giving this power of appointment to an authority other than the government of the day. The present master of the exchequer court is Mr. Justice A. K. MacLean.

Reduce the Directorate

Another step aimed at cleaning politics out of the C.N.R. is the proposal to reduce the number of directors of that railway. "At present, C.N.R. directors are named by the government of the day on a geographical basis, so many in each provinces. Some of them attend only a few directors' meetings a year, they cover for practical purposes being vested in a sub-committee of five or six directors. These directors are rarely railwaymen and are charged at the outstart of any administration. The Duff report suggests a board of a more permanent character, comprising a smaller number of full-time working directors.

Recapitalization of the C.N.R. at 1,800 million dollars is a step which has received no consideration in Ottawa for two years or more. At the time of the appointment of the Hon. T. A. Crerar as its Minister of Railways early in 1930, the King Government agreed with the idea. An election was in the offing, however, and the plan was dropped for practical political reasons. It is what extent the Liberal Government intended to reduce the capitalization never became known.

No one in Ottawa is under any delusion that the people of Canada ever will see a dime of the capitalization which it is now proposed to wipe out. This money largely represents the huge loans and guarantees given by previous governments to the predecessors of the C.N.R., the old privately-owned roads which built up to the wall, had to be taken over by the war-time Union Government and were finally merged as the present Canadian National. It is considerable that the C.N.R. ever will earn enough money to pay the interest on these bonds.

In fact, the Commission itself does not expect that, under prevailing business conditions, the C.N.R. will pay the carrying charges on even the reduced capitalization. It urges, however, that ruthless economy be practised toward that end. The report is understood to instruct that where services do not pay, they are to be cut out, first consideration being given not to public convenience, but to the strain of the present financial burden on the taxpayers of the Dominion.

Disposal if Test Fails

A hint that the C.N.R. be disposed of by the government if the economy measures now suggested should fail to make it a paying proposition, is contained in the report. This intimation is in the form of a suggestion to the Government that the public virtually be challenged to support the C.N.R.'s economy program for five years. If at the end of that term, the public is of the opinion that the enforced economy the abolition of luxury services and other such steps are not worth while,—in other words, the road cannot be made to pay even on that basis and with a reduced capital—the commission suggests that the government then seek other means of solving the problem.

Naturally, the only way out in this eventuality would be to sell the railway to private interests. Such a step, it may well be assumed, would be approached by any government with the greatest caution.

There is a substantial public opinion in this country which, it would seem, favors the continuance of the C.N.R. system under public ownership, regardless of the charge on the taxpayer. This view widely held, particularly in the West, springs from memories of the days long ago when the C.P.R. had a monopoly of transportation in the prairies.

The Duff commission, however, puts forward this suggestion, it is understood, in the sincere belief that the C.N.R. question be brought to a head. The commission's view in a word is said to be that if the business now suggested fail to make the C.N.R. a paying proposition there is no hope for anything but an indefinitely continued loss.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"I brought up my two little sisters after my mother died," he said to Mary Faith, heaping her plate with baked ham and potatoes, and sliced fresh tomatoes in sage jelly. "There ain't much I don't know about children's babies. Just remember that, in case you ever need any help with this precious baby."

Mary Faith smiled at her happiness. She would never need help with the baby. She was sure of that, she told herself, and not until long after Ward did she realize that she had tucked Mrs. Purnell's words into those crannies of her mind that open somewhere of their own accord, be was not in sight, and then was no automobile, either. Nothing but a cold tail-light, a block or so out of sight at the other end of the street. A second after she started sight of

"But that must have been Kim," she thought. "And that must have been his car. What on earth was he doing here?"

The wonder of the thing had nearly driven her mind before she was gone. It couldn't, have been Kim, she decided. Kim was at Stony Creek only miles away. The man she had seen had seemed like Kim in his build, in his height and his white suit.

She fled to bed, and silent when she opened the front door. She switched on the light in the hall and sat with the sleeping baby in her arms. No, Kim had not been there. There were no cigarette stubs in the ash-trays in the sitting room.

Mary Faith wheeled the baby's bassinet into Mrs. Parrell's bedroom in the lakeside cottage on the flat, and then got into her own bed, talking with her a library book call-ed "A Philosopher Looks at Life."

She took a serious interest in books from the library every now and then. She wanted to know about things—to be able to talk intelligently—to educate herself.

"Kim's college-bred," she had often told herself, "and I'm not. He's a lawyer and he'll keep on to keep pace with him. I mustn't let up in the work, and I must get more into a mere housekeeper and nobody."

There would come Settings, she figured, when Kim and she would have friends who were above the Maldons and their set. And when that time came she would be ready for it. She would be a wife that any man could be proud of.

She sat up on the top shelf of the pantry, and had a good smoke. "Exquisite," and even when she and Kim were alone, she served their simple meals as beautifully as a trained waitress could have served them.

"Some day," she often thought as she went about her work, "the Mc-Maldons are going to ask us to their lodges or dinner, and we'll have to figure for dinner, and I'm going to know just how to do everything correctly."

CHAPTER XXXIV

She took extreme care of herself. She had never let herself grow careless about her appearance as so many young wives do when the babies start coming and the household cares increase. Every night before she went to bed she brushed her dark hair with a hundred strokes of her hair-brush. She carefully manicured her nails, and she always saw to it that her clothes were spotless.

She was propped up among the snowy pillows of her bed, deep in the second chapter of her book, when she heard Kim unlock the front door of the flat and come down the little hallway to the bed-room.

After a year and eight months of married life, her heart still beat faster at the sound of his footsteps. Lately she never knew what mood he would be in when he stepped into the flat. The night before he had had hardly a word for her, and this morning he had forgotten to kiss her when he left. She knew she had been thinking of it all day, telling herself that doubtless he was worried about something at the office.

As he came through the doorway now, she smiled up at him and held out a hand. His own fell slackly away from hers as soon as he had touched it "quick!" he asked hopelessly.

"Of course, I'm awake, Kim." She closed her book and laid it on the bedside table. "I want to hear all about the glen Kane. I've never been to one, and I've been wondering if they're anything like corn roasts. What do they do? Build big fires on the beach and fry supper there?"

Kim turned his back to her, and began to take off his necktie.

"Yeah, that's the way they do it," he answered.

He took off his coat and Mary Faith got out of bed to hang it over the back of the chair. Then he took in the clothes closet and handed them to her. She folded them and put on him as if she were his servant.

"It was sure I saw you tonight," she said presently, by way of making conversation. "I felt honestly sure. You were busy up to Mrs. Puck-eli's and had dinner there, didn't you? I'm glad you know that I saw you come out of the drug store."

He swung around and looked at her. "Oh, you're crazy!" he said roughly. "I wish to hell you would cross-questioning me about the glen and to be asleep when he returned, so that he would have no opportunity to tell her any more of his elaborate and unconvincing stories.

She often asked herself what sort of wife would do in her place. Would she make a scene? Burst into tears and tell Kim that he would have to choose between her and the girl? Threaten him with a divorce?

She knew that she never could do any of those things. Thinking about them would be as far as she would go. Thinking and worrying and watching the slow hands of the clock on the night when Kim stayed out until eleven or twelve.

"And I suppose that's what most cases I wanted to know," she thought, "when their husbands find some interest outside their own homes. They shut their eyes to the whole thing, just let it go, and wait for it to come to an end."

And then, without warning, she found herself at the place where she could no longer shut her eyes to Kim's extraordinary behavior.

One Saturday evening, early in November, she had come into the flat at six after a trip to the market for the food for Sunday dinner.

As she fitted her key into the lock, the door was pulled open and Mrs. Farrell's frightened face appeared.

"The baby!" she gasped. "He's in a convulsion—the phone's out of order and nobody's home in the building. I rang all the bells—you call the doctor. I'll get the hot water."

The nearest telephone was in the drug store just around the corner from the flat. Mary Faith rushed to the evil-smelling little booth and gave Dr. Thatcher's number.

While she was waiting for him to answer she heard Kim's voice, his slow deep voice that was like no other voice in the world. He was talking to some one in the pharmacy-section room just behind the telephone booth. And before she had finished telling to Dr. Thatcher, Kim walked past her to the front of the store.

"Good-bye," she heard him call to some one behind the partition, and he a girl's voice answered—

"Good-bye. See you later."

Mary Faith watched him go out. Then she heard the familiar purr of his roadster, the opened the door of the booth and stepped out. Behind her, in the prescription room, she could hear a girl humming. She turned into the drug-starred quietness of River street and turned toward home. Her thoughts were where her heart was at that moment—in the flat with the baby. At the moment jealousy and heart-break and suspicion were trivial things in the face of his illness. The very word "convulsion" was so terrifying.

She reached the door of the apartment building just as Kim came around the corner from the garage.

"Where have you been?" he asked waiting for her to unlock the door.

Some place you were—at the drug store," she told him, with a flash of bitterness.

She ran up the stairs ahead of him and through the flat to the bathroom, where Mrs. Farrell had the baby in a tub of hot water. Both did not think of Kim again until eight o'clock, when the doctor had gone and she was sitting beside the baby's crib, watching his regular breathing.

Then Kim came to the door of the bedroom and beckoned to her. She did not move, merely looked up at him thoughtfully.

"Kim," she said at last, getting up from her chair, "I saw you in the store tonight, and I heard you in the back room, talking to that girl! Kim, how can you be so cheap? Carrying on an affair in the back room of a store—"

"Oh, for goodness' sake!" Kim interrupted, with a groan. They were in the dining-room now, and he sat down beside the table, shaking his head. "What are you trying to do, Mary Faith? Are you trying to confess that I'm in love with a clerk in a store, just because I happened to drop in for a book or a pack of cigarettes every now and then? Is that it? He got up and stood in front of her.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked.

Mary Faith shook her head. "Kim, you were in the back room of that store."

"Well, what if I was? I was sitting back there talking to Jim and that girl clerk. That may be a crime in your eyes, but that's what I was doing."

Jim, Mary Faith knew, was the proprietor of the store. She had not heard his voice as she stood in the telephone booth, but that did not prove that he had not been there, and she wanted to believe that he had been there. She wanted so desperately to believe that nothing was wrong—that Kim had no interest in that pretty blond girl.

"If you've been away from home so much lately," she said, looking up at him.

He raised his thick level eyebrows. "I've been working hard lately, Mary Faith, and you know it. I haven't bothered you with all that I had to go out and stay late occasionally. You understand. I never dreamed that you were torturing yourself like this."

THE PARTY DRESS

By Lois Haines

Kind Mr. Wayland introduced petiously, "you must go out to lunch with me."

"Must I?" Daisy pouted, although she was pleased enough at the invitation. "Can't I have something sent in from the office with his morning dictation transcribed and ready for him to sign, saying the letters on his desk. Jim was sitting by his father's desk, looking unusually embarrassed and ill at ease. He was entering his junior year at college. He had just come home after four years at college. He took in her blonde perfection at a glance, met her deep blue eyes and smiled frankly. Mr. Wayland caught the exchange of glances and performed the introductions with an amused smile.

Jim followed her to the outer office and perched on the edge of her desk. "See here," he said impatiently. "Don't tell me that I've hurt your pride."

Daisy nodded and told him about the dance incident. "But I was only a mere child then and probably you thought me beneath your notice."

Jim made a grimace of mock remorse. "You'll have to give me a chance to square myself." He invited her to a show that evening, and Daisy accepted happily. It was her freshman dream come true, for Jim was gazing across the table at her with undisguised admiration, and all the room with its other diners and the flow of subdued conversation was lost to them entirely.

They both started when a voice spoke to them. "Hello, Jim. Hello, Daisy." But Jim had never noticed her again.

He didn't remember her now, and she wanted to punish him a little. At luncheon she remarked, "You don't remember me, then?"

He looked up from his chop, surprised. "Don't tell me that I've met you before!"

Then Daisy remembered that Jim had been Marigold's sweetheart in high school days, and a little fear caught at her breast. For Marigold, the only daughter of the richest man in town, always had everything she wanted and supposed she must want Jim.

Marigold left on her a cloud that could not be dispelled, although she lit his cigarette and they rose to go.

But that evening the jarring note was gone. The evening was perfect; the thirty dinners with their larger neighbor city, the embassy ball, the theater supper afterward. When Jim said good-night as they stood on the moonlit porch of the cottage where Daisy lived with Aunt Ella and Uncle Tom, Daisy knew that she had lost her heart completely. And Jim? Surely it meant more, the way he said, "You'll let me see you often, Daisy?" And when she had lost her heart completely. And Jim? Surely it meant more, the thing she was

Hungerford School Fair

Tweed, Sept. 15 (Special). — The Annual Rural School Fair of Hungerford Township was held at Tweed Consolidated School grounds on Monday, Sept. 12th. The weather was ideal and a large number of the parents and friends of the children were on hand to view their handiwork.

Some of the classes were well filled and the competition was very keen, while in other classes there were few entries. The parade of the children of Tweed Consolidated School, numbering about 200, was an interesting feature of the programme. After marching twice around the school grounds they formed the Maple Leaf and sang "The Land of the Maple" as a chorus.

The public speaking contest brought only two entries, both girls, Jean Lewarthy and Ana Thompson, who were placed in that order by the judges. An added feature of the programme was the presentation to Enid Connor (of the Entrance Medal donated by the Board of Tweed Consolidated School. This medal is given to the member of the class of the School who obtained the highest standing at the Junior High School Entrance Examination in June. The presentation was made by Mr. S. B. McGee, Chairman of the Board.

Mr. Jos. Wilson, B.S.A., of Stirling, Agricultural Representative for Hastings County, had charge of the fair after the Public Speaking Contest, addressed the audience briefly, explaining the purpose for which the fair is held and the methods by which the award are made.

A programme of sports was run off and ribbons awarded to the successful contestants.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Eyestrain Brings Beauty Woes

Of all foolish mortals the girl or woman who is suffering from impaired vision and refuses to wear glasses because she fancies they would make her look older or plainer is the worst. They wish their eyes to "by feel" with the result that sometimes of the family silver or cups and plates. In a hundred ways, through a faux-idea of vanity, they make for their own inefficiency. Eyes, kept at a tension, trying to do work for which they are not qualified, weaken as they would not if the old eyes were there where they rightly belong, on the job, props to vision.

Ideas about eye glasses have changed; nobody associates them with age. They are so generally used by individuals of all ages—even little children—that they are regarded not at all, certainly not as handicaps to appearance. To refrain from wearing them when they should is self-deception. It is the result of poor reasoning. Because impaired vision that isn't furnished with means of relief can bring along tissue lines that, once well established, very conveniently become quite permanent. Prowns and crowsfeet are no trifling effects.

Under the best of conditions eyes seem to have an easy job. They're working every waking moment. There is constant muscle effort, the lens changing to accommodate vision, exacting work producing eye fatigue. Think then how those soul lanterns are taxed and worked when vision isn't perfect, and what relief comes to them when they have scientific aid. How much more important is their health and well-being than appearance?

Any woman who lip-taps the old typer or who piles needle and thread for long hours should focus

French models of rhum transparent velvet. The sleeves of the fitted jacquette were slitted at the shoulder, forming a wide fold at the elbow and a tight sleeve to the wrist. Turbans of the same material and matching fox shoes completed the ensemble. They wore crysial and onyx drops set in marquisite, the gift of the groom, and carried colonial bouquets of Johanna Hill roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. John F. Sherman, Mr. Arthur O. Smith, brother of the bride, and Mr. Andrew M. Beemer were ushers. During the signing of the register Miss Myrtle Collins sang.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents 742 Gladstone avenue. Mrs. Smith, becomingly gowned in black Alencon lace with small turban of black transparent velvet, and Mrs. MacFarlane, wearing transparent velvet in Bordeaux red with matching hat, received with the bridal party. Both wore corsages of sweetonia and Talisman roses.

Later the couple left on a motor trip to Gaspe, the bride wearing a suit of spice-brown tweed in lovat green trimmed with black fox, a Persian lamb coat fur and one of eil feit and matching accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacFarlane will live in Carlton Rd., Forest Hill.

The ancient Romans regarded silk as a sort of wool that grew on trees.

A new electrical marker is said to write on any material which will conduct electricity.

A dozen eggs weighing 26 ounces contain almost one-third more food than a dozen eggs weighing 20 ounces.

Mildew, which first grows on the surface of cotton or woolen material, later destroys the fibre itself.

Fashion Flashes

Rush into Rushings for rushings are being featured for evening wear as an alternative to fealler trimmings, which many women do not like. A white chiffon frock has a deep hem border of pleated rushings in black, gray and white. The brief jacket, fastening with three stone buttons has deep armholes made of the same rushings and this makes the tiny sleeves.

Easy to Pack is an evening frock of black crepe with a wrapped skirt that fastens at back with three diamante buttons. The decollete at back is formed by crossed straps which extend from the bodice. When unbuttoned the dress folds flat, as the straps button with sparkling buttons to each side of the waistline.

Already out are the first smart coats of autumn. A charming and representative model is of fashion brown cashmere woollen with mink bordering the angular neckline and the wide slee es. There is sawtooth seaming at the shoulders and the inset satin, which starts at the side back and ties in front. The skirt is wrapped and buttoned.

Of the middle ages but not middle-aged in look are reiling in a delightful new hostess gown. It is of black velvet and has a pointed bodice and loose sleeves of angelskin lace in white with a gold metal thread pattern worked in heavily. A belt of d.ulle gold cord marks the high waistline. The skirt is full and graceful.

A dedicated air is worn by many of the new bags with jeweled frames. A stunner by a new method said frames can be detached, leaving a plain silver or black frame underneath, the bag for less important occasions.

New partnerships have been formed in fabric for Autumn clothes. For instance, there is black transparent velvet has a crisp white starched linen. This collar gives the smart wide line at the shoulders .A double-breasted effect is gained by two rows of rhinestone buttons.

EATING ARTICHOKES

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I have had no argument over the following question but a friend in discussion with my wife tonight at dinner in a restaurant where she was served a whole artichoke, with the customary dressing, on a separate plate. Question is, Is it proper to use the fingers in eating an artichoke served whole, without any fork or other piece of cutlery? Would the really fastidious person eat only the heart, using the dinner fork?

Please answer this in your column as I am a consistent and enthusiastic reader.

Male Reader.

In eating the leaves of the artichoke, we use our fingers. One leaf at a time is peeled off, the tip near the stem is dipped in melted butter or other sauce, and the edible portion of the leaf scraped off between the teeth. The remainder of the leaf (the larger portion of the leaf, of course) is laid on the plate.

All the leaves are pulled off, the heart of the artichoke is revealed. This is eaten with the fork or if we prefer, with a small knife and fork. But only the heart is really necessary, a smaller fork than the dinner fork....the luncheon fork, say.

The person who likes artichokes and I can't imagine anyone not liking this delicious vegetable!.... wouldn't dream of not eating the delicate white portion of leaves, for they are quite delicious. They can be eaten with carefulness, so that the fingers will not become unpleasantly soiled. But even with correct service, a finger bowl is always provided for the diner's use. If the finger bowl is not placed it is quite correct to ask the waiter for one.

WHO AND WHOM

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Please advise me which of the following sentences is correct?

1.—Please notify me about the pupils whom she thinks, should be furnished free books.

2.—Please notify me about the pupils whom, she thinks, should be furnished free books.

Is the word who or whom correct.

E.

In this sentence, who is correct. "Please notify me about the pupils who, she thinks, should be furnished free books."

In this the subject of the clause who should be furnished free books. Therefore it should be in the nominative case.

In this kind of sentence, with the "she thinks" interrupting the clause, it is often difficult to figure out the part who should be used as the subject of the interrupted clause, or whether it is the subject or object of the clause. But if you train yourself automatically to leave out the interrupting words, you will see the correct construction of the relative pronoun.

WEARING HIS PIN

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I am a young man, quite old and a young man has asked me to wear his pin. This does not necessarily mean anything more than a friendship does it? Do you think I should accept his offer?

M.

The wearing of the pin doesn't mean anything ....unless the meaning is indicated by the young man when he asks you to wear the pin. Nowadays, this wearing of a pin, fraternity or any other kind, is fairly casual, and it is a symbol of an engagement only when the giver makes it that and the girl accepts it as that.

I don't know what to advise you about accepting this gift offer. I know so well how proud girls are about wearing the pins of their men and I like to have them have the innocent and charming joy of this delight. But, too, I've had so many questions, agonized questions, about the return of pins, that I think I don't turn out so well or circumstances change.... I've been a confused quit cautious.

Mrs. Beechman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.

Keep Child Out of Home Conferences

(By Constance Cameron)

With the whole business world which includes both men and women, going into "conference" interests, it seems queer that a man and woman having children fail to get together in one of the most important conferences of all, but unfortunately disagreeing and bickering before the children and about those children.

It must be most confusing, then again at times most enlightening to the child to observe how the man and woman in power, but it isn't a pretty sight.

Child's Idea of Home

A child's vague idea of home and parents is primarily tied up with unity and consistency. They crave the unity and security, of balance and safety is tragically jeopardized when Mother and Father disagree before the child, particularly when the topic concerns the child himself.

Constructive Effects

Before Baby comes isn't too soon to go into conference and get a working idea of what your main things about child hygiene, moral values and his aspirations for the child to come. To be sure, you can't meet every contingency before the baby arrives, but you can at least lift upon some coordinated plan of action. And you can resolve to have more conferences after the child has come and those to be private ones.

A know of no conference that can bring so much harmony and happiness as a conference between parent conference, without the child as an audience.

Belleville Vics Come From Behind to Grab Second Game In 3rd Round from Orono 6-3

Johnny Kerr Slaps Homer With Two on to Cinch Game

CAMPBELL PITCHES

Came to Relief of Hutton and Did a Swell Job

With extra base hits, the Belleville Victorias won their second game in succession from the fast Orono Ramblers by the score of 6 to 3 at the Fair Grounds, Wednesday afternoon. By virtue of their win the Victorias now are intermediate champions of Eastern and Central Ontario.

After a rather faulty start but lashing the superb pitching of Archie Campbell, their star left hand hurler, the Victorias came from behind to give some 600 fans, the thrill of their lives and eventually win from the fast Orono Cannby-Jrono intermediates. Campbell assumed the mound duties, after the hard hitting Orono nine had scored two runs off the deliveries of T.G. Hutton and were well on the way to continue their march to victory in the third inning when two men on bases and but one man out, Campbell rose to the occasion and when his teammates pulled up even with the visitors in the fourth innings Campbell went to work and let the hard hitting Orono club down with the two small hits in the six and two thirds innings in which he was on the hillock. Smart Fielding Seen.

Sensational fielding was the feature of the game when the Belleville outfielders gave the patrons many a thrill "Stub" Palmer's running catch in the seventh inning was one of the finest plays seen in the local ball park in many years. Palmer ran the powerful mitts to catch Bowman's drive into deep right centre field. "Stubby" Flagler gets the only local to have two hits for his evening, one being a triple and the other a three base clout, which scored the Vics' first tally. Leycett, Caldwell and Moore were the only visitors to have extra base hits to their credit, when Moore and Leycett got a couple and Caldwell collected a triple in the fourth frame. Johnnie Kerr's circuit smash to deep right field in the sixth innings was the hit that spelled defeat for the Orono nine by numerous counters on the game, when Johnnie cuffed the "apple" for four bases.

Set Down Three by Three

Weaks rest started on the hillton for the Vics, but Campbell and Kid's day as the visitors hit his offerings high up and the way with the ultimate result, that he was forced to give way to relief Campbell, the Vics' ace left hander in the middle of the third innings. Campbell, after paying for his beatings, settled away to hurl one of the finest exhibitions ever seen in the local ball yard this year. He had everything to offer by a pitcher, when his curve ball was working perfectly and mixed with his smoke ball and a perfect change of pace, the Tweed southpaw had a comparatively easy time with the Orono hitters down with three small hits. Only two batters reached the innings in which he assumed the mound duties. Bowman was Manager Campby's choice to stop the on-coming Vics and although the slight wind blew pitched wretchlent ball, he was not afforded the support in the field, that was due his efforts on the hilltop.

How Vics Scored

The Orono nine opened the game auspiciously when Bowman drove in runs in the first innings Cameron singled and later scored on Caldwell's double to left field, which went on a fielder's choice. The other run scored by the visitors was unearned for by Leycett after he doubled and later scored when a ball got away from Ross and on the throw to Flagler threw wild to third.

Ross scored the Vics first run after walking when Flagler smashed a hard hit to deep right centre for three bases in the third innings. In the fourth frame, Ross scored the score when Palmer singled and Johnny Kerr drew a base. Latchford's one base blow, Latchford by the way pulled a curve ball all through the Vic-Orono series. Trailing three to two in the sixth, the Vic team turned on the hitting power, when Palmer walked, went to second on a fielder's choice and when he stole third, the catcher threw wild allowing Palmer to cross the plate with the tying run. Then Kerr's timely four bagger cracked out a nice single. With two out and two on Johnnie Kerr picked a very auspicious time to hit the second pitched ball far over the right fielder's head for a home run. This ended the scoring leaving the final score 6 to 3 for the Belleville Victorias.

The local intermediates now meet the winner of the Barrie-North Bay series in the O.B.A.A. intermediate series. A semi-finals series between these two teams are now tied on the round each club having won a home game and they will probably play the third and deciding game on Saturday, but the most probability the Victorias will lay idle.

During their triumphant march towards the provincial championship the Victorias have won the Bay of Quinte League, defeated the Cannington and Lindsay Valley loop, won from the Cenanoque club, who had previously defeated the Gibbard Athletics of Napanee in the first round and their recent victory over the fast Orono nine has placed them in the class of conquerors of the Peterboro intermediates.

The Victorias have won six of their seven games in the O.B.A.A. series, scoring 50 runs in the seven games played.

FRANK ORR'S MARE WINS

Catharine Grattan, Teamed By Billie Smith, Winning Pair

Local race horses are keeping the name of Belleville on the map as a centre for this sport at the local fairs. On Wednesday, Catharine Grattan, owned by Frank Orr of this city, took a speedy band of pacers into camp at Kingston in the 2.25 class. The mare was teamed by Billie Smith and the pair made an excellent combination. The race was won by three straight heats with the fastest time 2.15, which is not bad for a green pacer. There were ten starting, but the mare went to the front in the first heat and it was just a hurry ride for Smith most of the afternoon.

Jimmie D won the 2.18 class after a five heat struggle with Jure Patchen of Toronto. The summary:

Scotty McDougall Earns Bout With Masked Marvel Throwing Casey Berger in 2 Straight Falls

Wrestling Card at Arena Attracts Largest Crowd of Season

GOOD BOUTS

Rod LaRoque and Frankie Hart Winners in Other Bouts

"Scotty" MacDougall, that quiet appearing fellow with the light hair and bare feet, as well pounds in the city already, defeated Casey Berger, California collegian, at the Arena last night, before a crowd of 1,500 whooping fans, two falls out of three in a scheduled two hour go, the main bout of the evening. The first fall came in 29 minutes and 30 seconds after the hard working MacDougall had thrown the highly-touted football player for a ten yard loss, following a series of heavy body slams in the centre which will probably put the collegian's left arm and shoulder out of commission for some days to come.

Berger Hurt

Berger, at the conclusion of the first fall had to be assisted from the ring, but he came back to finish with just one arm, and was once more thrown in one minute flat with a few more body slams which did him not one bit of good. He was assisted from the ring at the end of the second fall.

On the prog circuit, the opening of the bout Berger employed some of his much advertised football tactics, but with little success against the sturdy efforts of the slower but more methodical MacDougall. Flying tackles and a free-for-all in the clinches featured the first few minutes, but it was not until rabbit and fore-arm punching was introduced to play that the Scotsman really got mad and started to do something about it. Then both sides got rough and the party proceeded. When it got down to business Berger aged to hike through the ropes; when it showed up a little he started in to liven things up. And two and one is two and one is two, the raucous voice of Berger could be heard high above the sounds of the boos and encouragement. The fans chanted in symphony. In the main, however, the go was featured by strangle holds which slowed proceedings up no little bit.

Heavy Slams

Following a final series of heavy body slams by the boys from the land of Burns Berger finally went down to stay, with a badly hurt arm. He was assisted from the ring to come back a few minutes later and again be thrown in the centre of the ring. The second fall time was handicapped by the lack of use of one hand and arm.

Hart the Favorite

But, while the main go of the evening was a bout worthy of headline mention, the two of the large centres, the semi-final between Frankie Hart, a fast fighting youth known in the city to be peered lustily on every occasion, and Rod LaRoque with his rough-house tactics, and Frankie Hart, the Adonis, who can be counted on to put up a good go wherever he goes, was a natural for those who like to see a boy come along and settle down to the more serious business of making their fame and fortune. Hart, at 130, gave away, five pounds to Trader Horn.

The local boy showed the usual roughing up on the part of Horn. Offset by the more scientific and cleaner mat work of the light-footed Hart. Some beautiful wrestling out of impossible locks was exhibited by Hart after he had been repeatedly thrown to the mat by the scowling Horn. For some time Hart found himself in a few tight places, but managed to wriggle through until he got his chance in the end or 26 minutes and 30 minutes of the 45-minute bout. He pinned Horn to the mat with a top body scissors after he had weakened the opponent with a number of heavy slams. Horn's expectorant rage on several occasions on by ringsiders who repeatedly had to duck.

Preliminary Draw

Given a 30 minute limit to disport themselves in the preliminary, well known in the city, who has repeatedly wrestled here some excellent bouts and a rough gentleman named Joe Mosharko, put on an age long bout that had plenty of action for accompaniment. It was a slow moving set-to which had weary fans very, very tired before the final act of the comedy was ended in a draw. During the bout everything happened. From Referee Nelson found himself on the boards in a corner, with a head-lock, strangle hold and reliance in his power he described as "Scotch" by Mr. Nelson to Referee Harry Emer Barnes.

Some say 50 million Frenchmen can't be wrong—but there were well over 1000 local sport fans who, the hawker yelled and booed through two hours of pushing, hauling and grappling at the Belleville Arena on Wednesday night. The average kind person paid the electric light bill the lights were finally made and the grunt and groan" artists opened their show exactly one hour late.

x x x

The initial bout of the evening between two 200 pounders. Red La Rocque and Nick Mirgurio, was called a draw after even Referee Earl Nelson got into the fray to try and add a little more color to the push-and-pull exhibition. The second bout between Belleville's white haired wrestler, Franklin Hart, and Trader Horn proved to be a fusion and Alphonso act. First Horn would toss Frankie around the squared circle and plant him. Dainty Adonis would take his turn at throwing Trader into the right centre was a picture to watch. Palmer on account of his height, catch look comparatively easy.

x x x

Johnnie Kerr's timely homerun with two on base, was the ball that pulled Belleville's defeat for the Orono nine. About one of the most successful players on the roster of the vics right at present is Art Secney their catcher. Just why Secney is dropped below some of the other batters in the line-up is a deep dark mystery to us.

x x x

The Vics now meet either Barrie or North Bay in the O. B.A.A. semi-finals, and how Belleville's intermediates are going to finance their way into such a long trip is another mystery. With the admission set as low as 75c on Wednesday the Vics could not take in $100 at the gate. When a team has advanced as far in the provincial championship hunt as the Vics have they should stop jumping and standing over the fence to beat the gate out of a mere two bits. If the Vics want "Dizzy" management at least $700 to take their club to the north country and it looks as though some sort of a Santa Claus will have to put in an appearance pretty soon. After the poor attendance shown by the fans all season the management of the Victoria is to be congratulated upon the attitude of keeping the team in the running.

Varicose Veins Rapidly Reduced

Simple Home Treatment That is Giving Amazing Results.

If you have varicose veins or bunches—you can start to-day to bring them down. Get an ounce of Emol and try it—as we—you will do it.

Just get an original bottle of Mone's Emol from any druggist or at any drug store and apply it according to directions to the affected veins. It is very powerful and penetrating, and only a little is required.

After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to disappear, and by regular use will soon reduce them to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is also a most healing agent. Just one application for instance stops the most distressing eczema, and a few applications soon cause eruptions to dry up, scales off, and complete recovery. It is equally as effective in barber's itch, salt rheum, rashes, and inflammatory skin trouble.

People who want to reduce varicose veins, or get rid of eczema, ulcers, or piles in a few days should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is so powerful that a small bottle is all that is necessary. Doyle's Drug Store and leading drug stores sell lots of it.

NORTH BAY, BARRIE SERIES TIED UP

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP). — Barrie scored an 11-10 win over North Bay Pirates here last night in their intermediate O.B.A.A. series and tied up their series to decide which team will continue with Belleville Victorias for championship honors.

Heavy hitting of the Pirates, which carried them to an 11-9 victory in the first game of the series, was missing tonight and they could do nothing with the offerings of two pitch moundsmen on the other hand the bonnsters collected 14 varsity hits in the setting. The winner of this series will likely meet Belleville Victorias.

Knocks and Boosts

Although the Belleville Victorias suffered rather a chilly start on Wednesday afternoon, they gave the fans a heavy thrill before they emerged winners over the Orono Intermediates. To hear the fans cheer and applaud reminded one of the "old days" over at the old ball park.

x x x

The score of 6 to 3 about tells the tale. The Vics were very careless in the early innings as they displayed a real attitude of unbeatables. It took three fifths of an inning right before Campbell, who hurled his best game of the season, to show his team mates their proper ways. Campbell was sure on the job Wednesday. He had everything desired by a pitcher. It just seemed that every time he got into a hole he merely bore down a little more and pitched himself out of it. "Stubby" Flagler, and "Stub" Palmer also played heads-up ball that afternoon. Palmer's catch of a homerun drive into deep right centre was a picture to watch. Palmer also made a beautiful catch look comparatively easy.

Johnnie Kerr's timely homerun with two on base, was the ball that pulled Belleville's defeat for the Orono nine. About one of the most successful players on the roster of the vics right at present is Art Secney their catcher. Just why Secney is dropped below some of the other batters in the line-up is a deep dark mystery to us.

x x x

The Vics now meet either Barrie or North Bay in the O. B.A.A. semi-finals, and how Belleville's intermediates are going to finance their way into such a long trip is another mystery. With the admission set as low as 75c on Wednesday the Vics could not take in $100 at the gate. When a team has advanced as far in the provincial championship hunt as the Vics have they should stop jumping and standing over the fence to beat the gate out of a mere two bits. If the Vics want "Dizzy" management at least $700 to take their club to the north country and it looks as though some sort of a Santa Claus will have to put in an appearance pretty soon. After the poor attendance shown by the fans all season the management of the Victoria is to be congratulated upon the attitude of keeping the team in the running.

Kingston, Sept. 15 (CP).—Practical practice of the season brought a dozen...of Queen's University rugby players out on Richardson Stadium yesterday for a workout under the scrutiny of Coach Milo Burt. The Senior team depleted through graduation of many of last year's squad, it is expected between 50 and 60 candidates will be scrambling for places within a week.

Coming of Dick Storms, fleet outside wing and deadly tackle, boosted the stock of the tri-color. Storms is expected to be a big help. Military College team that won the Interfaculty championship two years ago.

Trevor Thomas and Carter, on the half line will be without his last year's partners, McKelvey and Bert Gilmore. "Wendell" Hall, "Red" McNichol, two smart youngsters will be tried out for the vacant positions.

Tuesday, Sept. 15.—Perspiration ran a little more freely from University of Toronto's rugby squad yesterday as Warren Stevens, director of athletics and head coach Dr. Harry Robbs increased the pressure on the 33 candidates for the Intercollegiate team.

Very little ball handling has been included in the drills to date and it is expected the balance of the week will be continued in conditioning the players for a more arduous season next week.

Varsity squad was fortified in their half-line with Jack Sinclair to do the booting and Johnny Fitzpatrick and Wendell Hall to go aid in the catching and running.

Hamilton, Sept. 15.—A sizzling two-hour workout left Hamilton Tigers' physical condition and players a few pounds lighter last night as the coaches prepared them for the hard drive and scrimmaging scheduled for Saturday.

The Big Four squad, with Pat Patterson and Dr. Jim Sutton alternating at heaving the passes, concentrated on forward passing and formations. Parker, Turnville and Thornton carried the burden on the receiving end.

Remains of discarded American automobiles are shipped to foreign countries and put to a really astonishing variety of uses, it is reported.

UNITED STATES MAN ASSAILED

Victim Appeals to Consul —Police Investigate

Sarnia, Sept. 15—(CP)—A new angle to the disturbance at Pipersea Beach developed Wednesday when Capt. Harry M. Johnson of Detroit, a beach property owner, came to the city and complained to the Canadian authorities and also to the American consul that a mob had damaged his property because it resented the erection of a fence on the beach premises.

He declared that when he sought to restrain the crowd about 50 Bosanquet Township men and youths, they knocked him down and then set to with the work of destroying the fence and trespass signs.

Provincial police went out to Ipperwash yesterday afternoon, and are said to be in possession of several automobile licence numbers which they hope will enable them to identify guilty parties.

"INSIDE EXPOSE" OF POLICE AND GANGSTER WAR

Walter Huston, Jean Hersholt and Wallace Ford in "The Beast of The City" at the Capitol, Friday and Saturday.

"The Beast of the City" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's astounding exposé of the "inside" to police conditions in American cities, and one of the most daring dramas ever written, for the screen, is the attraction coming Friday to the Capitol Theatre.

This picture has been called "The Big Parade" of the police in an average city, full of their home life, of their problems in enforcing the law and of the ramifications of politics and the underworld. Highlights include a spectacular showing of the workings of police radio alarm and teletype systems. There are sensational police runs and raidew dramatic scenes in police courts, gangster battles and an ingenious attack on a bank truck camouflaged as a furniture van. Against this dramatic background are shown the machinations of politics and the underworld in controlling the destiny of a large city.

Walter Huston, who won note for his performance in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," heads the large cast as the police chief who is baked at every step in his efforts to clean up the corruption of his city. Jean Harlow, as the tool of an arch gangster, lures the police chief's brother, a lawyer, to be side and they outwit and frustrate the police chief. When the police suspend one of his men, the police chief wins victory for his city. Wallace Ford, who scored as the contractor in "Possession," plays the detective, and the well-known character actor, Jean Hersholt, is seen as the gangster.

Hundreds of policemen appear in the picture along with the regular actors, most of the episodes were based on real occurrences in a number of American cities and most of its drama was gleaned directly from courts and police records. The film is based on an original story by W. R. Burnett, who wrote "Little Caesar," and was directed by Charles Brabin, whose "Sporting Blood" was one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

One of the most sensational scenes depicts the great police broadcasting system in operation in its battle against crookdom, and the chases of lawbreakers and police in races against death. The picture is literally a cross-section of the lives and work of police all over the country, told in its most dramatic phases.

This picture is personally recommended by Chief G. G. Holmes, manager of the Capitol, who saw it recently at Loew's Theatre, Toronto.

Ladies attending the evening performances of "The Beast of the City" will receive a beautiful large salad bowl with the management's compliments.

LABOR WILLING TO PAY SHARE OF INSURANCE

Labor Willing to Share Cost of Unemployment Insurance in Dominion

Public Bodies Asked to Join in Appeal to Government

NOT CHARITY

Work or Relief For Which Contribution is Made All Asked

By Rex Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 16— National organizations and public bodies of Canada will be invited by the Trades and Labor Congress to assist in an appeal to the government of Canada for inauguration of a system of unemployment insurance, should the method of unemployment relief be adopted by the government labor is willing to pay its share. This was the outstanding development at the Congress convention today, in which a definite declaration from organized labor that it wanted not charity, but either work or relief to which it had itself contributed.

Willing to Pay

After hours of verbal battling the Congress definitely turned thumbs down on the non-contributory insurance plan, which the government would be asked to bear the entire cost of such insurance. It heard too, an entire threshing out of the unemployment problem in Canada, with stories of hardship and suffering from men, who did not find work. It heard an attack on the food handed by the Minister of Industry to the unemployed, which was so promptly denied by other delegates.

And when luncheon adjournment came, the convention was engaged in a bitter struggle. A resolution of the Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council in which the council urged the Congress to press the Provincial and Dominion governments to assume 90 percent of the total cost of relief was before the house. The resolutions committee substituted a clause of the resolution, suggesting "adequate increases" in the relief now in force. On this difficulties were taken up Tom Moore, President of the Congress, pointed out there was one question to be decided: Should the Congress ask for contributory or non-contributory insurance; should the request be broken down or by referendum a meeting with the Government at Ottawa?

Arthur Marcil, Montreal, was in favor of the contributory scheme. He felt, that by contributing a share the worker would have a right to say how the legislation would be administered. On the other hand, labor could say nothing if the government paid their share of the cost. Dissatisfaction would follow if the act was not administered by someone "who knew something about it," E. E. Little, Niagara Falls, also favored the contributory scheme.

Labor Not Responsible

Exception was taken to remarks of Hon. W. A. Gordon, Dominion Labor Minister, who had implied there were many men who would not work if they could. Ninety percent of them he had met, said J. Allan, Calgary, were glad to work. The government should be ready to recognize labor was not alone responsible to find a way out of the difficulty.

R. J. Fallon, Montreal, said the men now unemployed must be taken care of by direct relief, but employers should be asked also to contribute to a system, which would protect them when necessary.

E. Eggleton, Hamilton, said the workers were suffering in the midst of plenty Recently the Mayor of Hamilton had suggested unemployed should be fed at a cost of one cent per day.

John Brice Toronto, said the appeal for non-contributory insurance was not a "communist cry". He had long fought for the principle "Work or support" and hoped whatever Capitalism was placing the entire burden on the working man. The entire cost of insurance should be borne by the State. The workmen's compensation act was a contributory one and was working. Hundreds and thousands receive clothing."

Objects to Treatment

Premier Bennett had treated the Labor delegation from a "callous indifferent manner, when a deputation had gone to Ottawa, last year, he declared. Mr. Bennett had declared he would make an investigation into unemployment, but this was unnecessary, said Mr. Bruce. The Prime Minister had huge piles of information at his disposal.

President Tom Moore said the first duty the Congress must perform was to get relief for those who needed it and study the means to get it. Various municipalities were unable to pay any relief, while others were able to pay their share. There was no difficulty in convincing the governments they should pay 50 percent of the relief when the municipalities themselves could not definitely decide what they wanted.

Snow Baby Returns to Pull Cord To Unveil Monument to Peary

Daughter of Admiral Born in Land of Snow

Brigus, Nfld., Sept. 16 (CP). — A monument 50 feet high, capped with a cap of non-corrosive steel, which will defy the ravages of the midnight sun and serve as a shining beacon to ships, stands on Cape York, Greenland, to remind explorers in Northern waters of the deeds of Admiral Robert E. Peary.

The monument was unveiled on August 18, according to Captain Bob Bartlett, noted explorer, who piloted the ship North in the schooner, Effie M. Morrisey and returned here yesterday.

Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, daughter of Admiral Peary, pulled the cord that bared the great shaft before a group of United States museum and scientific and hundreds of Eskimos, who had assisted in its construction.

Among those who attended the ceremony was Arthur D. Norcross, New York publisher and author, and Mrs. Norcross.

Following this ceremony the schooner sailed further north to Faloon Island, near where Mrs. Stafford visited the ruins of the house where she was born in 1893.

Believed to have been further north than any other baby in the world, Mrs. Stafford for many years was known to the world as the "Snow Baby". She credited her mother, Robert E. Peary's widow with the idea of erecting the monument, and she said she was acting as her mother's representative in unveiling the shaft.

Battle Between Spider and Reptile Ends, Snake is Enmeshed in Web

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16 — A two day battle between a spider of the ordinary household variety and a six-inch garter snake held fast in a web spun by the spider, ended today in favor of the spider.

The life and death struggle occurred in the basement of the house of W. F. Miller at Monroeville. He said the spider slips up and got between the snake and its hole. The snake then got mad, plunged into the deep water, despite the fact that he could swim only a few strokes. By the time her father had arrived at the scene, the snake had died in the water in which she almost drowned herself, managed to grasp the garment of her younger playmate and pull her to shore. Both little girls were overcome by the drowned when Mr. Argent managed to get them out. Several of the highest type which was also displayed in this instance will be presented to the Humane Society of Mayor George O. Weir, who is forwarding particulars today.

TRUCK JAMS CAR AGAINST LARGE POLE

Hubert and Francis Hollingsworth Severely Cut By Glass

CAR WRECKED

Court Cases Outcome of The Motor Accident

Failing to observe a stop sign before entering the King's Highway, a truck owned by the Walmsley Co. of Belleville and driven by Kenneth L. Fargey, Dundas St., of this city, crashed across a boulevard and struck broadside a car driven by Mrs. Charles Hollingsworth of Marmora, jamming it against a telephone pole and injuring Mrs. Hollingsworth, Francis, 14 and 11 years respectively, late Thursday afternoon at the overhead bridge at Napanee. The children were rushed to the surgery of Dr. Bull, where 18 stitches were required to close the wounds under each left eye on each child caused by flying glass. Rev. Mr. Hollingsworth and Mrs. Hollingsworth were badly shaken up and sustained severe bruises but were not seriously injured. The car was almost a complete wreck.

On Friday morning K. L. Fargey appeared in the police court of Napanee before his Worship Magistrate M. P. Graham and pleaded guilty to "failing in charge of a motor car while intoxicated and also to careless driving. On the first charge he was given a sentence of seven days in jail and on the second a fine of $10 and costs was imposed. Cecil Wilson, K.C., prosecuted the case, the pleaded guilty to a charge of "having liquor in an illegal place" and was fined $100 and costs. It is expected the fine will be paid. Chief Constable Wade of Napanee, investigated the accident and laid the information before the court.

The intersection, where the accident occurred is a dangerous one. The Newburg road as this point comes into the King of Highway, which swings eastward after passing under the railway bridge. There are two lanes for traffic under the bridge and one lane for traffic to the north end.

It is alleged by the Chief Constable, who was soon on the scene after the accident that Fargey who was proceeding eastward on the Newburg road, failed to observe the stop sign before entering the King's Highway and his truck being out of control, went across the westbound lane of traffic, down the boulevard and crashed broadside into the Hollingsworth car, which was proceeding under the bridge to swing to the north. The force of striking the car between the truck and a telephone pole on the east side of the road.

TWO CARS COLLIDE AT QUINTE CLUB

A motor accident in which no persons were injured occurred Wednesday, 9.15 p.m. Thursday evening when a car driven by Mrs. Arthur Telford of Oshawa, crashed into the rear end of a car driven by Mrs. E. V. Illsley of Belleville, at the Quinte Country Club.

Mrs. Illsley was proceeding west and slowed her car up to make a turn into the Quinte Country Club driveway. The Telford car was following the Illsley car and attempting to pass the car ahead and as Mrs. Illsley was about to make the turn. The Telford car crashed into the rear end damaging both cars considerably.

V. O. N. Urgently Need Money to Carry on Activities of the Order

TAG DAY TOMORROW is being sponsored by the Victorian Order of Nurses committee in their annual appeal to the citizens to assist by their donations the work that the Order carries on in Belleville. The Order has been established for seven years in the city, and the success of the annual tag days, which are of considerable aid in financing the work, points to the interest and co-operation of the people of the community.

Each year the Victorian Order nurse grows materially. From a small beginning, with one nurse in charge, the popularity of the service among the residents of Belleville has increased until now two nurses are required to carry out the busy programme of bedside nursing and bedside teaching. The Victorian Order service is available to all, the patient in the most serious condition receiving the first attention. Fees for nursing are collected from those who are in a position to pay. Those who cannot afford to meet the charges for the service are given the same care and attention.

To offer nursing care to those patients, whose circumstances make it impossible for them to pay financial assistance to supplement the actual fees must be secured and it is for this purpose that the committee makes it annual tag day appeal.

A small contribution from each citizen makes no strain on individual purses but is of great help in assisting the financing of the Victorian Order in Belleville. Every dollar collected is spent in the city on community work and is a worthy civic enterprise in which to assist. Citizens give generously to Belleville's charities especially as they have done in the past and GIVE GENEROUSLY.

Efforts Being Made by Mayor to Secure Life Saving Medals To Fittingly Reward Rescuers

Pearl Gazely and Rita Dingman's Gifts to Be Honored

RESCUE CHUMS

With No Thought of Safety For Themselves

Bravery will be rewarded.

During the past few months two thrilling rescues have been performed in this city in the very little lives have been saved. In both cases young children their lives in attempting to save others. Now, through the kind offices of Mayor Oliver, who is bringing the matter before the Royal Humane Society of Hamilton, both rescuers will be rewarded, will be fittingly rewarded by the presentation of the Life Saving Medal from the Royal Humane Society. The story of these deeds, together particulars and newspaper clippings of the two distinct rescues.

In the first case, Miss Pearl Gazely, aged 16, resides at Bridge at 65 Moira Street, on the 3rd day of last March ventured out on the ice-bound Moira River, not far from her home, when she observed 9 year old Marshall Dingman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Dingman, who lives on the opposite side of the river, struggling in the water. Realizing that the little fellow's life in not being able to swim, Miss Gazely proceeded to attempt the drowning boy and after a heroic struggle bring him to shore. Adults, unable to do so themselves sat by and watched the thrilling rescue being performed.

Not quite a month ago Thelma Agnes Argent, aged 4 years, was playing the railway bridge at the lower end of the city. Some distance behind her was playing her friend Rita Dingman, eleven years old and sister of Marshall, whose life she had saved. Thelma somehow managed to fall into the river and was carried by the west end of the bridge, lost her balance and then fell between the ties and into the water of the bridge. She struck her head on the iron work, partially stunning herself and then dropped the remaining distance of about twenty feet, into the deep river channel. Rita Dingman observed the accident and with

F. McILQUHAM IS ACQUITTED

Jury Finds Accused Not Guilty of Murder

Kingston, Sept. 16—Frederick McIlquham was Thursday acquitted of the murder of his brother William, who was shot to death in an altercation in their home last June.

A Supreme Court Assizes jury brought in a verdict of not guilty after deliberating four hours' deliberation, upholding the plea that Frederick shot in self-defence.

The verdict culminated a two-day trial before Justice J. E. Hodgins, Sedgewick, who freed the prisoner on a few minutes after the foreman of the jury had announced the finding.

W. P. Nickle, K.C., counsel for the defence, stressed the self-defence plea in his address to the jury. W. H. Williams, K.C., for the crown contended that the prisoner would be freed if they found he shot in self-defence. They were told he would.

Organs were first used in churches in 681.

POLICE SCOUR CAPE BRETON FOR UNKNOWN

Jury Finds Girl and Lover Were Murdered

2ND GUN FOUND

Heads of Victims to Be Sent For An Analysis

Glace Bay, N. S., Sept. 16 (CP).— Police today were scouring Cape Breton for the slayer of a pretty 18-year-old girl and her lover.

That Joyce Roberts and William Romek came to their death by shooting at the hand of hands of a person or persons unknown, was the verdict returned by a jury empannelled by Coroner A. S. MacGillivray.

The two were found lying wounded beside a small brook at Table Head on Sept. 6. The girl had been shot through the side of the head, Romek from behind.

Two guns were produced before the coroner's jury last night, one turned over by Police Officer Daniel Brown to Royal Canadian Mounted Police Inspector Daniel Nicholson, and the other found yesterday within 40 feet of the scene of the tragedy.

Percy Williams, who found the girl's purse on the night of the shooting and gave it to police that night, said he found a gun yesterday while searching near the brook. He told the jury the gun had two empty chambers when he picked it up.

In reporting their finding, the jury recommended that both guns and the bullets found in the dead heads of the two victims should be sent to experts to find out whether or not the guns the bullets were discharged.

CAUSTIC COMMENT BY LLOYD GEORGE

Quota, He Believes, Not Beneficial to Country

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Characteristic comment on the Ottawa Imperial Conference at Ottawa was made today by Lloyd George in speaking informally to a gathering of Welsh members of the Liberal states.nan himself has a farm.

The Dominions are going home from the fair very pleased with the bargains they have made. What did we buy? Are you sure we bought anything except a pig in a poke? Canada has not been sending us a very large number of pigs. She has been given a quota to send ten times as many as were ever sent before. Whether that is going to be of value to the market our affection for the Dominions will grow remains to be seen.

In conclusion Mr. Lloyd George urged that if agriculture was to be restored in the United Kingdom it must be brought up to the national inquiry party with a programme appealing to the nation as a whole.

Three Persons Injured in Series Of Quakes at Wairoa, New Zealand

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 16 (AP). — A violent earthquake which caused considerable damage to the Hawkes Bay district was felt over a large area this morning. Reports from Gisborne this afternoon said minor shocks were continuing and that in some districts the earth was shaking regularly every few minutes.

Three persons were injured at Wairoa, where a bridge was damaged by the heavy quake and a new bridge is under construction.

Chimneys were toppled over and the telephone service was suspended because of damage to the underground cables.

In February, 1931, 200 persons and buildings and 1,000 were killed in a devastating earthquake which left a heavy damage in the Hawkes Bay region.

Since then there have been numerous but less serious quakes none of which has done extensive damage.

Earthquakes are frequent in various parts of New Zealand and seldom do much damage because much of the country is sparsely settled.

THREE FOUR-LEAFED CLOVERS FOUND

Four-leafed clovers, those sure and certain harbingers of good luck, scarce as the proverbial needle in an imaginary hay stack, aren't hard to find if one knows where to go. Master Bobby Thompson found that place after school Thursday afternoon.

While coming through Corby's Park, Bobby noticed a four-leafed clover sticking up like an invitation. He plucked that and looked for more. Inside of ten minutes he had garnered another one from the velvety turf. One more, found after further careful search, completed the day's haul.

Since the secret is out an exodus in that general direction is expected.

DEAD DUCK FOUND ON BAY SHORE

Coincident with the hunting season upon the birds, which has just opened, two dead black ducks were found on the shore of Prince Edward County, near Hounsom, Thursday evening. As far as could be learned by the boys the ducks had not been shot as no punctures or wounds on the fowl were noticeable. It is believed by old timers, that considerable oil which lays on the waters and in the marsh of the Bay of Quinte may have something to do with the death of the ducks. Other dead ones had been reported before in the direction of Massassga. Oil, which covers the fine feathers on the head of the bird prevents proper breathing, with consequent strangulation. Dead fish are also quite noticeable on both shores.

BRAKES RELEASED CAR GOES IN RIVER

A small "light car" owned by Clifford Clarke, who had parked the machine on the road near the shore at the river near the city slums early Thursday afternoon, while he went to inspect the ancient whirlpool formation at the quarry, released its brakes somehow, possibly the dog, had gone, rolled down the incline on the bank and ended the short trip by running safe deep into the river.

It was rescued without difficulty by Mr. Clarke, but only after one of his companions had joined the gang, it was lucky for him it didn't "turn turtle" while in the stream.

PARTRIDGE SEASON HAS NOT BEEN DECLARED

Local hunters with itchy trigger fingers, who have been carefully oiling up their trusty fowling pieces since the first announcement, some weeks ago, of the open season on partridge this year, will be wise to take warning and wait for further word before carrying out plans to spend a blissful couple of days in the back sections of the county knocking over the flighty birds. The promised open season did not go into effect on September 15th, despite reports to that effect. In fact it may not come into effect this month, over the week. This information comes from the game and fish inspector of the district, Mr. J. J. Lyons. No announcement has yet been received by him concerning the opening date of the shorter trip by running safe deep into the river.

It is believed locally, that when the season finally does open it will occur during the latter part of the month of October. In any event the period has yet to be set by a provincial game board ruling. Until this is done and hunting partridge becomes lawful, stiff penalties await those caught with birds in their possession.

DRY WEATHER FOR TWO MORE WEEKS

The local weather man, whose fame owing to his long-range prognostications, has steadily grown, sees no immediate relief for the dryness and heat, which has been prevalent in this district for weeks, broken by more than a passing shower. He further promises continued dry weather for at least two more weeks, with possibly, just a little shower in between times".

The fine September weather of fall," he glibly predicts, and, while it is a little early yet to predict with any certain degree of accuracy, chances are that we will have a warm fall and a pleasant one. In a week or so we will be able to tell just about what the weather will be for the next three months."

A question was in order. It has to do with past performances. "When you so surely predicted four full days of dry, hot weather for the Belleville Fair, at least one week before the fair commenced, was it a guess or a hope. You also promised very dry weather to follow the rain of a month of September. Did you have accurate knowledge?"

"Well, we had dry weather for the four days. And we've had dry weather ever since. And when I said dry I meant dry. Aren't all the wells in the country drying up?"

CROWN REFUSES TO ASK FOR CONVICTION

Clarence Cooke of Belleville, who appeared in the local police court on a charge of raising a receipt was dismissed from custody following the court proceedings Friday morning.

Cooke appeared in court being charged with raising a receipt for a subscription for one to ten dollars. The physician testified that Cooke had owed him $14.50 and had paid but $4.00 on account. A local collector of a collective agency who had previously collected the $4 from Cooke took the receipt and told Cooke to call on the 27th of December last Cooke had paid him one dollar on account. Later he accepted read ten dollars.

When Cooke took the stand he testified that he had given the collector $10.00 and the receipt at a restaurant was for original. Upon examining the receipts Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan observed that a word had been erased where the word ten appeared. The Crown then asked the collector to write the word ten and after comparing it with the original Crown Attorney Donnan asked his Worship Magistrate Mikel to dismiss the charge against Cooke. The similarity between the two written words was so much alike that the Crown could not ask the cour tfor a conviction in the case.

JOE FOLTZ, 86 ENJOYS LIFE

Moderation in All Things Keynote of Long Life

At the age of eighty-six, when most people are content to sit back in the twilight of life and look forward to but a few more milestones on the journey, Mr. Joe Foltz, 40 Grove street, who today celebrates his eighty-sixth birthday, gives promise of remaining active for many more years in the same active manner, which has characterized his whole life.

Content only during the past year or so to take life a little easier, than has been experienced during his over half a century connubious service as salesman in a downtown store, Mr. Foltz quit from the work only when the store he had served for over twenty-five years in one capacity or another. Since then he has devoted himself to his garden, which is higher work around the premises.

Born in Hanau-Stein, Germany, he came to Belleville, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Foltz, when but a boy. Immediately after his arrival his father opened a general store on Front street, followed by the Kyle House and carried on a successful business for many years. At the age of eighteen Mr. Foltz began clerking, apprenticing with Mr. George Vair, on the premises afterwards located by Mr. Wallace Cooke, which still does business in the city. Twenty-seven years ago he entered the employ of Clifford V. Sinclair, and it was only after a quarter of a century of faithful work, that he quit the store, when the company went out.

Interesting Stories

Interesting stories could be told by Mr. Foltz concerning Belleville's early days. Stories such as the laying of the first few yards of tracks in Belleville of what is now now "the old Grand Trunk Railway". Mr. Foltz saw the ground broken for that understanding. Afterwards he saw the first locomotive ever to be used in this district, brought to Front street, on a temporary track, pulled by horses. It arrived on boat from England.

Houses and stores were far and few between. Hotels in the city predominated, and were always well patronized by the early day travellers and rural residents of the surrounding district. Many quaint and wooden sidewalks on Front street supported both wheel and pedestrian traffic.

Days when Belleville was a thriving port, with big steamers churning the waters of the bay and harbor, calling from all parts of the Great Lakes were also vividly recalled by Mr. Foltz. "Those were the days" talk, which was given to a reporter, Days, when millions of feet of lumber from the northern forests traveling the Moira River, to flood the city and days when busy times heights of sawdust, and slab timbers, also loom fresh in his reminiscences. "There is little of that left, now," declared Mr. Foltz. "Hardly a store of those days remains, which is still in business, with the exception, possibly, of Wallace Cooke's store on East Bridge street, which still does a thriving business.

Tends to Garden

Today at eighty-six Mr. Foltz finds time to be in his garden early and late. In company with his granddaughter he spends the happier years of his life in complete enjoyment. Finding many useful tasks to fill his busy days. A keen reader of current events, Mr. Foltz takes great delight in the local paper and daily radio broadcasts. A pipe-man always, he still professes a liking for his pipe, which he enjoys with great contentment. Still with the step of a boy and the looks of a middle aged man, it will be very many years yet before time dulls, cheery smile and darkens the merry twinkle in a pair of bright eyes. Today at eighty-six he professes to feel "as good as he ever did".

"Moderation in all things" was his answer, when pressed for the secret of such a long and healthy life.

KARNIVAL TO OPEN TUESDAY

Hammer and Saw Brigade Busy in Preparing Armories

The hammer and saw were busy these nights in the Armouries as the hard-working Kiwanians prepare for the 1932 edition of the Karnival next week in that auditorium.

That the more than busy other the club is tent on clearing as much if not more money for the charity fund than any other year and they want the public to know that which cheapening the calibre of entertainment and lowering the high standard of show usually presented, nevertheless they are keeping expensed down to the very minimum, and a greater part than ever of the money the public spends here will find its way into the fund set aside for welfare work.

Much time has been a busy drain on the Kiwanis charity fund and if the club is to carry on the good works they are noted for then this carnival must go over in a big way.

Big attractions are already signed for the week and will be announced until early in the week. Other years the carnival started on Monday night, but this year it will start Tuesday and thus give the exhibitors and programme committee plenty of time to start off with a bang, the second night of the week.

16 PENSION CLAIMS HEARD

Decisions in Most Cases Have Been Reserved For Time

Sixteen pension claims, which have been submitted to the Pension Board by ex-soldiers of this district were handled by the Pensions Tribunal, in charge of Col. G. W. Peck, V.C., who conducted Friday, one of the lengthiest sessions ever to sit in the city. The Tribunal convened Thursday morning and worked continuously until late Friday to dispose of the many lengthy claims which had been prepared. Claimants from as far north as Bancroft appeared before the Board.

In the majority of cases decisions have been reached, either favorable or otherwise. Favorable decisions are in accordance with the provisions of the Act, which are subject to an appeal by Commission Council. If such an appeal is entered, further consideration is given by Pension Appeal Court. Five cases so entered must be within 15 days. Claimants also have the right of appeal against an unfavorable decision by the Tribunal. For the latter appeal, there is no time limit.

Mr. J. A. MacIsaac, Pension Advocate, represented a number of soldiers, who has been present with the Pensions Tribunal when various cases for the consideration of the Board, will remain in the city over Saturday for the purpose of meeting those soldiers of the district, who have been unable to see him during the past three days. His will be at his room in the Hotel Quinte during the day.

SOMERVILLE 6 UP IN 1ST 18

Only Canadian Has Splendid Chance to Reach Finals

Five Parns Course, Baltimore Country Club, Md.—Ross Sandy) Somerville, former Canadian champion, led Jesse Guilford, the hard hitting Bowesman, 6 up in the first 18 holes of their 36 hole semi-final match in the United States Amateur Golf Championship today.

Somerville was only 2 up at the turn, but took advantage of Guilford's wildness as well as his own putting chances to take four more holes, including the last three in succession. The Canadian holed an 8-footer for a birdie in the 18th. Big Jesse's booming drives were offset by his poor approaching and poorer putting.

Francis Ouimet, Boston, the defending champion was all square with Johnny Goodman, 22 year old Omaha star after 18 holes of the second semi-final match.

LAY PLANS TO RAISE MONEY

Important Meeting of Anglican Synod is Called

Winnipeg, Sept. 16 (CP)— After painful survey of their losses officials of the Church of England are today laying plans to repair the damage suffered by their endowment funds through the alleged defalcations of John A. Machray, K.C., Chancellor of the Diocese of Rupert's Land. Tonight a large group of laymen will meet at the request of Archbishop I. O. Stringer to discuss ways and means of raising money. Last night the council of St. John's College met and decided on reduction of staff salaries to permit the school to carry on.

Machray already faces two large theft charges but no charges have yet been laid in connection with the church funds. He was remanded after a week yesterday on a charge of stealing $901,175.30 from the endowment funds of the University of Manitoba, for which he acted as chairman of the Board of Governors and bursar. Shortly afterwards he was charged with theft of $60,000 from Hector Archibald, his former law partner, now retired.

Although it is stated his visit has no connection with the shortages of Diocesan funds, Most Rev. C. L. Worrell, Archbishop of Nova Scotia and Primate of all Canada, is on his way to Winnipeg. He is to be here Sunday.

Audits of the books of the University of Manitoba are proceeding and the Manitoba government is still considering the personnel of the board of inquiry it intends to appoint to investigate the debacle.

Commendable Work Carried On by Red Cross Outposts

Enthusiastic Meeting Held at Bancroft Recently

Visiting Belleville branch enquire from various outposts of the Red Cross, Miss M. E. Wilkinson, Toronto, assistant director of the Ontario Red Cross, has brought back with her a report of satisfaction that will amaze those who have only a vague idea of the programme being carried out by this society.

Fine Records

A nurses' conference was held at Bancroft and was attended by the nurses from the various outpost's. They were, Miss LaRoy, of Wilberforce; Mis adcott, of Apsley; Miss Gardiner, of Whitney; Miss Hurst of Coe Hill; Miss Easton and Miss Norland, of the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital. Each contributed interesting reports of their work. The first outpost was established at Wilberforce in 1922 and since then there were 74 admission to the hospital, 19 births in the outpost, and 1073 hospital days.

Five years later, the outpost was started at Apsley. One hundred and thirteen admissions have been recorded, fifty-one births in the outpost, and two thousand days.

Coe Dill outpost, which was opened in 1928 has had 1,000 admitted 16 births in the outpost and 2062 hospital days. This district is particularly interested in the work carried on in Bancroft Red Cross Hospital which was established in 1927. It has had 645 admissions, two hundred and one babies have been born in the hospital and there have been 11,743 hospital days. In addition, 2,907 outpatients have been cared for.

Other Services

As well as the hospital work carried on at the outposts, the nurses conduct a district nursing and school service at Wilberforce, Apsley and Coe Hill. Forty-nine confinements have been attended in the homes by Red Cross nurses and 7,173 home visits were made. Forty-seven schools have been inspected from time to time, a total of 3,465 children.

There were 45 clinics at which 1073 were treated. These centres welcome visitors and anyone interested in the work is invited to visit it an outpost if possible.

Instances of human lives being saved through the instruction of Red Cross nurses in the sparsely settled areas of the far north are found in the simple everyday records of nursing. A little lad not long ago had his foot severely gashed by a mower. He was rushed to the nearest Red Cross outpost where instant aid was of real assistance and the boy's foot was saved. Administering first aid, while a doctor drove twenty-five miles to give medical attention, the nurse at one of these outposts kept alive a man who had fallen from a train and the doctor's skill saved his life.

Committee Acts

Each community in which the outpost is established, appoints a committee to aid in the carrying of the work and since patients' fees have lessened considerably are contributions, the committee have been deserving of much credit. The total operating cost, exclusive of expenditure on building and equipment has been $20,291.71. Grants this the communities have contributed $1,175.25 and the hospital revenue, $25,353.74. The balance, $61,600.11 has been made by the Red Cross Society through the Provincial office, which received its funds from subscription centres, where the Red Cross is established.

Anyone interested in assisting in the work can make donations to the Belleville branch or to the outpost directly.

BONUS PAYMENT REPEAL OF PROHIBITION ASKED

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16 — Immediate payment of the bonus and prohibition repeal was overwhelmingly demanded by the American Legion in the 14th Annual National Convention.

The 1,200 delegates voted ten to one for full adjustment of the bonus, less than 24 hours after President Hoover had declared the two billion dollar bonus bill would jeopardize economic recovery. Prohibition repeal was asked by a similar vote.

TYENDINAGA FAIR SUCCESS

Council House Filled With Exhibits—Horse Races.

Deseronto Sept. 16—Superb weather greeted the directors of the Bay of Quinte Mohawk Agricultural Society for the thirty-second annual fair which took place on the Council House grounds on Wednesday, and the fair was undoubtedly the most successful held in some years.

During the morning the many exhibits, including a fairly good showing of livestock, were brought to the grounds and shortly after the noon hour, the judging started and was completed in the early afternoon.

There was a fairly good showing of poultry, also horses, but the exhibit of cattle was the largest in number that has been on display at Holstens.

The Council House was filled with fancy work, needlework, flowers, fruits, vegetables, grains and roots, and after the judging had been completed a large throng of people spent the balance of the afternoon examining the hundred and one articles on display. The ladies of the Reserve are to be congratulated on the many beautiful exhibits of fancy work.

Splendid was the exhibit of home cooking, which occupied the centre aisle of the Council House.

During the afternoon excellent music was furnished by the Indian Band of the Mohawk Institute Reserve, consisting of twenty-two pieces. This organization has a number of good musicians and the musical section was particularly good.

Another interesting feature of the sports was the horseshoe pitching contests, and to the winners suitable prizes were given.

There were three events in the horse races, and the track was very good. During the late afternoon a baseball game was staged between Shannonville team and the Mohawk team, and one other interesting evening was the test match of tug teams of horses.

Each team was hitched to 6000 pounds dead weight, and only one team was able to move the huge rocks which were on a stone boat. The winning team belonged to Mr. Marshall of Ameliasburg.

Other sporting events were the ball throw, the running race and the bare back horse race.

The results of the horse races were as follows:

During the afternoon hour and again at six o'clock meals were served in the dining room of the Council House by the ladies of the Agricultural Society.

There were a number of refreshment booths on the grounds as well as a number of candy stalls. It is estimated that the attendance was approximately 1,000.

FINANCE IN TALKIES

Stock operators, banks, and Ivar Kreuger are about to flicker on the screen.

Such topics are likely to strike a very reason chill to some, but for Director John S. Cohen, of the New York Sun thinks they will draw people to observe their erstwhile enemies.

Those who have had Kreuger and Toll stock, and who thereby acquired an interest in Kreuger's life, are legion enough to comprise a goodly percentage of the audience for films about him."

Finance is rated to be "a difficult" topic to dramatize to make interesting. But "American Madness" and "Skyscraper Souls" are trying out the financier.

Mr. Cohen speaking:

"Financiers, in the last twenty years, have been the kings of the earth, the rulers of the land, seas, sky, and air. They have had more prominence than ever before. The public has begun to stand in awe of them, to regard them as magical wizards who brought order, intelligence, prosperity, and kindred blessings.

"Now, the public begins to doubt a bit—but still they are just as contemporary, just as newsy and fresh as thematic material. So the public begins to doubt a bit at the moment and, particularly during the depression, the public has even had moments of indignation as well as doubt.

"During the inflation, of course, with twenty million people speculating in the market, finance money, and the attending newspaper reporting, there was almost ready-made dramatic topics. It has never happened this way before, and thus there has never before been a complete cycle of plays or movies about finance.

"This isn't true of novels. Indeed, a goodly percentage of our foremost novelists' books have been sound and gigantic, ruthless figures of finance. You recall of course, Mr. Dreiser's "The Financier' and "The Titan" among others.

"But the theater and the movies have never taken up money and its manipulators in a big way."

Mr. Cohen pleads for his theme:

"Why hasn't a play, or a talkie about finance and a financier been truly fine?

"The network of money is certainly an important background even tho many people may consider it dull. Certainly, too, the financiers, the dramatic and financial giants—holding, as they do, the fate of nations and people in their hands—give them a commodity of glamour as theatrical figures. The world of money during the last few years, in fact, has been quite exciting.

"Even if the plays or pictures about it, however, has been more than second rate. If Mr. Dreiser has done it as first-rate literature in 'The Titan' and 'The Financier', why hasn't any playwright been able to do it?

"I suppose that the only answer is that those who have written about finance have sought a theatrical claptrap suspense rather than real and genuine character portrayal of men who built their lives entirely to amassing fortunes through either a thoroughly selfish viewpoint or through a desire for power."

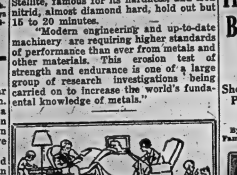
WATER CUTS STEEL

When steel cuts water, it's commonplace; when water cuts steel, that's news.

A tiny jet of water can now cut the hardest of steel alloys, announces L. W. Crubb, director of research of the Westinghouse Company.

This startling miracle has been accomplished on a machine developed under the direction of T. F. Hengstenberg, research engineer. Says a press account:

"The purpose of the machine is to determine the rate at which different metals wear away as they cut through moisture and atmosphere-laden air, it says. The machine reproduces in a few minutes the wear which would take place on airplane propellers spinning at tremendous speeds through rain and fog for months, or on steam-turbine blades in years of service.



"Hengstenberg describes the machine which makes metal appear to be soft, as consisting of a disk wheel driven through gears by an electric motor. Two plugs, specimens of the metal to be tested, are screwed into the wheel's rim at opposite ends of a diameter.

"Due to the accompaniment safeguarded by a heavy casing, the wheel is whirled 20,000 times a minute, 333 times each second. At this speed little plugs are travelling more than 13½ miles a minute — even faster than sound.

"With each revolution, both plugs cut through two jets of water scarcely larger than a pencil lead. The impact of the steel on water fills the enclosing chamber with spray. The moisture-laden atmosphere duplicates conditions of rain or of steam-filled turbines in which steel blades rotate.

"The hardest metals and alloys seem as soft as cheese when subjected to this ordeal. Quarter-inch plugs of stainless iron and of nickel steel are eroded half-way through in two or three minutes. Stellite, famous for its hardness, and iron nitrid, almost diamond hard, hold out but 15 to 20 minutes.

"Modern engineering and up-to-date machinery are requiring higher standards of performance than ever from metals and other materials. This erosion test of strength and endurance is one of a large group of research investigations being carried on to increase the world's fundamental knowledge of metals."

APPLE HARVEST

No other harvest is so richly scented
With all the sweetness of earth and air,
Or leaves the one who harvests more contented
When musky bins are filled beneath stair.
Bees cannot wing this way into their taverns,
Or these plumed pirate squirrels hide away
This gold and crimson in their tree-trunk caverns
Through all the gold-flecked spaciousness of day.

Old orchards have a way of running over
Till all the wicker baskets do the same
And ruddy cheeks roll off into the clover
As if they had it planned before we came.
The fragrant mid mirth of orchards and their glow
Have filled hearts, too, before they turned to go.

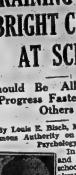
"ENGLAND, SCOTLAND AND FRANCE" being impressions of a ten thousand miles' tour by George M. James, B.A., LL.B., is the title of a volume, small in size, but large in interest and information, just off the press. Mr. George M. James, author, originator and proprietor of "The James Texts", with headquarters in Belleville, has recently returned from a trip to the Old Country and while there wrote a series of letters for The Ontario Intelligencer describing his experiences and impressions while on tour. These letters are embodied in the book referred to above and form a travelogue of great interest. London, with its many places of historic charm, was visited, the other parts of England, on the way to Scotland where Edinburgh "Auld Reekie", with its Castle on the hill, its memories of Mary Queen of Scots, and other romantic reminders of history, lure back the pages of time and restore the cobbled streets and swanking, sword-girded knights seeking flaming flagons of fat ale which made Falstaff commonplace in the road. It is so necessary for those mighty men of old—visiting all the places of chief interest and with the description creating a narrative worth while for entertainment and education, and also a guide book for future globe trotters to follow if they wish to save time and travel. The volume makes no pretence to being a polished book of travel, carefully written with many revises, but just a plain, matter-of-fact every day account of an interesting journey of ten thousand miles written piecemeal in many places and under all kinds of adverse conditions. This we think, adds to the charm of the publication, in that it is an itinerant volume, unfettered by the rigid rules of literary conditions of authorship, just bright and fresh as the various episodes which it so delightfully depicts.

x x x

A word or two about the works of Geo. M. James would not be complete without brief mention, at least, of the "James Texts". These books say much with truth, — this man who created a large and growing business out of his brain. "The James Texts" have become length and breadth of Canada throughout the United States, and even known across the ocean, having business connections in London, England. Geo. M. James, B.A., LL.B., many years a Master of Mathematics in High Schools and Collegiate Institutes, conceived the idea that there should be more in elementary and advanced education than meets the eye, as is available in the schools and texts books of the day. Hence he created a series of text books and examination helps which met instant favour both in Canada and the United States and developed an idea into a publishing business which runs into thousands of dollars a year, constantly growing, and giving employment to a number of people —a growing business which knows not depression or bulls or breaks of the stock market.



x x x

In 1924 Mr. James wrote a school story entitled "Standing Before Kings" which has attained wide circulation and popularity. This, too, was published in Belleville, headquarters for the James Texts.

TRAINING OF BRIGHT CHILD AT SCHOOL

Should Be Allowed to Progress Faster Than Others

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

In every class and in every school there are always a few pupils who absorb learning more quickly than the others, either because no two children are born with equal brain ability actual, or latent.

Indeed, many educators and scientific experts have long been convinced that the slower and more average rate of learning of the whole class, is a distinct handicap to the brighter child.

On the face of it, it is scarcely fair to retard an exceptionally bright child because his brother, or his sister, or his mind, as the case may be, absorbs knowledge more slowly. Why should a pupil should be allowed to progress faster than the others?

In fact, if one does not do that the superior child will become bored, distracted. He may even become so careless that he fails far behind and cannot be caught up with his really average classmates. Discouragement usually is an aftermath and there often develops a dislike for learning in general.

The precocious child is a problem and a hit-and-stump human being. His nerve reactions are not identical with those surrounding him, can very readily be thrown out of balance and may be subject to all neurotic traits and ideas. And yet it is to these very individuals and temperaments in the world have sprung. Highbrow thinkers, who through the study pace that is faster than normal. In them more attention should be paid to the development of thinking processes. Every great or possible contribution should be given to their imagination, for from this source qualities might be hoped for. Lastly, special attitudes should be encouraged and fostered steadily. No impediments should ever be put in the way of the full and free expression of such a child.

I've often heard saying, therefore, that a precocious child not only requires exceptionally able special teachers but also that such a child be taught individually. Good practice reference to his individual differences. Never need he be pressed merely as one of an average group. Always should he receive special attention.

School authorities have, of course, a great deal of difficulty with such children. It is not always possible, especially in a public city school system, to give so much time and individualized attention to a relatively few superior children.

Among the methods used to meet the needs of the precocious are the "skipping" grades, extra classes and extra classes, private and extra tuition classes, and finally, in the so-called "minimum work system" the gifted children are completing the minimum requirements for any given term — and which they do in a short time — are allowed to spend the remaining weeks studying under supplementary to the minimum curriculum or upon some of the work of the grade above.

Other methods have been and are being tried, but that known as the "double tillage system" the class sorts into the upper half and of the school in half a year and then repeats the same second half, thus, as it were, tilling the educational soil a second time. Occasionally, this system is used only for a subject like mathematics with which so many children have trouble. And what often works so well with the precocious child also be used as a satisfactory method for the slow child to overcome any behind or slow to learn.

Winnipeg, Sept. 15. —(By the Canadian Press) — Charged with theft of $901,175.30 from the University of Manitoba John A. Machray, K.C., former bursar, appeared in provincial police court today and was remanded for one week, without plea.

The remand was requested by Detective Counsel A. E. Hoskins, K.C., and was consented to by John Allen Prud'homme, Attorney-General.

Mr. Hoskins asked for a week's time to go over with Mr. Machray an item of more than $300,000 in cheques issued regarding investments in every class of securities had not been produced or were incomplete. Up to this time he had been unable to check over the item.

Unlike his previous appearance Machray walked into the court room today without assistance. He was tanned and color of face and neck of his hand on his head as he sat at the counsel table waiting for his case to be called.

Attorney-General Bancroft is suffering from cancer and apart from his appearance here in court is not permitted to leave his home. His physician accompanied him.

No Statement Made Respecting Sale of Beer and Wine in Hotels

Advice Received From Secretary of Premier Henry

London, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP). Joseph F. Pack, London, who sought an injunction with the Ontario Cabinet regarding "contemplated amendments to the liquor license act" has received advice that Premier of the Province has not made any statement regarding any such amendment. The advice, contained in a letter from G. A. Foster, secretary to Hon. George S. Henry, is the newest development in the liquor row which followed the recent Toronto visit of Premier Henry and his talk on beer and wines in their establishments.

"The Prime Minister has made no statement with regard to amending the liquor control act," Mr. Foster says in his letter. "He has replied to one newspaper as stating that the sale of beer and wine in hotels might be considered, but this report was incorrect and misleading as stated above."

News reports of the hoteliers's call on the Premier last week stated that the Premier favored the form of permitting the consumption of beer and wine in hotel dining rooms might be worked out and that consideration was being considered the matter—but under no circumstances would the establishment of cocktail bars be permitted in the Province.

Joe pulled the youngster to the bank, but was unable to hold his hair, held him for a moment, then as he felt himself weakening and going down, was compelled to release his grip and splash to shore alone.

Lifesavers recovered the body of Jankowski ten minutes later.

As at present outlined, the railwaymen be limited to 2,600 miles per month, instead of the present higher service or the equivalent in passenger service, thus providing work for the unemployed.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Scented Tablets of Magnesia Bisurated

Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive acidity, which should be shunned, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Physicians declare that indigestion is too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, causing pain, gas, sour risings, heartburn and many distressing symptoms. Foods ferment and sours, creating gas which presses against the walls of the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the heart causing palpitation and affecting the heart.

It is the height of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with cathartics and purgatives which only add to the distress by further irritating the bowels.

The safe, sane and proper treatment is to neutralize the excess acid and gas, and for this purpose Bisurated Magnesia is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Bisurated Magnesia (to powder or tablet form) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach troubles. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Correct Manners

AT TABLE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—When one is served a dessert, when finished, should the spoon be left in the dish, or put on the small plate under the dessert dish?

2.—When ordering with a man friend, should one give the order to him or the waitress oneself?

3.—When the knife is resting on the plate, should the sharp edge be on the inside or outside?

4.—When one has finished eating should the prongs of the fork be facing up or down?

5.—When salad is served as a side dish (tomato and lettuce salad) should the lettuce be eaten? If it should, may the knife and fork be used or just the fork?

6.—If the salad is ordered as a full lunch, should the lettuce be eaten?

F.

1.—The spoon is left in the dessert dish.

2.—The guest gives her order to the man with whom she is dining, since he is the host. Then the host gives both orders to the waiter.

3.—The sharp edge of the knife should be toward the center of the plate.

4.—This is immaterial. In many foreign countries, the fork is placed with the prongs down, but here almost always the fork is placed with the prongs up.

5.—The lettuce of a salad is always eaten, if served with an entrée. And I can't imagine anyone's not wishing to eat delicious crisp lettuce leaves!

If a special knife and fork are used for the eating of salad, then we use both, if we wish. At least there should be another fork placed for the lettuce.

6.—Yes, I never can understand where this idea comes from, this idea of not eating lettuce. Why in the world shouldn't it be eaten?

INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I shall be obliged if you will advise what is the proper thing for me to do. We are eight sisters and brothers and all have families. One of our nephews is to be married soon and I am the only one invited to the wedding. I would like to go but I don't like to hurt the rest of my family.

M.

I don't dare presume to give a suggestion about such an intimate and personal family matter! It is indeed extraordinary that only you were invited to the wedding . . . or is there some special family circumstance that explains this?

Perhaps you can see why you don't go, since you wish to go. After all, it's usually fairly unreasonable for us not to accept an invitation just because someone else hasn't one.

GREETING CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending out season's greeting cards, invitations, announcements and so forth to a married man, is it ok proper to address them to Mr. and Mrs. even though the wife is not acquainted with the person sending the card?

I say "Yes" and my friend says "no".

Please let us know who is right.

Mr.

You win! It is a very definite social error to address this kind of formal invitation or announcement or greeting only to Mr., or only to Mrs. And it makes no difference whether we do or do not know both Mr. and Mrs.

THE GROOM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I am to be married next month. It will be an afternoon affair. Do I have to call for the bride at her home, and take her to the church, or does she go with her people?

2.—Should I send her flowers, or should I take them to her myself?

1.—The bride goes to the church usually with her father or whoever is to present her in marriage. You and the best man go to the church from your home together.

2.—You arrange with the florist, exactly the kind of flowers and the construction of the bouquet consulting with your bride-to-be about her preference concerning this), and instruct him to have the bouquet sent at a definite time, some time before she is to leave her home.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Fitting Coiffures to Faces

No woman can afford to wander very far afield from the style trend. To feel comfortable with this fact important matter of appearance she must belong. Keeping step with style standards is a rejuvenating exercise. Drop out of the parade and there descends upon one a sense of being dated in the past. Then the beauty jig is up.

It is enough to exist a stern-nosed woman whose pet phrase was "I wear what is becoming, not what is fashionable." She's gone now, poor schooled creature. The modern femme, has learned her lesson; she knows that if a thing be out of style it is no longer becoming. Perhaps she was one of those who stuck to her pompadour and her figure eight atop her dome when all the other women of her set were neatly bobbed and water-waved. She won't make a mistake like that again. If was a matter of principle with her, she said. Why stick to a principle and look like a frump?

Paint done.

There's no excuse for any woman to be without a chic, smart coiffure. It she doesn't wish to be snipped close, she can be snipped long. If she must have a few rags of hair at the nape of her neck, for the good of her soul or something, she can have them. That is, if she sees to it that they are properly packed with no jackstraw ends emerging when she gets hot under the collar.

Designers of hairdresses have done themselves proud. They have plotted, planned and devised all manner of clever arrangements. The woman's job is to find the design that best suits her celestial countenance.

With eyes in her head and mirrors everywhere, it is surprising that the long-faced woman will drag her hair down in slim strands over her ears, or let it extend to her shoulder blades. The length of the face can be lessened by arranging waved locks down over the forehead. Or by plucking upon the noble brow a smart fringe. And there is no length to the back of the head when hair is cut fairly high at the rear.

Hair should be a becoming frame for the feminine portrait. Lines that the coiffure takes on have an influence upon the features. Every feature should be considered—forehead, eyes, mouth, especially the nose. And of course the profile. A triple mirror should be in the possession of every woman. It's easy enough to put up a good coiffure front. But side and back view is equally important.

If the coiffure does not bring out beauty points, it is a failure. If forehead and hair line are blessed with pulchritude, they are worthy of being displayed; it is a beauty crime to cover them. The low forehead lends itself to the middle parting, and a simple mode of dress, though if the eyes are set close together the middle parting is the worst possible choice.

When the nose is large it is a mistake to wear the hair brushed back or even regularly. Fluff is a relief to coarse features. A soft fringe on the forehead takes attention from the nose.

Clever women know intuitively what style of coiffure suits them. Those who haven't the knack had better place their problems before an experienced hairdresser who will know at a glance what design will prove becoming, impart an appearance of distinction.

Fashion Flashes

Just one satin outfit for evening seems to be the rule of almost every fashionable centre. Whether it's outfit; no matter how many other fabrics are liked. A stunning new ensemble is off-white lustrous satin and has a matching jacket trimmed with double bands of gray fox to stress shoulder breadth.

Wonders can be done with black chiffon. This fabric parties a blue or green frock with tiny pleated ruffling edging the diagonal seams of the skirt. From a low dip on one hip and a short bodice blouses over a deep belt. There is a slip-on cape held by three creamy gardenias.

Forebeads are back when it comes to hats, since Madame Agnes introduced the forehead bow. One of her new models is in dark blue velvet, with ruby bows almost covering the forehead. With the hat a red veil with large square meshes.

Look out for your trifles and put them in an evening bag that really does hold things. A new model is white quilted satin and flat like book-covers and has room for everything. It is trimmed with a tassel of green glass suspended from a black and green obi.

There is no need to wear a standardized suit alone so many individual styles are available like these. A smart suit has a jacket trimmed with a mink scarf with one bone and that can be buttoned to the coat, while the other and may be crossed or tied over in front. The material is new velvety woolen and the color is wood-rose.

In the green of the new tones of that color are most flattering shades. A coat made of the new green, but lighter than bottle green, has a high waist and a black galyak collar which ends in a deep point in a cowchman. Up one side of the coat is a series of buttoned pockets of the fur. The material is woolen in a suple finish.

What is the PRICE OF BEAUTY?

Without health there can be little natural beauty. The wise woman knows that the condition of her health shows in her face, her complexion, and in her eyes.

She takes care to avoid constipation. This treacherous ailment frequently causes headaches, sallow skin, pimples, premature aging.

Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science found that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" in easy form like the intestines. And Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Also iron to enrich the blood. Thus it helps build up the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than absorbing your system with pills and drugs that often habit-forming!

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

YES! AND MUMMIE SAYS THEY'RE AWFULLY GOOD FOR US, TOO.

Crisp, Crunchy Crackels always draw a smile . . .

THE perkest : : : crispest : : : most deliciously flavoured cereal ever created! That's Crackels. No wonder all the boys and girls who have tasted Crackels say there is nothing like it.

Not just one cereal, but a blend of the choicest energy parts of different grains. So nourishing that mothers everywhere welcome it.

Little golden pillows : : : so light they float on top of milk or cream . . . so crisp that the last tiny Crackel in the dish is as crisp as the first. "Oven-blending", a process we originated, gives it a flavour no cereal has ever had before.

Serve Crackels at breakfast tomorrow. See how it lures dulled summer appetites. Note how beaming little faces ask for more and more. Can you imagine an easier way to get children to take all the healthful milk they need?

All grocers have Crackels. So order a package today. There are twelve big helpings in each box.

Ray Starr Pitches Smart Game For St. Louis

(By Gale Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Chicago Cubs were a little nearer the National League pay-off today, but they still lacked a good southpaw pitcher to throw against the Yankees in the World Series.

Trying desperately to plug the one glaring weakness of his club, Manager Charlie Grimm yesterday tried out Carroll Yerkes, a slim pretender from Albany of the International League, and the experiment very nearly cost him a ball game.

Yerkes, boasting a fine record with a seventh place club, including three shutouts, was sent in to pitch the last three innings against the Giants and see if he could hold a 5 to 3 lead. He did well, except that in the eighth round Gilbert Englisch popped one of his low curves into the bleacher stands, and in the ninth with two away, Al Orsi sent another out of sight to tie the score.

Cubs Finally Won

The Cubs finally won 8 to 7, when Kiki Cuyler belted a home run in the 11th round that was not until after Grimm was convinced he would have to look further for a World Series southpaw. He has while May, but the veteran has not had a good year. Lon Warneke lurled the last two innings against the Giants to receive credit for his 22nd victory.

Pittsburgh recovered from a brief slump to trim the Boston Braves 3 to 2, but failed to gain an inch. They still were three games behind the Cubs today, with the schedule growing short. They would have to win all their remaining 11 games while the Cubs were losing six out of ten to take the pennant. It doesn't seem likely.

St. Louis turned up with another brilliant pitching prospect in Ray Starr, young righthander from Rochester. Making his first start for the Cards since early spring, Starr held Brooklyn to two widely spaced singles and won handily 3 to 0. The Phillies downed Cincinnati 7 to 4, to make a sweep of the three game series.

American League

The Yankees suffered their first defeat since clinching the American League flag, when the Chicago White Sox beat them 8 to 5. Lefty Gomez was the victim, breaking a seven-game winning streak for the Bronxmen. Walter Stewart of the St. Louis Browns came out best in a tight mound duel with George Earnshaw of the Athletics, 3 to 2.

Cleveland pounded two Boston pitchers for 13 hits, including a home run by Kahm and Cissell, to win their 16th game in the past 17 with the Red Sox, 7 to 2. Kamm also hit a triple and a single. The Detroit Tigers raked out Washington, 8 to 7, in 10 innings. Tommy Bridges didn't allow the Senators a hit in the last four frames.

SOMERVILLE A DARK HORSE

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16 —Memories of Webbie Somerville and Bobby Jones' sudden demise were before Champion Pancho Guinet as he faced the slender young Nebraskan, Johnny Goodman, in a semi-final skirmish of the National Amateur Golf Championship today.

It was the first time the unheralded youth from Omaha, who shocked the experts by winning the mound of the great Jones in the first round of the California event. And the 22 year old star, judging as Guinet put the game as amazing to the tournament, stood ready to give another similar surprise.

Along with this pair in the battle of Five Farms was another veteran, Jesse Guilford, the 1921 champion and Guinet's Boston neighbor, and Ross (Sandy) Somerville, four times former Canadian champion.

Somerville's fine play yesterday left him a slight favorite over Guilford and a victory for him would give the tournament its first international title since Jones took Phil Perkins of England in 1928.

Guilford and Somerville's match to the semi-finals was comparatively easy.

Rally in Last Innings Wins For Enterprise 12-10

Tweed, Sept. 16 (Special)— A rally in the late innings fell short by three runs and Tweed was forced to take the small end of a 12 to 10 score against Enterprise on Wednesday afternoon in a game replete with everything that goes to make up a ball game. D. Smith, young southpaw essayed to pitch for Tweed and allowed only four hits and two runs in the five innings during which he toiled. In that time Tweed accumulated a lead of two runs on six hits and a walk. In the sixth Callaghan took up the mound duties for Tweed. In the seventh and eighth his support blew completely and a total of nine runs crossed the plate to put the game on ice for the visitors. Tweed rallied in the seventh and scored two runs and again in the eighth when three came in. Mersey stole second, third and home in the same round. Smith in addition to pitching fine ball chipped in with five after hard runs in left field and helped himself to three. Hale batting for Callaghan, a fair day's work for one player. Greene made a spectacular catch in the ninth while Mersey collected three hits in four tries.

Jackson and Wyatt divided the mound duties for Enterprise, with the former having a slight edge in effectiveness allowing seven runs in six innings as against six runs in three innings.

Kelley and Pobber were the heavy hitters and providing the fielding features.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

It is almost an assurity that the Toronto Maple Leafs will not train in Belleville this fall. It is too bad that this opportunity slipped up as the Belleville Exhibition and Toronto players wanted to come to the Quinte City for their training period. Mr. Smythe assured those interested that the local guarantees for the training of the world's champions was ideal at Belleville but he wanted to be assured of ice in the local arena by the first of November. As the Leafs could not get this assurity they will undoubtedly do their fall practical training in Kingston this year. It is too bad that such a sporting event should slip through through the local sportsmen's hands as the having of the Toronto Maple Leafs in Belleville for their annual fall training would have meant many dollars to the city at large. Maybe another year suitable arrangements can be made and the great Toronto Maple Leafs, or some other major league hockey team, will train in the Quinte city.

Promoter Bobby Samson announced from the ring during Wednesday night's wrestling bouts that he would endeavor to match Masked Marvel and Scotty MacDougall back in Belleville soon. Bobby wants the Marvel to meet the latter's ferrell of $250.00 to assure his appearance and he thinks the purse is there though. This "rassling racket" is going over in a big way in Belleville, and as we understand it the Marvel will see better men each succeeding bout as long as he attendance warrants it. Personally we would like to see Bobby come back in a local ring matched against a real grappler. Belleville has had such a main event would draw the extra patronage needed to put the way. One thing certain was proven on Wednesday night and that was "the boxing fraternity do not go for before the wrestling show goes on."

We wonder who the local sportsman was who got up early Thursday morning to suspiciously open the duck shooting season and bag his bag? It seems this hunter of ducks took along a number of live decoys with him, for he was seen patiently a number of hours the disgusted hunter blasted for boat and saw enough when he arrived in Belleville he had no one less decoys in the bag than when he left home. Some duck hunter, or would we say — "the duck, ducked." (?)

We observed an article in the Kingston Whig-Standard the other day commenting on the possible return of Oshawa to the O.H.A. The Kingston scribe boldly came out and suggests that Cobourg be dropped from the league's roster if Oshawa returns. That is a very statement after the work that was done, and no credit can be laid at Kingston's door for helping the cause along towards getting Cobourg back into the league. It is the hope of the charter members of the league to have the old Central loop back to its former strength in a few years. Baseball is slowly on the upward trend in Eastern Ontario, we believe, and now that the teams are using entirely "home brew" players in the smaller centres, such as Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg and Bowmanville, will be more inclined to return to the fold. As Kingston was never in the old Central league some ten years ago or more; they do not appreciate the brand of ball and the spirit in which it was played those days. One one desire it to see the return of Cobourg and clubs. "Oh won't you bring back those wonderful days," is our favourite song just now.

It will soon be time to think about the future of Belleville's hockey teams. All of last year's players are still available while there may be a couple of new faces out with the intermediates this winter. It is expected that Elwood Dudley will trot out his last year's Cities Service team into the intermediate ranks while "Slew" Pender will again be at the helm of the juniors. With this new age-old rule in effect the players will need more coaching along those lines this winter. The players can commit offsides two thirds the length of the ice this season. The rule will speed up the game considerably and should add at least two goals a game to the scoring column.

Football pictures seem to be the feature of the day just now at the local theatre. Over the week-end, with Johnnie Mack Brown as the star half-back, the all-star football hero of the year, Notre Dame's nemesis, is playing at the Belle Theatre. Constables will undoubtedly have their hands full to spend at the matinee on Saturday as Johnnie Mack Brown's forward passing shown in the picture. Football pictures are exciting, thrilling and plenty of action is assured the patrons. Coach Lou Sheils, of the collegiate squad, had the kids over again last evening and they are evidently getting the knack of several nose out of their legs. The local collegiate football schedule should soon be out for publication.

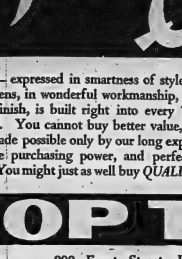
Manager R. A. Fanning of the local Victorias has received an official communication from the O.R.A.A. regarding fixture games, but the Vics are not yet in receipt of news of North Bay and Barrie. The two northern teams are playing the third and deciding game at Huntsville on Saturday. Manager Fanning is endeavoring to have the third game of the series played at Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. In the meantime Coach Thommy Gorse will hold particular practices in order to have his players keep their eye on the ball.

ASPECTS OF AGREEMENTS TOPIC OF ADDRESS

Exeter, Ont., Sept. 16— Aspects of the agreements signed at the Imperial Economic Conference in Ottawa insofar as they affect agricultural interests were dealt with by the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Dominion Minister of Railways and Canals, in a speech here last night which opened the South Huron Federal by-election campaign. The by-election will be held on October 3.

Dr. Manion spoke exhaustively with the various conference trade pacts and their hoped-for effect upon agriculture. Livestock breeders and growers of primary products, he said, would benefit as a result of the undertaking between the United Kingdom and Canada.

Dr. Manion spoke in support of the candidature of Louis H. Hader, Conservative standard bearer, Dashwood farmer, and Warden of Huron County.



William A. Golding, Mayor of Seaforth, will be Liberal candidate, and William W. Cooper of Kippen, Independent Farmer Nationalist nominee.

NO ATTRACTION

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP)—"Lovers' Lane," picturesque walk on Parliament Hill, is no longer an attraction for William Murray. After a tour of the lane, William climbed a wall to take a short cut home, lost his balance and fell 15 feet. Five stitches were required to close a gash in his forehead; and he is resting in a hospital today.

JAPAN COMING TO THE FORE

The next Olympic games are nearly four years away, but we were predict that the United States will not take as many track and field titles as she won at Los Angeles, and the smiling Nipponese will furnish her with the strongest opposition, will be Japan. The merry little Japanese are quite likely to win the bulk of the honors at Berlin in 1936. Japan scored her first Olympic swimming victory at Amsterdam four years ago when Yoshiyuki Tsuruta won the 200 meters breaststroke, established a new record and caused the "hinomaru" flag to be hauled up and masthead for the first time in Olympic Games competition. That first victory whetted the appetite of Japan. When her Olympic amateurs returned to the Orient they had thousands of feet of slow-motion film, showing every Olympic swimmer of note in action giving precise and slow detail of every phase of their particular stroke. These slow-motion pictures the army of Japanese coaches put through a set routine in order to work out blue-prints of a "100 per cent crawl stroker". They were to take the improved form of the Australian crawl that had been developed in the United States and perfected it for Japanese use: More than 100 motion picture cameras, operated by Japanese bands, have said the foundation for a 1936 triumph. At this moment several hundred Japanese are laying plans to beat the world four years hence and anyone who watched the Japanese swim in the Olympic Swimming Stadium will refuse to predict that they will fail. It would be a foolish prediction. z

FOOTBALL MURDER IS THEME OF "70,000 WITNESSES"

Walter Clark, crack half-back of the State eleven, is murdered as he is about to carry the ball across University's goal line and a winning touchdown. A crowd of 70,000 watches him die. His death is shrouded in mystery.

"70,000 Witnesses," the film which opens on the two-feature program at the Belle Saturday and Monday, is a new kind of football story and a new kind of murder mystery. Murder at a football game is strange enough in itself, but added to that is the peculiary mysterious manner of the victim's death. No one is near him when he falls and there are no wounds or marks of any kind on his body. The motive is known; the man who wanted him out of the game is known. But who actually did the killing and what killed him remain a mystery until the final exciting moments of the picture.

By skilful handling, the film places the audience in the same position as the 70,000 spectators at the local football game. The audience in the theatre actually sees every one of the players, and the realization that the murder has been committed only after the final solution. Not for a minute does suspicion fall on the guilty man.

The cast, which is of uniform excellence, includes Johnnie Mack Brown as Buck, John Mack Brown as Clark, Dorothy Jordan as Clark's sister, Charlie Ruggles as the newspaper reporter, David Landau as the detective, George Reeves, Donald as the State football coach, Lee Cody as the gambler, Howard Thompson as the team doctor and Big Boy Williams, George Reeves, Walter Hiers, Paul Page, Reed Howes and Dick Jarvis in supporting roles.

Brent—Stanwyck

George Brent's film screen's new sensational leading man, plays the leading masculine role in "Fast Pursuit Price," Barbara Stanwyck's latest starring picture for Warner Bros., the second feature offering on the same program. "Fast Pursuit Price," which is based on Arthur Stringer's novel serialized in the Saturday Evening Post, is a powerful romance and drama of a Night Club singer transported to the Dakota wheat belt. Brent also worked with Miss Stanwyck in "So Big".

Lyle Talbot, Hardie Albright, David Landau and Leila Bennett are included in the film's large cast.

TO TRY STUDIO OPERAS IN LONDON

LONDON, Sept. —(By the Canadian Press)— London will have broadcasting opera if a series of British broadcasting corporation experiments in studio opera prove a success as anticipated. These experiments will be made during the coming autumn and winter.

The British Broadcasting Corporation desires to produce a real microphone technique for opera. Most listeners are aware that operas relays suffer from certain annoying phase defects. The most serious drawback is that the singer on the stage cannot always sing direct into the microphone. Val Gielgud, the productions director, and Adrian Boult, music director of the B. B. C. have, therefore, collaborated in a number of so-called "pot-pourri" operas for production in the ordinary broadcasting studios. A new series of these for the winter fan has been founded by the Corporation in an old house at Nightingale Lane, Clapham. It is to be known the British Broadcasting Corporation Research Department, Clapham, and will be devoted to technical problems of wireless broadcasting. The present tiny staff concentrating on the ultra-short wave transmitters to be used in experiments with the new seven-metre transmitter on the roof of Broadcasting House.

FIRST MAN TO "POUR TEA AT EX"

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—Tea was poured by Controller James Simpson on the balcony of the women's building at the Exhibition. He just delivered an address in which he stressed equal privileges and opportunities for men and women, turning the usual tables, he put them into practice and ranks as the first man to pour tea at the Exhibition. He thanked his wife who was expected to pour tea did not arrive. Mr. Simpson enjoyed it. Chuckling, he said, "I have just now discovered that women should have an equal place in industry with men, why shouldn't the same hold in society?"

Arms Equality Demands Must First be Allowed Ultimatum of Germany

Will Not Join Commission Until Demands Are Met

Henderson Calls on Nations to Observe Versailles Treaty

Berlin, Sept. 16 (UP).—The Government of Chancellor Franz von Papen Thursday officially notified Arthur Henderson, chairman of the World disarmament conference, that it is unable to participate in the conference further until Germany's demands for military equality are recognized.

Official notification of the Government's intention to withdraw from the conference came after the budgetary commission of the conference had met in Geneva without German representation.

The commission had postponed its session for three days in the hope that Berlin would send representatives.

Henderson Backs Demands

London, Sept. 16 (AP).—Germany's demand for equality in armaments was upheld unofficially here Thursday from Arthur Henderson, president of the World disarmament Conference.

Speaking at the National Peace Council, Mr. Henderson, who was Foreign Secretary in the last British Labor cabinet, called upon the allied powers of the World War to carry out the disarmament provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

"Why shouldn't the World War allies get together and recognize that what was said in their names in 1919 must bind them?" Mr. Henderson asked.

"Why should they not publicly declare that they mean to support Germany's position of inferiority with all possible haste and restore Germany's equality in military status?"

On Saturday Mr. Henderson will leave for Geneva to make preparations for the resumption of discussion of the disarmament conference. Admitting frankly that he was dissatisfied with the results of the conference thus far, he asserted it would be an "intolerable jest" if it failed.

"Where is such a volume of opinion among delegates in favor of immediate ends and direct (German) claims to equality, he continued, that the issue can be settled virtually to the advantage of Germany but to the advantage of Europe and the whole world."

Failure Would Be Disaster

The former foreign secretary expressed optimism over attempts to work still facing the Geneva conference.

"Failure would be a veritable disaster in the life of Europe and the world," he said. "It would be missing a great historical opportunity. It would be an intolerable jest, an ducah being the case no responsible statesman in any quarter can be found to face such a position.

"In every ground—moral, economic, political and material—the case for disarmament by international agreement is overwhelming.

"Let us remember that if we fail, it must make definite progress or the nations will be compelled to face those sinister and disastrous possibilities which so often have disturbed and even polarized the stream of international life."

The mass of direct German opinion would rejoice in disarmament, Mr. Henderson said, but

"We should greet with enthusiasm the abolition of monster battleships, submarines, tanks, heavy land guns and, more than anything, the dreadful form of warfare, air bombing.

Tired of Arms Makers' Tyranny

"At last we are tired of the tyranny of the armament mongers and are ready for any measure that will put an end to it.

He asserted he could not believe that any statesman who came to be assembled at Geneva in the course of the next few days are prepared to take responsibility for encouraging a competitive race in armaments and its inevitable danger of war."

"Resolutions, substantial and comprehensive, are what world opinion demands and what the conference itself has declared essential," he continued.

STOLEN CAR IS USED IN HOLD-UP

Police in This City Keep Sharp Lookout For Missing Car

Shortly after noon Thursday, the Belleville police departments were notified to be on a careful lookout for a Chevrolet coach bearing the license plates numbered NU-85. The car was stolen in Oshawa early Wednesday morning, after having a hold-up at Port Perry shortly afterward.

The machine was stolen from in front of the owner's residence in Oshawa and before the Oshawa police had been informed the hold-up and robbery of the Chinese laundry had been reported at Port Perry. The license of the car used in the hold-up was the same as the car stolen at Oshawa.

Another Buick coach, colored blue was also reported stolen in Oshawa shortly afternoon, with the license plates of which bore the number NU-46. The local police are keeping a sharp lookout for the two missing cars.

West Hastings Prohibition Union Pass Three Resolutions

A meeting of the West Hastings Prohibition Union was held in the L.C.A. Thursday afternoon, Dr. W. S. MacTavish presiding. There was a large attendance and three resolutions were

"That while commending the government in its endeavouring to enforce the L.C.A. this Prohibition Union regrets to see the government announcement that it is the intention of the government to introduce legislation permitting drinking of wine and beer in the dining rooms of hotels. In the opinion of this Union this would be a retrograde interest, making it more difficult to enforce the present law and besides it would create a situation which are trying to conduct respectable houses. By increasing the number of places where liquor may be legally consumed, the way is opened for an increase in the total amount of intoxicants with all its attendant evils.

Resolution No. 2. "The two arguments urged in support of the proposed legislation, namely, that it would increase the tourist traffic in the province, and that it would increase the revenue of the province.

"In the opinion of this Union these arguments are specious, but entirely fallacious. In the first place it be said that the tourist who desires to drink beer does so now in spite of the law by obtaining a tourist's permit. The better class of tourists do not desire liquor for themselves, nor do they prefer to see it in use surrounded by those who have become convivial through the drinking of intoxicants. In the second it has been stated and the statement has not been contradicted that illicit traffic is heavier in Ontario than in the United States, and therefore concerning the consumption of liquor are less stringent than in this province.

"The second argument is a mere assumption and has never yet been shown, nor can it be shown that an increase in the liquor traffic in a community or a nation can become wealthy through indulgence in intoxicants.

Resolution No. 3.—"This Union commends support to the Provincial Union in any well-directed effort to investigate the charges of those who would seek a relaxation of our present liquor law."

Large Plum Shipment to United Kingdom May Open Market For Belleville City and District

George F. Ostrom Conceived Idea of Selling Surplus Crop

1500 BUSHELS

Shipment Goes Forward on S. S. Laurentian on Saturday

Thousands of trees on hundreds of farms in Prince Edward County, loaded with one of the best crops in years, bowed their laden branches with the weight of the fruit, which threatened to rot on the ground before it could be used in the canning plants. There was no market for them. Plums, especially blue Damsons, were going to waste.

George F. Ostrom conceived the idea of selling the surplus crop in the United Kingdom and the Continent. He set about to find a market. Once he manage to make arrangements with local residents to handle the bulk of the crop, the question of transportation arose. Today, where a slightly less surplus prevailed Some farmers even decided not to pick their crop, and allowed the space with a more lucrative crop next season.

The situation worried one local producer much. Somewhere in the Empire, he imagined, there must be a market for such a crop, but not the trouble was to find it. Considerable communication ensued, by cable and by telephone. Today, those same plums are being carefully picked packed and shipped, hauled to Graham's cold storage building in the village where they are being reclaned repacked and prepared for shipment to the port of Liverpool, England. A new market had been found for a surplus crop, which heretofore, rot on the trees, all because there was no place to turn. In the meantime, a daybreak, the steamer Laurentian will sail from Montreal harbor with 1,500 bu'rel hampers of the plums packed in the county. Today from the burdened trees of Prince Edward County.

On each hamper stands out the words "Empire Fruit." Underneath, in smaller letters, are the words "Produce man, well known in the plum industry, who is largely responsible for the finding of the new market and who has taken charge of the possibility of shipping to England the initial carry, Mr. Geo. Ostrom, Belleville, Ontario, Canada."

Busy For Days

For the past few days, worrying far into the night, long lines of cars, trucks and wagons have rolled assortment of ancient democrat wagons, with all sizes and shapes of crates boxes containing the plums, have been pulling up to the loading platform on Finnacle street, where they are being unloaded, checked and paid for in cash. Men inside the building, twenty or more, are carefully packing the fruit, replacing it in clean paper-lined bushel hampers and then loading them neatly in two refrigerator cars for the sailing. The place hums with activity. More cars and trucks with more plums with loads from five to 10 bushels each are arriving every few minutes.

"This is only a start," declared Mr. Ostrom, who was interviewed on the job Wednesday morning.

"Just a start," he reiterated. "I see a great future for this immediate district once we overcome the first few barriers of commercial which are always present whenever we try to find a new outlet or market. Once we manage to make arrangements to handle the bulk of this section of the Province will be producing more. Notice each of those crates or hampers bearing the name of Belleville. Most of the fruit which is being packed will find themselves distributed throughout the United Kingdom. There is a future for this immediate district, and I intend to see that quite much investigation to see."

Mr. Ostrom spoke with an optimism, which was contagious. It was made all the more so by a few facts and figures he gave out. Somself regarding further shipments which will follow on the heels of this and re-shipment of plums. Details are not yet ready for publication, but it is hoped to have them within a few week's time. No Trace of Atlantic Fliers But Vigil Being Kept on Route

Explosion Reported, But Air Ministry Doubts Plane Involved

Rome, Sept. 16.—Every airport and every wireless station in Italy was on the alert today for word of the lost transatlantic airplane, America-Bremen, many observers reported the attempted nonstop flight from New York to Rome.

On the Spanish, Portuguese and French coasts almost vigilance was maintained, with coastal patrol boats scanning the sea and aerial dinary ranges in the hope of finding the plane, in which a pilot, a wireless man and a navigator, a physician left New York Tuesday morning.

Air Minister Italo Balbo and the senior Italian air force valiey joined the out the day for word of the plane's whereabouts, but by nightfall it was apparent hope for the safety of the six occupants was rapidly waning.

Italian airmen, who are noted for daily segregations, were ordered because Pilot William Ulbrich and his companions started on the last leg of the month and became their flight was made during a total eclipse of the moon in Italy; they believe the plane was lost in the sea.

No word of the flight's progress was received after the liner France at sea 450 miles west of Lands End, England, reported that "an aluminum colored" plane passed, flying northward, at 5:30 p.m., New York time, Wednesday.

Seen Burning on Ocean

The plane was sighted by the Nicholas lightship about a mile or so off shore. The lightship fired distress signals.

When the lifeboat and tug reached the spot the master of the life vessel reported to them he had seen the plane on the water with its engines running.

Hydro Firm as Gibraltar Commissioner Maguire Tells New Association

Defends Policies of Sir Adam Beck in Handling Affairs

ELECT OFFICERS

One Delegate Objects to Certain Workings of Commission

Midland, Ont., Sept. 16.—Tentatively formed at Collingwood last June, the Georgian Bay Municipal Electric Association yesterday became an accomplished fact when that body amalgamated with the Georgian Bay Association at a joint convention. The new association embraces all the Hydro municipalities in the Georgian Bay System.

Delegates from the municipalities concerned—about 100—heard addresses by C. Alfred Maguire, of the Ontario Hydro Commission, after whose remarks were elected an executive. W. H. Gurney, of Wingham, was chosen president.

Mr. Maguire, in his address, declared the present Hydro Commission was carrying out the traditions of the late Sir Adam Beck in the matter of power cost, while building up an organization, which was financially "as firm as Gibraltar."

Regarding criticism of Hydro rates, Mr. Maguire declared organization to do nothing else but gather data would be necessary if Hydro replied to every criticism levelled at it, as it cheerfully defended the policies of Hydro.

Act Only on Advice

"The purchase of power from private companies," he said, "was only on the advice of the engineering and accounting staff."

As proof that the commission run the Hydro business on economical lines, Mr. Maguire quoted figures to show that the Toronto Power Co. had saved a total of $2,349,876 since entering the system in 1918, and that in 1931 alone the saving was $1,231,489.

The speaker emphasized the great benefit to the rural parts of Ontario conferred by Hydro. Lines have been built, he said, in territory which private companies never would have served and now 70 per cent of the population even of Ontario is served by Hydro.

Voiced Objection

Mayor W. N. Craig of Barrie voiced objection to municipalities being charged for debits in the 12th power bill and also for extra charges on the interest on bonds payable in United States funds. "They say these charges belong to the municipalities but it looks to me as if it is written in the auditors cow" he said.

H. C. Pierdon, chief accountant of the Hydro Commission, explained the details of the Hydro System of accounting in connection.

Besides President Gurney other members of the executive elected were: First Vice President, J. H. Saunders, Owen Sound; Second Vice President, David Hurrie, Midland.

Executive Committee — L. S. Breadner, Goodwood; C. A. Welsh Sunderland; A. Menary, Grand Valley; W. J. Cousins, Markdale; John Keltie, Hanover; Dr. H. Fowler, Teeswater, and Dr. A. Marcus, Kincardine.

Belleville Incorporated 1907 Was on March6, 1834

Magistrate Mikel has called attention to the fact that on March 6, 1834, Belleville was incorporated as a Police Village by a statute passed by the Legislature Assembly of Upper Canada so that in a year and five months, namely, March 6, 1834, Belleville will be entitled to be one hundred years old and it would be fitting if we made some range for a celebration to commemorate this event. It would be the same year, 1924, Toronto will celebrate its existence for one hundred years as a town. It will also be the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the purchase of the Mohawk Indians of the Bay of Quinte district of that time was known as Mecklenburg, but later Governor Simcoe changed the name to Hastings district.

The Act recites the following reason for the incorporation: "Whereas, the Town of Belleville is the population of the Town of Belleville, in the Midland District, it is necessary that the same should be governed by law exists for the internal regulation of the same."

Fixed Qualifications

The statute fixed the qualification of voters as being male inhabitant householders of the age of ten pounds per year.

The first Board of Bridge Street was the first ward and South and East of Bridge Street was the second ward. Each ward was empowered to elect two members and they elected by the ballot of the inhabitants of the President.

The members of the council were required to be British subjects and freeholders to the assessed value of twenty-five pounds or to have occupied for one year to be elected. The Police Village was to be held the first Monday in April following. The election was to be held by the returning officer who was to appoint some person to preside at the poll in each ward. The first meeting of the council was held office it: the first Monday in March and the meeting each year were t.. be held on that date. The first meeting of the council was to be held ten day: after the election.

Gives Great Power

The Corporation was given power to m ke by-laws—to regulate and license victualing houses, to regulate the rates of wharfage, to regulate wharves, quays, weighing of hay, measuring of wood, carters, slaughter-houses, to appoint fire wardens, fire engineers, and firemen, to permit any person to stop any one riding or driving immoderately in the streets and make other regulations and impose penalties for their violation.

The Clerk of the Peace was directed to select from the "assessment of the Township of Thurlow the property to be assessed within the village.

The Council was authorized to appoint a Road Surveyor, a Bailiff, Assessor, Collector and a Treasurer.

New streets were to be not less than sixty-six feet wide.

All sidewalks were required to be published in one newspaper within the village and the Council proceed up in four conspicuous places.

The Council was authorized to borrow one thousand pounds for the erection of market house and fire engine and for the purchase of a fire engine. The building erected pursuants to this statute was, no doubt, the building at present used as the Belleville Conservatory of Music, probably, nearly one hundred years old.

Two years later, in 1836, this Statute was repealed and another one passed incorporating for the Police Village of Belleville was passed.

The council at once in the history of Belleville who will not be allowed to pass without suitable commemoration ceremonies.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"But I was," she blurred out. "Kim, here's what I mean. When I saw you smiling at that girl that night I knew then I'm in the grand story! And lately you've been giving out every night End saying to Mae—Mae—Mae crying now, and her face was drawn and white.

"Kim, I shouldn't go to pieces like this." She knew that he hated to see her cry. She was looking at him with an expression of actual dislike in his eyes. "But I can't help crying. If you only knew how sick the baby's been tonight—and you were not home. Kim, I've been so jealous and unhappy the last month or so."

"I don't see why you should be jealous," he said.

"Any woman who loves a man is jealous when he seems to be interested in some other woman. Of course, I know you love me and the baby."

"Well, then, what are you having hysterics about?" He spoke briefly and brutally. Then he went on, now that mama hasn't anything to do, let me tell you something, Mary Faith. I'm tired of coming home and meet me at the door with a smile and not have to wonder if you have to worry about me and other women. If I don't mind all the time, it's your own fault! You hadn't figured it out that way, had you?"

He picked up his hat and went out. The door slammed behind him. Mary Faith stood where he had left her, wringing her hands in genuine pain at the unfairness of the things he had just said to her. She knew that they were unfair and untrue — and yet she felt that somehow or other she had failed him. It was her job to hold him, and she had failed. She knew that what he demanded from life was gayety and good cheer, and the reason he didn't get what he wanted at home, he looked elsewhere.

"But how could I laugh when the baby was sick?" Mary Faith went on thinking, and the more she thought the more angry she became. "And how could I smile when Kim came home after an evening with that girl—and pretend that I didn't know where he'd been?"

But pretty soon small he men who didn't look for amusement and love-making all of the time. There must be husbands who shared the burden of illness and anxiety with their wives. Men who realized that marriage and children and homemaking aren't "just a matter of habit" as Mrs. Puckett would probably have expressed it.

Kim was like a spoiled boy, Mary Faith decided. There was no use in failing to him; the thing to do was to stand by and wait for him to grow up.

He did not come home that night. The next morning she telephoned to the office. Mr. Farrell had come in a few minutes ago, the telephone girl told her, but he had gone out again.

He was safe then.

"Safe and sulking," said Mary Faith to herself. She wondered where he had spent the night, and decided that in all probability he had gone downtown with Jack Maldon.

CHAPTER XXXVI

At noon he came home. He had a sore throat and a headache, he said. His hands were hot and dry and his eyes had a look of fever.

As she helped him off with his clothes Mary Faith observed that he had bought himself a new shirt and a new blue and white polka-dotted tie. He had been wearing polka-dotted ties exclusively the last few weeks. Evidently the blond girl in the dress store admired polka dots.

"The things a wife finds out about the woman her husband cares for!" Mary Faith thought bitterly as she closed the top drawer of Kim's dresser upon the tie.

Mary Faith's indignation vanished when she saw that he was sick.

"Oh, gosh, but I'm glad to be here," he sighed as she helped him to bed. "No place like home, Mary Faith."

She went out into the hall and telephoned Dr. Thatcher.

"Kim's sick," she told Mrs. Farrell, who was just coming in from a trip to the library, bringing four books and a box of licorice drops. "I've telephoned for the doctor; it's best to be on the safe side."

"Oh, absolutely!" agreed Mrs. Farrell. She was all agog at the thought of seeing Dr. Thatcher. By the time the doctor arrived, she had changed into a clean house dress and had established herself in a chair at Kim's bedside, where she sat looking much too large for the small room.

"Well, doctor, what's wrong with our boy? Just a little touch of sore throat, I imagine," she said comfortably, when Dr. Thatcher had gone over Kim's chest with a stethoscope. "She's always having a sore throat, you know."

But Dr. Thatcher said it was not sore throat this time, but acute bronchitis. He looked gravely at Mary Faith when he said it.

"Keep the room warm and open the window from the top so that there'll be plenty of fresh air, Mrs. Kim. And don't let this fellow smoke or have anything but water and orange juice. I'll send you a prescription for cough medicine."

His orders sounded simple enough but Mary Faith found them anything but simple to carry out. For Mrs. Farrell opposed her at every turn. When Mary Faith opened the windows from the top she closed them.

"Who ever heard of letting cold air blow in on a sick person?" she would say to Kim. And she would close the door. "I'll make you a sweet thick eggnog, instead of orange juice."

"An eggnog never hurt anybody," she declared and went on mixing one in a tall glass. "Besides Dr. Thatcher used to order them for Kimberley when he was a little boy."

"That was twenty years ago and doctors have changed their ideas on diet and treatments since then," Mary Faith pointed out. But she might have saved her breath, for Mrs. Farrell paid no attention to her.

And so things went on for a week, with Mary Faith doing her best to carry out the doctor's orders and Mrs. Farrell doing her best to thwart her at every turn. But at the end of the week, in spite of all this, Kim was better. He got up for Sunday dinner and afterward sat before the fire and read the papers, until four o'clock.

Then he began to run around the block." Mary Faith told him, for some air and exercise, I won't be gone ten minutes."

She handed over coats to kiss him.

"You've been an awfully good patient, Kim."

He caught her hands and held them tight. Over his head was a bandage for the last month or so, Mary Faith. The wound was healing nicely.

That was all he said, but Mary Faith knew that it meant a great deal, coming from Kim, who rarely ever admitted that he had been in the wrong about anything, and that her heart was as light as the dry leaves that danced along the sidewalk ahead of her as she walked briskly around the block.

There was a light in the vestibule of the building when she came back, and just outside the door of her own apartment stood a slim, young woman in a gray astrakhan coat, who swung 'round as Mary Faith appeared.

"Mary Faith Farrell!"

It was Claire Maden, thinner than ever, more shrill of voice, her face more thickly covered with powder and rouge and lipstick.

"Or perhaps she just strikes me as being like that because I have not seen her in such a long time," mused Mary Faith.

The sitting room was very quiet and orderly in the twilight. The red coals glowed in the grate and the rose-geranium on the window sill filled the place with its warm, spicy perfume.

"Jack tells me that Sandy's been sick," Claire said, throwing her coat back on her shoulders and lighting the cigarette that seemed to be as much a part of her as the red mouth on her lips or the enamel on her finger nails.

Mary Faith nodded. "He has. I'll go back now, if you'll excuse me, and see if he's all right. Sit down and make yourself comfy, Claire."

"Am him if he's too sick to see an old friend for a minute." Claire's voice floated after her as she went softly through dark dining room. "I'd certainly like to say 'hello' to him."

"That's what she came here for," thought Mary Faith. When she returned to the sitting room, Claire had turned on the lights, she had taken off her hat and was standing before the mirror, touching her yellow waves of her hair with a pocket comb.

"May I see him?"

"He's asleep."

Claire shrugged her slender shoulders and flopped into Kim's chair. "So was Jack when I started over here," she said. "I left him snoring in his chair. You'd think he had been separated these last three or four months, didn't you?"

Her keen eyes studied Mary Faith fixedly through a haze of cigarette smoke.

"You look awfully tired and old," she said suddenly before Mary Faith had had time to answer her. "You're a fool to stay at home all the time and slave the way you do. I know Sandy's been sick, and Kim's been sick, and a baby to look after, but you ought to think of yourself first of all. The more selfish the woman is the more a man thinks of her. You probably don't believe that but you will before you die."

Then she went on talking about herself and Jack.

"I only came back home to see if I can stand living with Jack again. I'm going to try it for a month or so and if I don't get along with him better than I have in the past, I'm going to divorce him. You think I'm dreadful to say that, don't you, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith moved uneasily in her chair, not knowing what to say. Claire always thought you and Jack got along very well," she said when she finally managed to blurt out.

"All of our friends thought that. All but Sandy. He lived in the same house with us and he knew that we didn't get along at all." A little smile slid across Claire's face, as if a pleasant thought had come into her mind.

"Sandy's like me, Mary Faith. He likes plenty of spice all the time, and Jack's your kind of person. He's actually like to stay at home and read or putter around. If things in this crazy world were arranged the way they ought to be arranged, you'd have married Jack, Mary Faith, and I'd be Sandy's little better half."

She laughed as if she had just cracked a splendid joke, and Mary Faith smiled at her as if she saw the joke and thought it mildly funny, too. But she didn't think it was funny at all.

Why couldn't she even think such a beastly thing?" she asked herself as Claire went away, calling over her shoulder that they must all spend New Year's Eve together, and that she hoped Sandy would soon be better, and that Mary Faith must be sure to tell him that she had come to see him while he slept. Then she was gone, a slim, pretty woman in here—that's why I didn't come in," said Mrs. Farrell from the doorway of the dining-room as soon as the door had closed upon Claire. "Oh, what a voice she has! And the way she runs on about Kimberley! She's in love with him, mark my words; I've said so before and I say so again."

Mary Faith hardly thought of Claire in the next few weeks. Aunt Ella came up from Garrettsville to do her Christmas shopping, and on Mary Faith went with her on two snowy afternoons, bringing home packages and arms full of evergreens and holly on each occasion. Mr. McIntyre had taken over a very important case to Kim—a case that had to be ready for the hearing of a will. Kim worked and worried over it, and two or three times he told Mary Faith that he wouldn't be home for dinner, and that if she wanted him, he would be at the office.

"Don't call me unless it's necessary," he said. "And if I'm not here, it's because I'm busy on my way to a restaurant—alone. Alone, do you understand?"

"Oh, Kim, don't rub it into me that I'm a jealous, suspicious wife as you know I trust you even if I feel jealous."

She did. She never called up the office on the night when he was not home.

Christmas was a complete success. A regular story-book snowstorm had wrapped Wilton street in a mantle of a wedding veil. The flat was warm and fragrant with the odor of holly and fir and roast goose. The baby stood on his little feet for the first time to touch the shining blow-glass ornaments on his Christmas tree. Aunt Ella stayed for the holidays, and Dr. Thatcher came to the family dinner on New Year's.

CHAPTER XXXVII

It was a day or two after Christmas that Kim said to Mary Faith:

"Did Claire say anything to you about a party on New Year's Eve? Jack tells me they're planning a party for that night. Would you like to go?"

Mary Faith knew what a New Year's Eve party at the Maldon home would be like. The tea-wagon would be loaded with glasses and bottles and cracked ice. There would be more cracked ice in the kitchen. The bridge tables would be set up, and there would be platters of cold salad and deviled cheese and anchovy paste sandwiches. There would be drinking and dancing and a great deal of noise. Kim would disappear into the kitchen to help Claire make punch, and his gray telephoned Jack and planned another blockbust as the night wore on.

"No, I don't want to go," Mary Faith said. "For one thing, I don't like to leave the baby. We'll have some sort of party, and your mother sleeps so soundly. Suppose we kicked off his covers and caught cold—"

"Chuffie! Mother will take care of him," Kim broke in. "Send my dinner jacket to be pressed, will you?"

Then it turned out that Mother Farrell wouldn't be able to take care of the baby. She told Mary Faith that Dr. Thatcher had invited her to go to the theatre with him that night.

And afterward we're going to the Hofbrau for supper," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to wear. I haven't a thing."

She spent the day joking

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 32

In his own tent Werper proceeded to make himself comfortable. Before a little mirror he shaved off the stubble of days. This done, he bethought him of the jewels. He would just have another look at them. What would Achmet Zek say if he knew of them? Werper grinned. He drew the pouch from its hiding place and gloated as the glittering gems rolled into the palm of a small hand. Ah! what beauties they were. What luxury and power awaited him after he sold them.

And then, suddenly he raised his eyes in the night's silence to the shaving mirror. Werper stifled a gasp of dismay. A reflection moved within the polished surface of the little mirror. In it he saw the grim visage of Achmet Zek, framed in the flaps of the tent doorway behind him. To say that Werper was terrified was to put it mildly. He turned slowly around. The face of Achmet Zek had disappeared from the opening.

Werper knew that he had not only sacrificed his treasure but his life as well. Achmet Zek would never permit the wealth that he had discovered to slip through his fingers, nor would he forgive the duplicity of a lieutenant who had gained possession of such a treasure without offering to share it with his chief. Slowly the Belgian prepared for bed. If he was being watched he could not know. Concealing his nervousness, he extinguished the light and crept for his blankets.

It was two hours later that the flaps at the tent front separated silently and gave entrance to a white-robed figure. Noiselessly the prowler crossed the interior. In one hand was a long knife. Lightly his fingers sought the bulk beneath the blankets. They traced out the figure of a man, and then an arm shot upward, poised for an instant and descended. Again and again it rose and fell, and each time the long blade of the knife buried itself in the thing beneath the blankets.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"But, I was," she blurted out, "Kim, how could I help it, when I saw you smiling at that girl that night when we were in the drug store? And Sandy hasn't been going out every night. And staying so late. She was crying now, and her face was pinched and white.

"Kim, I shouldn't go to places like this." She knew that he hated to see her cry. He was looking at her with an expression of actual dislike in his eyes. "But I can't help crying. If you only knew how sick the baby's been tonight—and you're not her—and, Kim,—I've been so jealous and unhappy the last month or so."

"I don't see why you should be jealous," he said.

"Any woman who loves a man is jealous when he seems to be interested in some other woman. Of course, I know you love me and the baby."

"Well, then, what are you having hysterics about?" He spoke briefly and brutally. This was not at all like that same hard, angry voice. "Now, let me tell you something, Mary Faith. If you'd cut out the grief and meet me at the door with a smile now and then, you wouldn't have to worry about me and other women. I'm tired of coming home and like a shadow all the time, it's your face I see. I'm tired of being ordered out that way, had it?"

He picked up his hat and went out. The door slammed behind him. Mary Faith stood where he had left her, wringing her hands in genuine pain at the unfairness of the things he had just said to her. She knew that they were unfair and untrue—and yet she felt that somehow or other she had failed him. It was her job to hold him, and she had failed. She knew that what he demanded from life was gayety and good cheer, and that Patricia didn't get what he wanted at home, he looked elsewhere.

"But how could I laugh when the baby was sick?" Mary Faith went on thinking, and the more she thought the more angry she became. "And how could I smile when Kim came home after an evening with that girl—and pretend that I didn't know where he'd been?"

But surely there must be men who didn't look for amusement and love-making all of the time. There must be husbands who shared the burden of illness and anxiety with their wives. Men who realized that marriage and children and home-making aren't all "fun and frolic" as Mrs. Puckett would probably have expressed it.

Kim was like a spoiled boy, Mary Faith decided. There was no use in talking to him; the thing to do was to stand by and wait for him to grow up.

He did not come home that night. The next morning she telephoned the office. Mr. Farrell had come in a few minutes ago, the telephone girl told her, but he had gone out again.

He was safe then.

"Safe and sulking," said Mary Faith to herself. She wondered where he had spent the night, and decided that in all probability he had gone downtown with Jack Malcolm.

CHAPTER XXXVI

At noon he came home. He had a sore throat and a headache, he said. His hands were hot and dry and his gray eyes glittered with fever.

As she helped him off with his clothes Mary Faith observed that he had bought himself a new shirt and a new blue and white polka-dotted tie. He had been wearing polka-dotted ties consistently the last few weeks. Evidently the blond girl in the drug store admired polka dots.

"The things a wife finds out about the woman her husband cares for!" Mary Faith thought bitterly as she closed the top drawer of Kim's dresser upon the lie.

Mary Faith's indignation vanished when she saw that he was sick. "Oh, poor boy, but I'm glad to be here," he sighed as she helped him to bed. "No place like this, Mary Faith—"

She went out into the hall and telephoned Dr. Thatcher.

"Kim's sick," she told Mrs. Farrell, who was just coming in from a trip to the library, bringing four books and a box of licorice drops. "I've telephoned for the doctor. It's best to be on the safe side."

"Oh, absolutely!" agreed Mrs. Farrell. She was all agog at the thought of seeing Dr. Thatcher. By the time the doctor arrived, she had changed into a clean house dress and had established herself in a chair at Kim's bedside, where she sat looking much too large for the small neat room.

"Well, doctor, what's wrong with our boy? Just a little touch of sore throat, I imagine," she said comfortably when Dr. Thatcher had gone over Kim's chest with a stethoscope. "He's always having a sore throat, you know."

But Dr. Thatcher said it was not a sore throat this time, but acute bronchitis. He looked gravely at Mary Faith as he said this.

"Keep the room warm and open the windows from the top so that there'll be plenty of fresh air, Mrs. Kim. And don't let this fellow smoke or have anything but water and broth and orange juice. I'll send up some medicine."

His orders sounded simple enough, but Mary Faith found them anything but simple to carry out. Poor Mrs. Farrell opposed her at every turn. When Mary Faith opened the windows from the top, she closed them.

"Who ever heard of letting cold air blow on a sick person?" she wanted to know. And she was all agog stirring Kim a sweet, thick eggnog, instead of orange juice.

"An eggnog never hurt anybody," she declared and went on stirring one in a tall glass for Dr. Thatcher until he ordered them for Kimberley when he was a little boy.

"That was before we knew what doctors have changed their ideas of diet and treatments since then," Mary Faith pointed out. But she might have saved her breath, for Mrs. Farrell paid no attention to her.

And so things went on for a week, with Mary Faith doing her best to carry out the doctor's orders and Mrs. Farrell doing her best to thwart her at every turn. But at the end of the week, in spite of all this, Kim was better. He got up for Sunday dinner and afterward sat before the fire and read the papers, until four o'clock.

"I'm going to run around the block," Mary Faith told him. "I need some air and exercise. I won't be gone ten minutes."

She leaned over him to kiss him. "You've been an awfully good patient, Kim."

He caught her hands and held them tight. "I've been a rotten husband for the last month or so, Mary Faith. I'm worried you. I'm sorry."

That was all he said, but Mary Faith knew that it meant a great deal, coming from Kim, who hardly ever admitted that he was in the wrong about anything; and her heart was as light as the dry leaves that danced along the sidewalk ahead of her as she walked briskly around the block.

There was a light in the vestibule of the building when she came back and just outside the door of her own apartment stood a slim, youngish man in a gray squirrel coat. She swung round as Mary Faith spoke, peered.

"Mary Faith Farrell!"

It was Claire Mallon, thinner than ever, more sinful of voice, her face more thickly covered with powder and rouge and lipstick.

"Or perhaps she just settles me that thing like that because I have not seen her in such a long time," mused Mary Faith.

The sitting room was very quiet and orderly in the twilight. The red coals glowed in the grate and the rose-geranium on the window sill filled the place with their warm, spicy perfume.

"Jack tells me that Sandy's been sick," Claire said, throwing her coat back on her shoulders and lighting the cigarette that seemed to be as much a part of her as the rose pinned on her lips or the enamel on her finger nails.

Mary Faith nodded. "He has. I'll go back now, if you'll excuse me, and see if he's all right. Sit down and make yourself comfy, Claire."

"Ask him if he's too sick to see an old friend for a minute." Claire's voice floated after her as she went softly through dark dining room to the kitchen. "I'd certainly like to say 'hello' to him."

That's what she came here for," thought Mary Faith. When she returned to the sitting room, Claire had turned on the lights. She had taken off her hat and was standing before the mirror, touching the yellow waves of her hair with a pocket comb.

"May I see him?"

"He's asleep."

Claire shrugged her slender shoulders and flopped into Kim's chair. "So was Jack when I started over here," she said. "I left him snoring in his chair. You know how men have been separated these last three or four months, didn't they?"

Her keen eyes studied Mary Faith fiercely through a haze of cigarette smoke.

"You look awfully tired and old," she said suddenly before Mary Faith had had time to answer her. "You're a fool to stay at home all the time and sleep the way you do. I know Sandy's been sick, and I know you've been a baby to look after, but you ought to think of yourself first of all. The more selfish a woman is the more a man thinks of her. You probably don't believe that but you will before you die."

Then she went on talking about herself and Jack.

"I only came back home to see if I can't patch living with Jack again. I'm going to try it for a month or so and if I don't get along with him better than I have in the past, I'm going to divorce him. You think I'm dreadful to say that, don't you, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith moved uneasily in her chair, not knowing what to say. "I always thought you and Jack got along very well," was what she finally managed to blurt out.

"All of our friends thought that. All but Sandy. He lived in the same house with us and he knew that we didn't get along at all." A little smile slid across Claire's face, as if a pleasant thought had come into her mind.

"Sandy's like me, Mary Faith. He likes plenty of zippo all the time. And Jack's your kind of person. He actually likes to stay at home and read or putter around. If things in this crazy world were arranged the way they ought to be arranged, you'd have married Jack, Mary Faith, and I'd be Sandy's little better half."

She laughed as if she had just cracked a splendid joke, and Mary Faith smiled at her as if she saw the joke and thought it mildly funny, too. But she didn't think it very funny at all.

"How could she even think such a beastly thing?" she asked herself as Claire went away, calling over her shoulder that Jack must all spend New Year's Eve together, and that she hoped Sandy would soon be better, and that Mary Faith must be sure to tell him that she had come to see him while he slept.

"I thought I heard that Mrs. Farrell was going to tell him that she'd come in," said Mrs. Farrell from the doorway of the dining-room as soon as the door had closed upon Claire. "Oh, what a voice she has! And the way she runs on about Kimberley! She's in love with him, mark my words. I've said so before and I say so again."

Mary Faith barely thought of Claire in the next few weeks. Aunt Ella came up from Garrettsville to her afternoon shopping, and Mary Faith went with her on two more afternoon shopping hour packages and an armful of evergreens and holly for Christmas.

Mr. McIntyre had turned over a very important case to Kim, and he was trying to do all the breaking of a will. Kim worked and worried over it, and two or three times he telephoned Mary Faith that he wouldn't be home for dinner, and that if she wanted him, he would be at the office.

"I don't see unless it's necessary," he said. "And if I'm not here, I'm there. You either go over to Sandy's or have something to eat in a restaurant—and alone, do you understand?"

"Yes, Kim. I don't rub it into me that I'm a jealous, suspicious wife. You know I trust you even if I don't always—"

She did. She never called up the office on the night when he was not at home.

Christmas was a complete success. A regular story-book snowstorm had wrapped Willow street in the whiteness of a wedding veil. The flat was warm and fragrant with the odor of holly and fir and roast geese. The baby stood on his little feet for the first time to touch the shining blow-glass ornaments on the Christmas tree. Aunt Ella had stayed for the holidays, and Dr. Thatcher came to the family dinner at four o'clock.

CHAPTER XXXVII

It was a day or two after Christmas that Kim said to Mary Faith:

"Did Claire say anything to you about a party on New Year's Eve? Jack tells me they're planning a party for that night. Would you like to go?"

Mary Faith knew what a New Year's Eve party at the Malloon home would be like. The tea-room would be loaded with glasses and bottles and cracked ice. There would be more cracked ice in the kitchen. The bridge tables would be set up, and there would be fruit salad and toasted cheese and Welsh rarebit and sandwiches. There would be drinking and dancing and a great deal of noise. Kim would disappear into the kitchen to help Claire make punch, and his gray eyes would become red and bloodshot as the night wore on.

"No, I don't want to go," Mary Faith said. "For one thing, I don't like to leave the baby. We'll be gone most of the night, and your mother sleeps so soundly. Suppose he kicked off his covers and caught cold—"

"Oh, Fifi! Mother will take care of him," Kim broke in. "Send my dinner jacket to be pressed, will you?"

Then it turned out that Mother Farrell wouldn't be able to take care of the baby. She told Mary Faith that Dr. Thatcher had invited her to go to the theatre with him that night.

"And afterward we're going to the Malloon party," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to wear. I haven't a thing."

She spent half of the day poking

ONE ARMED MAN MUSICAL GENIUS

Pianist Achieves Great Triumph in Queen's Hall, London

LONDON, Sept. —(By the Canadian Press)—A musical genius of only one arm achieved a great triumph at Queen's Hall, London, as a pianist, it was at a pronounced concert, and the artist was Paul Wittgenstein, who as an Austrian soldier in the Great War received a wound which necessitated the amputation of his right arm. It was the first performance in England of a novel work, namely a piano-forte concerto, the solo part having been written for this handicapped pianist.

A writer in the News-Chronicle says of the one armed pianist:

"One scarcely knows whether to admire more the courage or the resource of this musician. Finding himself disabled by the loss of an arm, Wittgenstein's first step was to commission the leading German composer of the day, Richard Strauss, to write for his exclusive use a work for piano and orchestra with a solo part playable with one hand.

"This single work and the remarkable story associated with it made Paul Wittgenstein round the world and established his reputation. He has followed up that commission with others, and the concerto 'played last night is the result of a similar deal with Ravel, the Basque composer.

"It would have been excusable and not surprising in the circumstances if the music and the performance of it had been a mere show of virtuosity. It was in fact, a brilliant and memorable achievement. Perhaps Ravel says little in this concerto that he has not said before, but he has assembled all his best and brightest tricks and has paid the pianist a compliment that of giving him a genuine work of art.

"As for Paul Wittgenstein we can pay him no greater compliment than to say that nobody who heard him would even think of offering him anything merely sensational—anything less indeed than a genuine work of art. His technique is amazing, but he stands out as an artist after we have forgotten it and quickly makes us forget, his handicap."

WALTER HUSTON IN "THE BEAST OF THE CITY"

The surging drama that is hidden beneath the veneer of a large city is brought out in an engrossing manner in "The Beast of the City," now showing at the Capitol Theatre for two days.

The picture literally presents a cross-section of the entire structure of the average American city and aside from its entertainment, suspense and thrills, reveals a sweeping expose of the "inside" of police corruption, underworld and police alignments and the problems that every city faces in the enforcement of law. It is an intimate story of the police, of their home life and the obstacles of their official careers—in fact, a composite panorama of the entire police situation.

Single-handed Battle

The story deals with the rise of a police captain who becomes chief of police as a reward for his heroic efforts in fighting an underworld czar. Balked by political interference, by "leaks" in the department, by opposition which blocked him in office, he fights an almost single-handed battle for the law. Underlying the thrills is the romance between an underworld girl and the chief's grown daughter, a detective, who ultimately serves as a secret source of information in regard to police moves.

The forceful direction of Charles Brabin, of "Spanish Blood" fame, and the work of an unusually fine cast of players, help to make the picture far above the average. Walter Huston is a compelling figure as the police chief who finally pays for a city's security with his life. Jean Harlow scores as the underworld girl and a splendid portrayal is offered by Wallace Ford as the detective who turns traitor.

Cast Uniformly Good

Jean Hersholt as the vice overlord, Dorothy Peterson as the wife of the police chief, Paul Harvey as the fanatic attorney and John Sullivan as the district attorney, also offer outstanding performances.

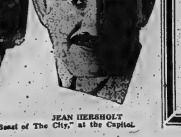
A spectacular police battle, a raid on a gangster stronghold and an effective murder trial are in vivid contrast to the intimate occurrences which take place in the police district. This picture may be said to do for the American police what "The Big Parade" did for the American doughboy.

Special Cast

Each day attending the performances tonight and Saturday at the Capitol will receive a beautiful Salad Bowl Free with the compliments of the management.

The Bowl can be secured at the matinee tomorrow by presenting an evening ticket of admission.

MAY RECEIVE FUNDS FROM RELIEF MONIES



Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—Victims of the disastrous fire of Sprague, Ont., may receive assistance from funds of the Northern Relief Committee, it was learned in this city, acting Premier, intimated yesterday. The committee was formed to render aid to the citizens of Haileybury following the fire in 1922 which caused heavy loss of life and millions of dollars property damage.

Col. Price said W. H. Alderson, chairman of the Northern Relief Committee, would take the matter up with Hon. A. M. Robb, Minister of Relief activities in Sprague.

It is understood there is a substantial balance standing to the credit of the committee.

Nova Scotia Coal Will be Given Trial in All Schools; Short Session of Board Held Possible Stoker Will be Installed to Save Coal

APPOINT TEACHERS

P. C. MacLaurin Congratulated on Student Standing in Exams

Small attendance greeted chairman Allan Schryver of the Board of Education at the brief initial meeting held Friday evening, the first since the three months' vacation of regular meetings of the Board. Considerable business was disposed of by the Board, which adjourned in an early hour. Little discussion over the various reports and recommendations, which were presented helped to speed up proceedings.

Redress Pupil

On the presentation of the Special Committee of School Supplies a further reduction in the amount of fees to be paid under the new system was intimated by Chairman of the committee, J. W. Allin. This may come into effect a nine months, instead of the customary ten months, with the opening of the school year. Excellent progress has been made with the system and expended amounts are negligible. Congratulations were extended by the Board to the Committee, who had worked so hard to install the system. The revised scale for points revealed was that a new scholars was being given a start whereby no pupil would be penalized by the change. Books which had been handled by other pupils previously.

The report of the Advisory Committee showed the following teachers to be appointed for Night Classes which are about to "commence."

Dressmaking—Ivy G. Evenson; assistant to be appointed.

Household science—Miss Louise Wallbridge.

Handicraft—Mr. S. Milton, with Mr. J. A. Thomson, asst., should Mr. Milton be unable to attend.

Machine Shop—Mr. G. S. Ferguson; assistant to be appointed.

Woodwork—George Bunn.

Woodworking Shop—Mr. Brown.

Typewriting—Miss Irene Strickland—"Is to be appointed. May Read Student."

Under a recommendation brought forth by Mr. Allin, Chairman of the Repair committee, the suggestion of certain members that the cost and installation of a self stoker in the Institute came up for lengthy consideration. While the stoker in operation it is believed by the committee that a saving of over a ton of one dollar per ton on coal could be made. It was decided by the Board to name a special committee to obtain further particulars and prices on a stoker of the type which in the Board immediately. A reason, why Queen Mary cannot burn the same coal as other schools in the Province, which is supplied each week by the committee, who will make an investigation, is that in the committee, that coal which cost $1.50 per ton more than coal used in other schools was specified for Queen Mary School.

A caution was entered on some other asbestos agent, which will level coal dust from settling on surface at the north end of the Collegiate Institute would do much to prevent surface water from collecting at that point, and spoiling the basement floor. Action was asked for.

Whose fault was that. Was it the architects. Didn't we see any guarantee this work when they put first laid down?" asked Mr. Allin. What the school was brought up. No one seemed to know.

Tenders Opened.

Tenders were called for supplying of coal to all schools in the city, excepting Queen Mary School. Coal, Nova Scotia coal, to be exact. Nova Scotia coal, however, is found to be the first in any of the Ontario cities to specify that particular brand of home product for their schools. And members of the Board asked for special information in the matter, in order to encourage other schools to follow the lead that the city had. Only one order, that of Powdrell & Alexander, was received.

Tenders were opened regarding the coal supply were recommended to be accepted and placed on August 18, as follows:

Bellamy & Company—100 tons of Pocahontas, run of mine, for Queen Mary School, at $6.25 per ton; and an order for approximately 350 tons of Nova Scotia slack to be given to Harry Smith for $6.50 per ton for Public Schools for slack, and $7.45 per ton for the coal for Collegiate.

At a further meeting at was moved by Mr. Jones Bayley, and seconded by Mr. Fred Montcrief that the motion passed at the meeting of August 18th be rescinded.

It was then moved, and seconded, that the contract for coal for the three Public Schools, equipped with stokers, be given to Harry Smith for Nova Scotia coal, (slack) at $6.95 per net ton.

It was also moved and seconded that the order for Pocahontas coal for Queen Mary School be given to

WHAT BOARD DID

Passed accounts totalling $42,351.18.

Went on record as opposing the contemplated ten per cent. reduction by the Provincial Department of Education on Public School Grants. Board will strike the deposition to that effect.

Will call for tenders for a suitable covering on shallow sections of the cement parking space over the south side of the north end of the Institute, where suffage water, which has been generally present, threatens to damage interior of the basement. The matter to cover the basement be some agent suitable for such work and with cohesive qualities to prevent dust.

Appointed a committee to investigate the matter of a self stoker for the Institute, which were presented helped to speed up proceedings.

21 MILLIONS AMOUNT ASKED

Suit Filed Against New York Stock Exchange

New York, Sept. 17.—A suit for $21,000,000 was instituted today against members of the New York Stock Exchange, its president, its treasurer, and 50 members of its governing committee.

The suit, which was filed by Pirnie Simons and Co., brokers and stock sales promoters, charged violation of the Sherman section of the Anti-Trust Act. The amount sought is three times the amount alleged actual and punitive damages.

The complaint, signed by Isaac Greer, Warren B. Nash; and the members of the Governing Committee.

GAMBLING AND STOCK LOSSES NOT DEDUCTIBLE

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—(CP)— Persons who suffer losses from gambling or by speculating in stocks can not deduct them from their annual returns in Canada.

"Our income tax law does not tax profits from gambling, or speculation in stocks, and likewise our law makes no allowance for losses in the same connection," an official of the National Revenue Department said yesterday. He was commenting on a statement from Washington saying a wealthy woman there was allowed to deduct gambling losses from an income tax return.

Anaesthetic Overdose Kills Three Nurse Administering May Take Life

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 17 (AP)—A fatal overdose of hospital anesthetic error in administering an anaesthetic was blamed by her superintendent for the death of three attendants who under close observation today by officials, who expressed fear she might attempt to end her life.

The woman, Miss Maybelle Vial, 35, misread a formula and gave three women two grams of an anaesthetic instead of a grain, said Dr. Lloyd Noland, of the Long-view State Hospital for the Insane. They died in about 30 minutes.

Miss Vial ed a verdict of accidental death.

Dr. Noland said the woman told him she "misread the formula" and gave the overdose. Miss Vial, he said, was "very conscientious" and "would not make an intentional mistake," said she was in a highly nervous condition and he feared she might attempt to kill herself.

The victims, Jennie Bradham, 54; Anna McCullough, 65, negro, and William Shockley, 30, negro, were given the anaesthetic yesterday preparatory to tonsil operations.

Coroner Carl Reuss removed the mistake before their death made a futile attempt to save them with stimulants.

Kaye Don Weds on Morning Of His Return to England

Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 17.—Kaye Don, British automobile and speed boat racer, and Miss Eileen Martin, 21-year-old heiress of a wealthy textile manufacturer of this city, were married here Friday morning. It was learned today.

The news was made public as Don prepared to sail for England tonight in the S. S. Olympic. His bride will sail next week to join him in Paris, and a honeymoon at Lake Como will follow. They met first at Osmond Beach, Fla., when Don was trying out the Silver Bullet, his racing automobile, and she was a guest at the home of the girl's father, L. J. Martin, at Winter Park.

Their friendship was renewed in Germany a year ago when Miss Martin, studying there, again met the "Speed King."

The marriage was a 24-hour mystery to New York. In applying for a license, Don had signed himself as K. Ernest Don, 41, of Weybridge, Surrey, England. Greenwich officials had thought that the man resembled the racing driver, but definite confirmation was impossible, and Miss Martin's parents at first denied reports that Kaye Don was the bridegroom.

CHURCH IS UNAFFECTED

Assurance Given Anglican Synod by Bishop Worrell

Toronto, Sept. 17 (CP) —Record losses incurred at Winnipeg do not affect the Church of England in Canada, Bishop F. H. Worrell declared here yesterday by Most Rev. John Charles Roper, Primate of Nova Scotia and Metropolitan of all Canada, following a three-day conference with the executive of the General Synod.

All financial affairs of the General Synod are entirely satisfactory and the work of the Church in the Diocese of Prince Rupert's Land, where losses were suffered will continue without interruption, His Grace declared.

"The church at large is not directly affected by the losses incurred by the Winnipeg Synod, except that it may be called upon, voluntarily, to render what endowments to the missionary dioceses which have been affected," added the Bishop.

Archbishop Worrell admitted the system, which permitted losses occur in which funds entrusted to the A. Mackray, K.C., was wrong and should be changed. "We have had early pioneer days when sealers in the Arctic were engaged in sealing and when men of business ability were not available," he said.

"Unfortunately," he said, "he had never been changed but it will be changed now. We have chosen and funds the gifts of people will be used for the purpose but you to the best possible use."

Further reports regarding yesterday's shock indicate property damage was greater than estimated. The Napier section alone, where several buildings were destroyed the loss is placed at approximately $250,000.

In the Hangaro district about 25 miles from Gisborne, five main roads were obliterated by a landslide, making travel impossible and a new route will have to be found around the mass of rock which fell.

Three persons were injured at Wairoa. Damage was also recorded in connection with school activities undertaken by the girls' athletic, boys' athletics, Literary Societies, Dramatic and Musical Societies and other miscellaneous matters, the aries in connection with the school, the collection of fees, and in more or less a voluntary matter, it became very difficult to keep track and on my recommendation, the Board saw fit to do away with the accumulation fee and replace with a registration fee.

The registration fee of, course, is to take care of public school athletics which include the securing of basket balls, transportation in connection with games, field day and field day prizes, and all girls' athletic activities, also boys' athletics, rugby, boys' hockey expenses, basket ball, field day prizes, and all boys' activities in connection with the Literary Society, securing prizes, programmes, couples of dances, and being devoted to the publication of "The Hummer," a monthly magazine material from students and by offering prizes also keeping in touch with pupils, who become sick during the term and remembering them with flowers.

"The above matters require a considerable sum of money and in addition to that we have to take care of a number of incidental accounts for lost articles and accounts which crowd in from year to year in other connection with various school activities which must come out of the same source.

"The receipts and disbursements in connection with these matters are kept in the office, subject to audit, and a statement will be prepared and made to the Board.

"We have been able yet to secure a sum of money sufficient to look after the various items required, but I think we have the Board each year for additional sums in connection with boys' and girls' activities. If this fee were not collected I am afraid that the Board would be very much greater than they have to be to meet the needs.

"I trust that this explanation will make it clear to the public why this registration fee is being asked, and to assure, them, that the spending of this money is being very economical and reported to the Board."

Considerable Sum Expended Each Year to Carry on Work

Following is the complete report and explanation of the one dollar fee system, which has been assessed against pupils of the collegiate Institute, as given by Principal P. C. MacLaurin to the Board of Education, at their meeting Friday evening. It was especially requested by members of the Board, that this report be given prominent notice, in full, in the columns of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer in order to clear up some of the misunderstanding, which exists among parents of the pupils since it has been collected.

Statement regarding the $1.00 fee registration, which is being collected from all students in the school:

"After the passage of your by-law with the Board's permission, I have been trying to collect a commutation fee from the pupils," said Mr. MacLaurin in his report.

"There was no fee demanded in connection with school activities undertaken by the girls' athletics, boys' athletics, Literary Societies, Dramatic and Musical Societies and other miscellaneous matters, the aries in connection with the school, the collection of fees, and in more or less a voluntary matter, it became very difficult to keep track and on my recommendation. the Board saw fit to do away with the accumulation fee and replace with a registration fee.

MILITARY AID BEING SOUGHT

Striking Farmers Strengthen Picket Lines Into City

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Sept. 17.— New pleas for military aid to handle the farm strike situation were heard by Governor Herring today as strengthened their picket lines in their attempts to isolate the city.

With more pickets patrolling the highways last night almost as many as in the past few weeks, Sheriff John A. Devenport of Woodbury county requested the strikers cease being "far beyond the control" of local officials and issued a plea for requests from citizens to ask Gov. Dan. Turner aid from the National Guard.

The pleas came from Sioux City's business men, who have been complaining that the picketing has had detrimental effect on trade, and the sheriff indicated he would make a formal request for troops if the first request, recently made to the Governor, was refused."

ANOTHER WINNER IN BELLEVILLE

For the second time since the contest started a Belleville girl has been awarded a white gold Orsan watch by the R. O. Orsan Company, of Hamilton. She gives away ten of the watches each week to points all over the country to the person who can make up the best rhyme describing their product. This week among the ten winners who have been awarded watches appears the name of Mr. Richard Goodfellow, Belleville, Ontario. The watch has been forwarded.

SMALL BLAZE AT CARTHAGE MACHINE

A large pile of scrap wood and shavings piled near the main building of the Carthage Machine Company, which became ignited in some mysterious fashion, and threatened for a time to spread to the machine company's premises, brought firemen and six a run to that location at four o'clock Friday afternoon. The blaze was extinguished without difficulty.

HELL DIVERS KNOW WHEN TO LEAVE

All summer long eight bell gongs have been pelting on a free day's light show by their antics as they disported themselves in the deep waters of the bay, near the Hirst-Con plant. So tame had the wily birds become, that workers around the plant during the past few months had made friends with the birds, who can easily be approached.

Duck shooting season dawned on September 15th. But long before a single duck had been fired by any of the army of hunters, who invaded the nearby marshes that morning, the divers had promptly departed for parts unknown. Since then not one of the amusing birds has been seen.

NAME WRONG IN PRIZE LIST

In the report of the Heavy Drawing Contest at the Mohawk Fair, held in Desoronto, Wednesday the name of Mr. Frank Marshall was given as the winner of first prize. This should have read Mr. Frank Walsh, of Lonsdale, who was awarded first prize in that event.

HOLY NAME RALLY HELD IN KINGSTON

Richardson Stadium to be Scene of Service After Lengthy March

Plans have been completed for the second annual Holy Name Rally for the diocese of Kingston at which five thousand men were present last year and indications are that the attendance will be even larger this year. The rally takes place in Kingston tomorrow and the Holy Name Society of St. Michael's Church will be in large numbers. Headed by the Belleville band, the Holy Name society will leave St. Michael's Church at one o'clock and proceed to the Cricket Field, Kingston. A procession of the societies will be formed, the route being Bagot street, up Johnson street, and over Alfred street. Kingston, Belleville and Gananoque bands will be in attendance.

Through the kindness of the Athletic Board of Control of Queen's University of which Dr. F. A. McGinnis is president, the spacious George Richardson Memorial Stadium has been placed at the disposal of the diocese and before the Rally be held there having seating capacity for thousands. An altar has been erected, flags and loud speakers have been placed in the grounds so that all may hear the sermon and services. Rev. Father Keogh, B.S., of Toronto will be the special preacher. His sermon will be followed by the renewal of the Holy Name Pledge and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

The Rally is a demonstration in honour of the Holy Name of Jesus and the members of the Holy Name Society pledge themselves to revere the Holy Name and to abstain from obscene language. They pledge loyalty to God and country, thus endeavouring to become better citizens. The idea of forming of a Society to promote reverence to the Holy Name and to counteract outrages against it was first conceived centuries ago by St. Dominic, when the Albigensian heresy broke out in the Church which denied the divinity of Christ was denied and His name blasphemed. The second council of Lyons approved the establishment of a Holy Name Society, and a letter of Pope Gregory 10th in 1274 advocated it. Since then the movement has spread rapidly.

"ME — I'M A PIPE SMOKER Pure and Simple" declared Mr. Picobac

"AND not so awful simple either," he added, striking a match under the seat of his chair.

"I've been smoking a pipe between meals ever since the big flood," continued he. "You mind the time the government ditches flowed over the roads?" Mr. Picobac waved his pipe through a fragrant cloud of smoke. "Essex County is bottom land—a natural-born flat," explained he. "Tain't high above lake level anywhere. But you can't beat it for growing stuff—especially tobacco—Burley tobacco."

Picobac tobacco—the pick of the Burley crop as grown in Essex and Kent on Lake Erie, under the most approved conditions of soil, seed, cultivation and climate—gives you a particularly cool . . . mild . . . sweet smoke. You will enjoy Picobac—try it. On sale everywhere. And don't forget, you get more tobacco for your money . . . Good for making cigarettes, too.

Kiwanis Karnival Just Around Corner And Everything Ready

Kiwanis Karnival Days are just around the corner and from all indications they are going to be happy days both for the public and the hard working Kiwanians. A trip through the Armouries last evening convinced the writer that this year the Kiwanis Carnival Committee mean business when they say they are going to cut all unnecessary expenses and thus put more dollars in the Charity Fund than usual for the strenuous winter ahead—at cellophane around a cotton core.

SHIPLOAD OF RAISINS FROM AUSTRALIA

Possibilities of Inter-Provincial Trade Shown by Large Raisin Shipment From Antipodes.

Echoes of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa are reverberating through the Empire reciprocal trade beginning already. An example of the possibilities of inter-empire trade is seen in the recent importation of a shipment of 1,572,940 pounds of raisins, enough to fill a train of forty-three cars, which has just arrived in Canada from Australia. The raisins were consigned to the National Grocers Company, Limited, and a goodly portion of the large shipment from Australia will be used in puddings, pies, and other pastry made by the housewives of Belleville and other Ontario districts generally, distributed to the various grocery stores of the National Grocers Company Belleville branch.

NO CHANGE IN L. C. A. POLICY HENRY STATES

Might Help Hotels in Competition With Tourist Houses

BAR ROOM GONE

L. C. A. as Approved by Electorate to be Policy of Gov't.

North Bay, Sept. 17 (CP) —Premier George S. Henry made it clear in a statement issued here last night that the Ontario Government has no intention of amending the Liquor Control Act to make the sale of beer and wine in hotels legal.

He said the act as approved by the people at two elections was in line with the government's policy.

The Premier said he based the statement "in view of the different interpretations which have been placed on the discussion which took place when I received the Hotelkeepers' deputation."

Mr. Henry said he told the deputation of Ontario Hotelkeepers "something might be done to help the hotels in their competition. He dealed he had given them to understand the sale of beer and wine in hotels would be legalized.

Mr. Henry's statement follows:

"A deputation from the Hotelmen of Ontario waited on me on Friday, Sept. 9, and made certain representations concerning hardship of hotels and make both ends meets under existing conditions. These representations fall into two classes, namely:

1. The hotel assessment in municipalities was too high and there seemed to be discrimination in favor of boarding houses.

2. That hotelkeepers be allowed to sell wine and beer in hotels either in beverage rooms or with meals.

Might do Something

"I intimated to this deputation that something might be done to help the hotels in their competition with less highly assessed tourist houses and I still long two classes, namely:

1. The hotel assessment in municipalities was too high and there seemed to be discrimination in favor of boarding houses.

2. That hotelkeepers be allowed to sell wine and beer in hotels either in beverage rooms or with meals.

Might do Something

"I intimated to this deputation that something might be done to help the hotels in their competition with less highly assessed tourist houses and I still long two classes, namely:

"It is not long since I received a prohibition deputation and heard them speak with vigor and fire in the campaign. Interested parties viewing the present situation from different angles may advocate what place before the government and the public whatever plans they like, but the government will be guided by the principles bearing their views will not be drawn into a expression of opinion on a matter of government policy.

"In view however, of the different interpretations which have been placed on the discussion which took place when I received the Hotelkeepers' deputation I desire to make it quite clear that the Liquor Control Act, as approved by the electorate on two occasions is the policy of the government. There has been no change of policy."

LANDING PERMIT IS NOT RECEIVED

Permission to Land Russian Cargo Not Yet Given

Montreal, Sept. 17—The landing permit to enable 500 tons of Russian crude oil aboard the Danish tanker Ane Maersk to be unloaded here has not been received from the Department of National Revenue, Arthur Magnet, collector of customs for the port of Montreal, said last night.

The Ane Maersk's load is the first shipment to reach Montreal in pursuance of an arrangement between the Russian authorities and the Aluminum Company of Canada to barter oil for aluminum wire. The vessel docked at Montreal Wednesday. Mr. Magnan said any decision regarding the landing of the cargo was out of his hands and permission must be received from Ottawa.

Detroit, Sept. 17—Dr. Franklin H. Martin, director general of the American College of Surgeons, said here yesterday that the college would announce definitely next month that there had completed records of 1,100 cases of cancer in the last five years that have been cured.

He emphasized, however, that the cases cured or arrested represented patients who were treated before the disease was out of control.

WANTED THE CAPITAL BOMBED FROM AIR

La Paz, Sept. 17—Residents of La Paz cowered through the streets last night in a demonstration demanding that Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay, be bombed from the air.

The demand resulted from reports that Paraguayan troops had attacked and killed Bolivian stretcher-bearers who were evacuating the wounded from one of the battle grounds in the Gran Chaco.

A CHEERY NOTE

Hon. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner for Canada in London, is making a triumphal tour of Ontario opening fall fairs, incidentally meeting many friends of former years. No suspicion of politics enters into his journeyings, apparently, for he was even invited to open Oshawa Fair by his old-time opponent, W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., leader of the Liberal Opposition in the Legislature, who has had many words with the ex-Premier. Mr. Sinclair is tilts with the ex-Premier. Mr. Sinclair is president of the Oshawa Fair organization and his choice of Hon. Mr. Ferguson shows that the amity that exists among public men despite oratorical clashes over public affairs. Canada's High Commissioner has absorbed considerable real British atmosphere since assuming his duties and profited by contact with the great statesmen of the day, and the influence of that great ghostly army of the past—great men of England, Scotland and Ireland, whose lives still live in their achievements while on earth.

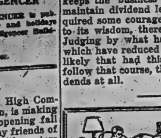
With a cheery, optimistic note, Hon. Mr. Ferguson affirmed his great faith in Canada and industrial recovery within a year. "There are appearances and signs of improvement in conditions," said Hon. Mr. Ferguson at Oshawa Fair. "The people of Great Britain, slow, but sound in their judgment, have made up their minds the financial structure of Canada is sound, and we are prepared, with every attribute we require, to take advantage of a great war of prosperity. I predict this prosperity will come in a very renounced way by next year. All we need is a little common sense and effort. The people of Canada will become the most important nation in this Empire of Nations."

Agriculture will be as always, the saving grace of nations, in the opinion of Ontario's ex-premier, who sounds the tocsin of British bulldog pluck and unconquerable faith in Canada's ability to conquer every crisis in the history of the nation, with this stirring and prophetic message:

"A great opportunity is coming to Canada and particularly to agriculture," he said. "If there is one lesson we have been taught by the distress and depression from which Canada is labouring less than most other countries, it is that agriculture is coming into its own. Farm life and farm production are going to be more prosperous than for a long time. Business men and financial people give us assurance that already there is a marked indication of improvement in conditions. And the country needs more people and more money, for if Canada is to reach her zenith, she cannot do it with 10,000,000 people. The country is to be taught to be managed by 10,000,000 people."

NO TIME TO QUIT

E. P. "Daddy" Allen is authority for the statement that fifty per cent of the crippled children would not be crippled had they been given early treatment — had proper precautions been taken. Men and women who have been enthusiastically close to the crippled children movement doubtless have long known that it is, nevertheless a fact which should be emphasized and re-emphasized during the coming months.



When the economic centre of gravity drops, children suffer. Then comes an immediate increase in the insidious conditions which cripple boys and girls and prevent simple corrective or curative measures. The situation is always complicated by the understandable tendency of dissatisfied people to lessen their philanthropies. At such a time as the present, therefore, Rotarians and other groups committed to crippled children welfare should re-dedicate themselves to the cause and press the work with renewed determination.

In every community are men and women who would, even in these times, be willing to help, if not with money, then by contributing in goods or services. Perhaps the assistance will come in form of sewing or knitting garments. Perhaps it will be automobile rides to shaded woods for these unfortunate boys and girls. Or, it may be nothing more than a cheering visit to the hospital bedside. But, whatever it is, the significant point is that it be done. All that need exists—now! — The Rotarian Magazine.

DIVIDEND CUT, BUT NOT ADVERTISING

A significant news despatch came over the wires a day or two ago, telling of how the Colgate-Peet-Palmolive Company, rather than curtail its advertising expenditures, reduced the annual dividend on its common stock from $2.50 to $1.00 per share. The company is spending more than one million dollars a month on advertising.

There could be no greater tribute to the value of advertising in building up and maintaining business than that afforded by this incident, says the Oshawa Times. In these days of business stress, it is of more importance to this large concern to maintain its advertising expenditures, which keeps the business going, than it is to maintain dividend levels. It may have required some courage to take this step. As to its wisdom, there can be no question. Judging by what has happened to firms which have reduced advertising, it is quite likely that had this concern decided to follow that course, there would be no dividends at all.

George had a thing coming for him as a trained jackass, a jackass with more brains apparently than some humans, for he went through an intricate act entirely devoid of all the stuff like a finished trouper and like a finished trouper occasionally got tipsy as the result of too generous friends giving him the glad hand. He sank very rapidly. This jackass' name was Jasper and he performed with his master before royalty, the last time was at Windsor before the late Edward VII. George Jenkins had arrived at the age of seventy-one and had been on the stage since he was eighteen. He endeared friend and fellow trouper of Paul Lalonde, of Belleville, Musical Director for the Al. G. Fields Minstrels.

THIS IS THE SEASON of the year when all the freaks of the animal and vegetable kingdom are brought to the newspaper office for honorable (or horrible) mention. Potatoes, which have so far forgot themselves as to form mesalliances with other vegetables and made lovable potatoes in entangling alliances, carrots which look like politicians, and single cabbages which resemble double cabbages and so on, too, is the season of the Fall Fair where giant pumpkins, monster potatoes, big fat porkers and bully beefers hobnob, while humanity are viewing acquaintanceship, interrupted, perhaps, since last fair time — and the home cooking displayed for prizes, with the heart burnings which accompany the decisions, the ladies' needle work and the art sections—oh, those art sections! Paintings of purple ships on scarlet seas, moonlight on the gloaming, the hills and hollows of home and all the familiar brain dreams of the amateur artist. However, let's be charitable, there is nothing worthwhile about these country fairs which is not found in the hectic make-believe life of the cities, real friendship, and Christian spirit, even if it is spiced with a bit of pleasp which may seem a trifle unkind at times. Let's go to the country where the folks live and back of the hills as they say where they believe in God, the church, the home, and the devil as a real raging, roaring lion roaming around seeking whom he may devour—and the memorable gas of those drop from the city man's clothes and he begins to realize that Nature is only another word for God and that Main Sticks and shibboleths of the city are flimsy and unworthy when subjected to the scrutiny possible only in the great open spaces. Sermons, without making a sermon out of this, let's admit that the city wouldn't be much without the honest background of the country, without the country would sure miss the city, if only for contrast.

SPORTS EDITORS are notorious bad pickers of winners of sporting events. Take Lou Marsh, of Toronto Star. It is always good business to bet against Lou's tips, and does he know it? — as picked George Young as a sure thing to cop the swim marathon and George did not get half way. Lou said Marvin Nelson should beat George Young at five miles, and Marvin was all-but sunk, couldn't possibly swim the Lou Marsh hoodoo home ahead. They're all alike, these sporting editors, too innocent and confiding, take Claude Tice, for example,—but why bring that up.

TUBERCULOUS MENINGITIS GRAVE MENACE

Symptoms Not Quite Same as in Other Forms

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Meningitis means an inflammation of the meninges And the meninges are the membrane that cover the brain.

In ordinary meningitis, which is really a germ-spinal meningitis involving the brain and the spinal cord as well as those of the brain—the disease is caused by a germ called the meningococcus. In tuberculous meningitis, however, the offending organism is the tubercle bacillus—which, you know, infects the lungs causes the familiar pulmonary tuberculosis. Only this latter organism is the infame the brain coverings even more than the spinal cord.

The tubercle bacillus is a rod-shaped germ when examined under the microscope. If it gains a foothold in the body it reproduces rapidly and in time will overwhelme the natural defenses of the tissues in which it is found. Hence the disease is tuberculosis. And it may be tuberculosis of the lungs, bones, joints, liver, kidneys—in short, of any organ depending upon the site of the infection.

The symptoms and development of tuberculous meningitis are not quite the same as in acute or cerebro-spinal meningitis. Dr. Wilbur Flexner's serum, when injected after a definite diagnosis by this made, often yields remarkably good and prompt results. In fact, it is the only thing that has proved of value for cerebro-spinal meningitis that has yet met much favor.

But in the tuberculous variety it is of little value. Neither is the serum does not help. The outlook for recovery is even more grave than in the pulmonary variety. Hold that tuberculous meningitis is always fatal. At any rate, it is.

The reason for stressing the seriousness of this disorder is the fact that so many individuals have tuberculosis in some part of the body other than brain and neglect it. That is, they become careless about treatment, or even deceive themselves that they are cured and cut off dangerous treatment too soon.

I do not wish to imply that tuberculous person who has succumbed to any form will develop meningitis or even that there is a probability that he or she will. We do know, nevertheless, that tuberculosis germs, if not properly and persistently treated. And we know, furthermore, that there is always a possibility of danger when such cases are treated carelessly.

Children are even more prone to develop tuberculous meningitis than are adults. In fact, there are cases when this disease develops without there having been any suspicion of tuberculosis elsewhere in the system.

Usually a preliminary stage marks this dread disorder during which there is a gradual failing off of health during a period of a few weeks. The child has become pale, irritable, nervous, sleepless. Perhaps such an apparently harmless trouble like whooping cough has preceded the meningitis in position and the child is still in the convalescent stage.

Then, however, definite symptoms of brain disorder appear. Vomiting, severe headache, slight fever and perhaps convulsions follow. Then the disease becomes acute is the pain in the head and back of the neck. The child cries and screams. Any movement is a torture. Indeed, the slightest may be in a state of tension with muscular rigidity and convulsions. The patient presents a typical picture of what doctors call "brain irritation."

Later on the headaches lessen in severity, the vomiting ceases but the patient becomes comatose or drowsy. Gradually this drowsiness deepens. General paralysis may follow. Finally the patient dies.

Adults may develop tuberculous meningitis, as well as children. The course of the disease runs from two to four weeks.

John Ryan French in Reaching 80th Milestone Narrates an Interesting Tale of Early Life

Born at Point Anne And Lived in Community All His Life

SAW CITY GROW

Work Hard, Eat Simple Foods And Live Long Advise

Eighty years old this week, but with step still as brisk as a colt, eye as keen as an eagle, and with the looks and actions of a man half his age, John Ryan French is now residing in Consecon, Prince Edward County, in marking the occasion of his eightieth birthday which reminiscences of early life in Hastings County, and particularly in the district of Point Anne, the village of which he was born in the year of 1852.

To trace the lineage of John Ryan French would be interesting. From a long line of warrior forefathers including a great grandfather, who served aboard a man-o'-war in the British Navy, down to his own father, distinguished themselves in the service of their country. Courage in hand and see, the French family have always been in the forefront of every pioneer life in this district, and their names are interestingly given from a memory unusually retentive, in the story which can bring forth salient little features, each a story in themselves for his difficult to follow the trials and difficulties of those who started home in the wilds in the early days, and who overcame almost insurmountable obstacles in order to wrest a living for themselves and to wrest from the rough and rocky land. It has all been vividly presented by John Ryan French during his talk.

No Schools Then

One of his first recollections was the little log hut which stood on the old Lake Shore road and occupied by the present Church of Knox Church. Under the arches was a stream in front of the hut, and to a clearing off to one side. Trees hemmed in the little cabin, and neighbors were few and far between on both sides. There was no schools in those days, of course. There were no churches, no schools. Everything was primitive. Log, slumbrous-eyed, quiet appearing fellows came around on the scene, and the elder Mr. French glad to assist at times in whatever little extra help he could give. "Come in, and if they liked you they helped you," said Mr. French.

But they liked John French's father, and they liked young French himself, whom they called "John Bull." And, because he learned to speak the Indian tongue, and was then a boy, they looked on him as a blood brother.

"They were good neighbors," declared Mr. French. "The chief of the red was to be left alone, kept away from whiskey and to be allowed to follow the chase. They hunted for food and hunting with such crude fire-arms and native weapons as they used.

Game Plentiful

Game was plentiful in those early days, and the ducks were numerous along the shores of the Bay of Quinte. Small fish were plentiful, and a stone's throw from the door. Deer and other wild animals roamed the thick bush just back of the clearing. At the end of night, when the snow lay thick on the ground, the deer would be found in the nearby forest, snapped in the traps which were set for them. Sometimes the dancing flames from an enormous camp fire, which served to keep off the cold, would attract the deer to their death. In the morning the tracks would tell the story of their visit.

Shoals of whitefish and salmon, so thick that they formed the sandbar, swam the clear waters of the bay. It was not unusual for a dip in a net and haul forth two or three hundred pounds of fish. Eels, also, Sturgeon, bass, pickerel and other varieties waited only for a baited hook.

Out of all this fishing which was carried on in the district to meet the demand for consumers in which there could be no cold storage, shipped. It was then that the father of John Ryan French developed his fish for other work.

Mr. French, senior, was making barrels, that were known and shipped as far as Montreal. Sometimes they would be filled with deer, salted whitefish. Thousands of empty barrels filled barrels left the locality every month. The trade was learned by John Ryan French, the son, and it is on some one which he pursues, with his sons, in Consecon today. "Potsi Anne barrels," they called them then, and the trade mark of John Ryan, Sr., is still remembered.

Saw Village Grow

During his early boyhood days in the village, John French saw the rapid growth from a collection of three or four crude huts to a dozen or more solid and substantial houses. Population began to increase accordingly. When lumbering operations commenced throughout the district, and scow, thousands of tall majestic pines, which reared high above the ground fell under the onslaught of axe and saw. The bay and rivers were choked with them. Each spring any millions of feet of rough, and squared logs floating in massive booms, were towed by steamer, through the Bay of Quinte and out into the lake, bound for Montreal and intermediate points. From Belleville and Trenton and points in between, and other huge rafts, piloted by sturdy lumbermen of the day, were towed up and in the rivers and bay, dripping wet continually. From Deseronto other rafts were towed, spread out and attached the thick square timber. These cleared hold after hold, and sidewalks over which rough river drivers clumped perpendicular cedar, pine from the log up the splinters as they walked by way it grew, and the trees were cut in a dozen or more, business places and residences in Belleville and Toronto. Oil lamps were installed on the main thoroughfares to light the streets. Horse cars were run and above the way for the dainty steps of the ladies, and their skirts held high, when they stepped carefully from the sidewalks over the muddy puddles. Nighttime echoes on Front Street, changed from the rattle of wagon and the grunting, straining staging exclamations dirties, and the cursing of the lumbermen, shouting and bumping heavily against bar doors, and then they reeled in stupified fashion, changed to more peaceable sounds as the hour grew late and quiet and order was slowly winning against recklessness and disorder. Then Belleville had sergeants and five men, who comprised the Police Force and Abraham Diamond, Esq., who was Chief of Police. Crime was rampant with less tact than generally afforded other offenders in other cities and towns. There was no lawyer room for lawlessness.

Industries Open

During that time, Mr. French can remember the establishment of the city which had begun to branch out. Among them were an axe factory, five sash factories, two grist mills, two foundries, a cotton batting mills, two cigar manufactories, four carriage maker's shops, one organ manufactory, a woollen factory, a number of breweries, four marble works and the provincial institution for the Deaf and Dumb. Each year saw new industries open and a attendance of 225 as soon as the school was opened to scholars throughout Canada. It was then over to the charge of Dr. W. J. Palmer, who for years carried on the splendid work of establishing more mutual relations and more friendly feeling and intellected. The Ontario Business Men's College, owned by Mr. Neelly and Company, was also an excellent school in those days, where fame had spread to various sections of the Dominion. Both schools are still carried on most successfully.

Voting an Adventure

"Voting in those days was an adventure," reminisced Mr. French, with a chuckle, as he recalled some of the highlights of the week which was given over to those who wished to cast their ballot for their favorite candidate. "There was lots of thrills, fights and broken heads." For many years the city was divided on both factions would carefully prepare some order cabs, pile hundreds of stones within easy reach of the voting places and be ready for the first sign of trouble any of the opposition might care to make. Then blood would flow and the fun began. "Often I have seen as many as two score mixed fights in the Kilkenny fig 4 with clubs swinging and stones flying thick and fast. One year one side would win; the next year the situation would be reversed. That's what made it exciting. One never knew which one would be the victorious side," said the narrator. One of the epic fights remembered by Mr. French was one that once commenced in the upper sections of the town and didn't end until one hour before dawn next day, down to the marsh at the lower end of the town by another force, who were stronger in numbers and clubs.

No Depression

Today as he walks about the city and notes old friends he hears the same old story on every side. "Everyone's talking depression these days," declares Mr. French. "Shucks, they don't know what a depression is. Some if they had lived in those days such as we used to have, when the Civil War was on between the "Yankees," then they would know what a real depression was.

"Those were the days," he continued, "when everybody in this section of the country felt a real depression. Hundreds actually almost starved to death owing to the price of foodstuffs. Every bit of food was scarce, which could be spared, as well as livestock of all kinds, was being sent to the American side owing to the high prices which were being paid for it. Flour was twelve dollars a barrel; other things were just as dear. Lots of Canadians made journeys on the war, but a good many others almost starved to death. Folks around here lived on. Folks nowadays pass up these simple rules. They burn themselves out before their time like an overworked engine. It's the simple life when you look at it that way. Isn't it?"

No Great Trick

"It is no great trick to live to an old age," observes the venerable Mr. French. "Pioneers of this district worked hard, ate simple foods and lived long. Folks nowadays pass up these simple rules. They burn themselves out before their time like an overworked engine. It's the simple life when you look at it that way. Isn't it?"

DECREASE IN FOOD STUFFS

Soviet Russia Far Behind Their Production of Last Year

MOSCOW, Sept. 16.— (AP) — Instead of general improvement heralded for 1932, a decrease in Soviet Russia's food production for eight months of this year as compared with the same period in 1931 was revealed in Government statistics today. There has been a serious shortage in sugar, meat and fats for some months and these conditions, combined with disappointing progress of the harvest, may presage a hard winter.

Acknowledging the failure of the food industry so far to meet expectations, the newspaper "Food Industry" published figures revealing production as not only fallen far short under the five-year plan but fallen so low in July and August as to reduce the quarterly average production for eight months to six per cent. below a like period in 1931. This offset a small gain recorded in the first six months of this year.

Food Supply Acute

In spite of the opening of many new factories, the output of refining plants, eight months' production came in only 78.2 per cent. of the Government programme for that period and only 39.5 per cent. under the five year plan for the whole year.

The statistics were confined to percentages but indicated the acute state of the country's food supply. The effect is being shown in' widespread shifting of workers, searching for better living conditions.

The greatest decline in production was shown in sugar, meat, lard and fats. The output of granulated sugar for eight months dropped 56.6 per cent. below production for the same period, lard production declining only 46.8 percent. under the government plan.

Canning declined 2.5 per cent. and reached only 53.6 per cent. under the plan.

Losses Predominated Among Closing Quotations

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 17—Mrs. (Gunning)—Prices fluctuated irregularly within a dull short range on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. Losses predominated among closing changes as but were confined to a comparatively unimportant range.

Textiles, Gas and Steels recorded minor gains but Lake Shore was off 10 at 38, Granada 4 and Moss under evident pressure, another 5 to 30. Sylvanite firmed a cent in a few sales. Brett Trethewey and Northern Canada added slightly to previous good advances and Base Metals was up a fraction.

Base Metal Shares were quietly easier, Noranda dipping 30 and Nickel a few cents. In the Lindsley Venture, Coniagas and Mining Corporation of Canada lost a couple in odd sales. Mining purchases in Gold Ore Mines were relatively steady, with Hedley Gold up 3 from last night's final and Homestead a cent higher.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Action among the local sport friends is limited to baseball and Rowing. Emile "Spider" Pladner bearing the honors in the Intermediate championship of the world. Toronto used to be the big shot in the smaller weight boxers and with the scant attention of their new Mayor, Sam Craig, as though the return of boxing is assured the Queen City. Never in the past 25 with a number of years while this writer has followed their track of the champ's title. The best looks like a natural.

Here Pressnell is now in his 30th season and his service in the American league one, season set for him by Joe Cronin, the best dozen of major league pitching corps, in spite of his record. It appears that the Red Sox shipped Pennock in Buffalo for a short term in 1918, which ended into his great league string, whereas Eppa Jeptha Rixey has been with the same club during them down the alley in the National League since 1912 with out interruption except for the war years.

Walter J. Maranville, the agile shortstop of Boston Braves, can step up and John Mc Graw, Giant if he wants to own up to his age. He was born in 1892 and has been going strong ever since 1912. Only 20 years he served a term with Rochester in 1927, but was back with Boston in the next season with the Cardinals. He re-played in the National League every season since 1912, and this even includes the war year of 1918, because he was in France that Spring with the Braves before entering.

For service with one club, Sam Rice of the Senators and Ray Schalk of the White Sox are the two veterans. Sam has been with Washington since 1915 and while the Red has been laboring for the White Sox since 1912.

Coach Lee Shiels had his "Grid-iron" aces assembled and over 30 aspirants were on the job. All of the players signified their intention of attending the football lecture, 72,000 Witnesses, at the Bellville Theatre tonight.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

among her bandboxes and trunks. At one cockcol on the day before New Year's she decided to go downtown and get a new dress with the money that Rip and Aunt Rika had given to her she'd remained, but did not return until six o'clock, and she found Mary Faith sitting there in the sitting room, hatted and cloaked for street.

"Oh, I'm so glad you're here!" Mary Faith greeted her. "The market closes at half past six, and I want to go down and pick out my chickens for tomorrow's dinner. I'll be right back. Go ahead and get dressed. When Kim comes, tell him we aren't going to the party. He'll be glad to hear it. I laughed. He wasn't particularly enthusiastic about going."

She jumped out into the street. There had been a high wind and a snowstorm during the night, but everything was clear and bright. It would be pleasant to walk to town with Kim—far pleasanter than spending the evening in the chaos of the Maldon flat.

"I want two nice tender hens," she told the fat, florid, red-faced butcher.

Seven dollars and eighty cents," said Joe, after weighting the hens. "How about a few pounds of pork sausage yesterday?"

Yesterday? Why, yesterday she hadn't even been in the meat market. Kim had telephoned early in the afternoon that he would not be home for dinner, and she and Mrs. Farrell had had a pick-up supper.

"I wondered if you wanted to pay for it now," Joe was saying. "Mrs. Farrell forgot to." He slammed open the metal drawer of his cash register and laid a slip of paper before her. On it was written in blue pencil: "Farrell, five pounds goose-liver sausage—$1.30."

She knew that there was no mistake. But why had Kim bought two pounds of goose-liver sausage?

He was at home when she got there. She could hear him singing as she entered the flat. The bathroom door stood open, and from the hall she watched him for a moment as he stood before the mirror, shaving.

"Kim," she said, "did you buy two pounds of goose-liver sausage at Joe's yesterday?"

"I did. What of it?"

"Nothing, I suppose. But I have to pay for it for now, and, Kim, two pounds of goose-liver sausage is such a funny thing to buy. No one person could eat two pounds of that rich stuff."

"Just a minute!" He let out a short angry laugh. "I'll explain the great mystery to you, but then you've got to get out and let me finish shaving in peace, will you?"

He flung his towel over the rack and went on: "Yesterday I drove Jack Maldon out from town, and he asked me to go up to his place to have a drink. After we'd had a couple of highballs it was time for dinner. I told Claire I'd go out and buy some kind of cooked meat, as she wouldn't have to fuss around the kitchen. She and Jack suggested that I call you up, but I knew you'd have a fit if you saw me having a drink, and besides I knew we'd both be there tonight—"

"We aren't going." Mary Faith cut in. "Your mother's going out with Dr. Thatcher, and we'll have to stay home with the baby."

All her anticipation of happiness for the evening was dead. The warm lovely feeling that had lain around her heart allday was gone. Kim had not only lied to her for the first time, but just now he had admitted to her that he hadn't wanted her on the party the night before. He had told her—as good as told her—that she mustn't go.

"I think one of us ought to go over there tonight," her voice ran across her thoughts sharply. "They will be hurt, if one of us doesn't show up.—Did you have my dinner jacket pressed?"

"I pressed it myself last night," she said dully.

Forever after, that New Year's Eve lived in Mary Faith's memory as a nightmare that went on and on and on through endless hours. At half past seven Dr. Thatcher called for Mrs. Farrell; at nine o'clock Kim left for the Maldons' party. He went without kissing Mary Faith good-bye, but he did tell her that he would be home early. "Long before twelve o'clock, he promised.

Left alone, Mary Faith busied herself for a half hour putting away what was warm and snug, and to many, for the thousandth time, at his likeness to his father. She bent over him and kissed his tiny cheek. The touch, light and swift as it was, gave her a feeling of peace. Here was her love for Kim and his love for her. Herself and Kim forever and ever.

She settled herself on the sitting room couch to read and wait. Two, eleven and then twelve o'clock crept slowly by, and Kim had not kept his promise to come home early. Some time after the sound of the midnight bells had died away, she fell into a doze. She was awakened by voices. There was a key turned in the lock, and Mrs. Farrell came in, holding a small paper parcel and dangling a cowbell from one wrist.

"Just look at these things! They were given to him at the restaurant where we had supper," she cried. At Mary Faith's look of fear from the couch: "I never saw such crowds in my life! We had to go to a

TEAM-MATE SOLVES BAFFLING MURDER OF FOOTBALL HERO

A murder in full view of 70,000 persons ..... and not one of them knows how or by whom!

That amazing situation forms the story of "70,000 Witnesses," at the Belle Today and Monday matinee at daily, with Phillips Holmes, Dorothy Jordan, Charlie Ruggles and Johnny Mack Brown in the leading roles.

The majority of the action takes place in the stadium where a gigantic crowd has gathered to watch the football classic of the season. Rumors that Brown, star halfback of one team, will be "smeared" to guarantee victory for his opponents suddenly come true, when, after breaking away from the line and dashing practically to a touchdown he suddenly staggers, stumbles and falls.

No matter of tripping over his own feet this, the spectators discover. Four doctors who rush to his side find him out "cold" Rushed to a hospital he dies.

Then David Lander, in the role of a noted detective, and Holmes Brown's team-mate and buddy, set together in an effort to find out who was responsible for the murder and why. Their success leads to a startling climax.

Miss Jordan plays the role of Brown's sister, and her romance with Holmes runs through the story. Ruggles is a good-natured, generally drunk reporter, who announces the game, play-by-play, and helps in the ultimate solution of the mystery.

"The Purchase Price," Barbara Stanwyck's latest starring picture for Warner Bros., which is the second feature offering on the stage program, has among the same "line-up" of cast and technicians that made her previous success "So Big."

The night shirt sales have been lifted from "So Big" and put into "The Purchase Price," so identical is it, this saucy little publication, according to Warner officials of another Stanwyck film of the same high caliber.

George Brent again has the leading role opposite Miss Stanwyck. Hardie Albright, who appeared in "So Big" is also featured, and Lyle Talbot, the one important addition. It also featured. Many others who played less important parts, have roles once more in the supporting cast of "The Purchase Price."

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Star of "Union Depot" in New Play.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s latest starring vehicle for First National Pictures, "It's Tough to be Famous," will begin a two day engagement at the Capitol Theatre Monday (Dinnerware).

"It's Tough to be Famous" concerns the trials and tribulations besetting a young naval officer suddenly catapulted to national fame as a result of his heroism in the line of duty. Even before he regains consciousness after a hair-breadth escape from death in the hold of a sunken submarine from which he had already released his subordinates via the torpedo tube, he has been hailed by the newspapers and the public. A quiet and unassuming youth, his private life is made public, his marriage to a childhood sweetheart becomes a matter for the newspapers and magazines, and he is made generally miserable, to the extent that he nearly seeks oblivion after a reconciliation with his wife, whom he regards as a cause of much interference in their lives.

The love story angle is said to be his best, the young star revealing a definite talent for satiric comedy and a pleasing personality to keep pace with what is being done by some of the swiftest moving motion pictures ever made.

The story moves from submarine to fleet to a New York reception rivalling those accorded other several naval heroes and covers a dozen other locales in rapid succession. The breathless pace of the picture continues to the climax and ultimate clinch with the King, when the excellent cast in its rapid course through newspaper headlines, interviews, radio speeches, parades and other vexations of intrusive publicity would avoid the public interest in their lives.

"It's Tough to be Famous" presents, in addition to its strong cast and highly entertaining story, a series of scenes of the sea, the bed of a sunken submarine showing the rescue of the men trapped with Fairbanks Jr. after the undersea boat had been wrecked in a steamship. Scenes of the men shooting from the torpedo tubes to the surface, and the naval forces at rescue work are also vividly portrayed, providing additional thrills for what has been called the "swiftest-paced picture of the year."

The large supporting cast in "It's Tough to Be Famous" includes Mary Brian, Walter Catlett, Oscar Apfil, David Landau, Emmett Corrigan, Ivan Simpson and many others equally well-known to film audiences.

Monday is Dinnerware Gift Day, and every lady who will receive a beautiful large salad bowl free on attending the performance of "The Beast of the City" at the Capitol.

CHINESE WOMEN GOOD DOCTORS

Many Attend Chinese Medical College For Women in Canton

Winnipeg, Sept. 16 (CP).—Chinese women make good doctors and surgeons, and are very keen students, according to Dr. Jessie McBean, medical missionary for the Presbyterian Church, who is in Winnipeg on her way to her old home in Toronto from China, where she has been engaged in hospital work for the last 26 years.

Dr. McBean is professor of obstetrics at the Hackett Medical College for women in Canton, China. The present college was built 33 years ago by the Presbyterian Church of the United States, but from the Presbyterian Church in Canada has also been supporting this institution. In connection with the college, there is a 13-bed hospital, a nurses' training school, where they have a class of 60 nurses every year, and a pharmacy school.

"The Hackett Medical College is the only one of its kind in China, and there are very few like it in the world. All the students are women, and all the doctors and professors, until a few years ago, were also women. Now they have a few men on their staff. There is a staff of 2 resident doctors, besides part-time professors. All the teaching is in Chinese. It is the only medical college run on Western ideas where the Chinese language is used.

"The students come from all over China, and after their course of seven years is over settle in the various provinces of China. Most Chinese women prefer women doctors, as there is a great demand for the graduates of the Hackett Medical College, Dr. McBean said. Chinese patients never run up bills. When they send for a doctor, or go to see one, they make sure they have the money, and before the doors leaves he is paid. But like the Western hospitals, there are free clinics, and those who cannot pay for a doctor may go to these clinics.

SINCLAIR, C. P. R. ENGINEER WINS APPEAL

James L. A. Sinclair is Successful in Appeal Against 3 Mos. Sentence

Engine He Was Driving Struck Car at Gibson's Crossing

FOUR KILLED

Justice Finds Engineer Took All Reasonable Precautions

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP) — James L. A. Sinclair, railway engineer, whose engine struck an automobile on a railway crossing near Belleville last March, killing four persons, was today successful in his appeal from sentence and three months imposed for criminal negligence.

Sinclair was piloting the fast Canadian Pacific "Flyer" through Belleville on the night of the accident. Seven minutes before arriving at the crossing, the headlight of the locomotive failed. He decided to continue on to Belleville, the next stop. The train was travelling at terrific speed, its whistle blowing and the big-wig signal operating at the crossing when the car was struck.

Error in Judgment Perhaps

"The four people were killed and is, had the question been put to the court," stated Mr. Justice W. E. Middleton, "whether the parties are cohered here with the conduct of the taxi-driver, who drove his car into the side of the train, or with the system operating. The engineer was before the court charged with criminal negligence. He made an error in judgment perhaps, but not to be found liable criminally he must be found not to have taken reasonable precautions. Such an error in judgment is not sufficient to constitute the offence."

Everett Mastin was the driver of the taxi, while sitting in it are were Reposta Storr, Miles Cunningham and Dorothy Darlington. All were killed.

Absence of regulations with regard to the handling of locomotives was one of the great difficulties in the way of the crown, declared Mr. Justice D. G. Grant.

Man of Great Ability

In giving judgment, speaking of the defendant Sinclair, Mr. Justice Middleton said, "he was a man of great ability, a responsible person, who had spent many years in the railway and very successfully. Whether he be found guilty depends upon the question stating, this an engineer or anyone so charged, is he faced with an emergency such as this, took reasonable precautions. He was confronted with a difficult situation. He had a great many passengers who might be injured or endangered if the train had been stopped and he had to decide against that there was the chance of someone not seeing the train that was on the engine and venturing on the track despite the warning signal. He had to be made."

Mr. Justice Masten, who with Justice Grant made up the appeal bench of the court, stated that he associated himself with the views of the presiding justice and that he thought there was also another question to be put to the jury, he found further," His Lordship said, "that the denial of the charge is founded from the negligence of the accused. If the jury answer that they have the gravest doubts whether there is sufficient to warrant the jury drawing the inference that the presence of the headlight might obviated the accident."

Arthur Roebuck, K.C., appeared for the appellant engineer and Sir Wilfrid Laylr, K.C., and Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., for the crown. Mr. Roebuck based his appeal on the main ground that there was no evidence to warrant the conviction and that irrelevant evidence had been introduced.

Quoted Railway Act

Mr. Roebuck explained that the train was a fast one, and that "under precedent and practice" the engineer against accidents. When a stop was necessary, as there was in this case a flagman went 1800 yards to see that the train was clear. Mr. Roebuck said The Railway Act, he pointed out, makes no provisions as to the headlight. The judge, he said, thought it does specify that the engine must carry a headlight and that the Railway Board had a regulation that the engine must carry a light that would show for a man's the distance of 900 yards. The weight of the fast train, he said, was 30 pounds, whereas he said the engine in this case carried a boil weighing 194 lbs.

Mr. Early said the sole question was: "Why didn't the engineer replace the light?" "If is just the same thing as if a reliable light," he said. "When the gales are raging at a crossing is an invitation to come on. When you look down the track and don't see the light the natural assumption is that the locomotive will look for that light even if the warning system is working. The headlight failed here and the engineer knew it. The train would not have been observed if it had stopped. As has been said, he had a flagman to go back. . . ."

EVEN MOTHER NOT INFORMED

Ross "Sandy" Somerville Arrives Home Quietly From Victory

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 19.—The city council will meet tonight to decide what manner it will honor Ross ("Sandy") Somerville, native born and ed Amateur Golf Champion of the United States.

Meanwhile officials of the London-Hunt Club planned some sort of celebration of the honor its star golfer brought in wresting the amateur crown, from the United States for the first time since 1911.

Mayor George Hayman, who will ed the silent golfer five times to find, when he arrived home and got no answer, said he thought the council would arrange a public reception or a dinner.

The champion himself preserved his well-known silence. His homecoming was all he desired. No one knew, when he would arrive and no one met him.

Ross Somerville, his greatest fan, did not learn much about his game. She is a widow of the late C. J. Somerville, once mayor of the city and a Liberal candidate for the House of Commons.

Shortly before noon Sunday, Mrs. Somerville and her son left their apartment opened and in walked "Sandy" all alone and carrying his bags.

"You would think he had just come from the Hunt Club. You would never know he had been away," she said. She was not greatly thrilled, when he threw a couple of golf balls into the house. She was used to that. He told her he had won the title, some friends, who would bring it along later.

He couldn't get any information out of him. He had his dinner and a cigarette and then went to bed

Mrs. Somerville said she would tell me about it later, though."

His mother said she asked him what Baltimore was like and in what direction from the city the course lay, but he did not know.

PIG UPSETS BARN LANTERN

Western Ontario Farmer Caught in Mow Jumps Free

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 19—(By The Canadian Press)—Bert Smith, Rondeau farmer, escaped with difficulty from his blazing barn one day after a lantern which was upset by a pig, caused a fire.

The barn was burned to the ground, together with grain and implements and with a loss of about $4,000.

It was thought a horse or a pig, both of which were burned to death, upset the lantern.

Smith was in the hay mow and was overcome by smoke and flames through which he fought his way to the open air.

SCARS OF WAR ARE EFFACED OUT OF EARTH

Nature and Man All But Blot Out Signs of War's Ruin

TOUR OF FRONT

Adjutant Fred Howlett Sees Pleasure-Seeking Urge

Adjutant Fred Howlett of the Salvation Army was in the city for a few hours on Saturday renewing acquaintances among citizens of Belleville after a tour of the British fairs and the battlefront where he served with the Canadian forces during the Great War. He left Sunday for Howick in their daughter, recently visited Scotland, England and France.

The changes of the have almost been effaced from the face of the earth in France and Belgium, he told a reporter of the Ontario Intelligencer today. The guns had roared and wrought havoc and men strangled in deadly strife, the curative agencies of nature and of man are seen.

Hand of Change.

"Tremendous changes have indeed been wrought by the hand of the war" he said. "These are marked all along the line from the rear to the front. Apart from a few German dugouts, a few concrete gun emplacements and part of the original front line trench at Vimy Ridge in part and a portion of the original German frontline with dugouts are preserved but otherwise the hand of change has wiped out the furrows made by gun and men.

"At Vimy is an avenue of maples two miles long called Maple Avenue. The trees were brought from Canada and flourish in French soil.

Less Drunkenness.

War's greatest legacy is felt on the people of course but conditions are not to bad over there. "In England they are not so unsatisfactory. I myself, have not been so shocked as they are at present," remarked Adjutant Howlett, never saw less drunk-ness indeed there was quite the intoxicating man I saw all the time I was in England. They do drink but move moderately."

Asked if he noticed condition of the people, Mr. Howlett explained that the people in England are pleasure - seeking rather than church-going The churches are doing splendid work of course but they have not the crowds who took the sacred service Years ago. The churches of course hold outside pulpits on the streets and in the summer resorts to which the people flock at the week ends. The Salvation Army is keeping up its pace in England.

Adjutant Howlett who was known as Ensign Howlett when stationed in Belleville, has made some charge of Lisgar Street corps in Toronto, Canada's metropolis. His friends here expect higher honors. The new location will be marked by the same zeal and success as in Belleville.

Strict Discipline Averts Panic When Oshawa School is Struck

Oshawa, Ont. (CP)—Strict discipline and brave school children and teacher averted a panic at the Mary Street Public School here today, when the building was struck by lightning.

Although one teacher was thrown to the floor and children were badly shaken, all answered the call of the fire alarm in orderly terms and marched out of the school in perfect order.

Lightning struck a pipe on the roof and passed through the school to the basement. In the classrooms, teachers lined up the younger ones, before rushing and in tears became panicky. The fire department was called but no outbreak of fire followed the lightning flash. Panic-stricken, to resume their studies, both teachers and children went home for the day.

Indians are Urged to Slaughter All Europeans

Pamphlets Inciting Massacre are Distributed

London, Sept. 19—An Exchange Telegraph Despatch from Calcutta said revolutionary pamphlets distributed there demanded the wholesale massacre of Europeans.

The pamphlets urged all Indians to join in a campaign to carry on the work which the National Indian Congress failed to do owing to its non-violent policy.

Every Indian household includes European officials, their wives and children, members of the Europeans Association, and Indians, who assist the government, the pamphlet said.

Magdeburg, 8th. of Sept. 1932

To the Editor, of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Belleville, Ontario.

My dear Editor,

I sincerely trust that you will not find me impertinent in addressing you the following appeal.

Near Oberstdorf, a beautiful health resort in the Bavarian Alps and very well known to the Canadian public, my father owns a nice private hotel, very frequented and lucrative in normal times. Owing to the precarious economical conditions in the whole world, and the consequent lesser frequentation in these last years, it has been impossible for my father to pay with the usual punctuality the interest for a first mortgage, by which our property is mortified, so that the same came will be - sold by public sale in case we can't pay.

As it is my ardent desire to help my ancient father in saving his property, I offer myself to marry anybody who is prepared to offer me $25,000 for paying off the above mortgage. I herewith enclose my photo for your inspection.

I am 24 years of age, and have blonde hair and blue eyes. I frequented a high school and speak four foreign languages fluently. I am also a proficient cook and housekeeper and also a good piano player. I will be a true and faithful wife to him, who will help us evading our sore fate.

Please help me, my dear Editor, in publishing my appeal, I tender you my hearty thanks.

Yours very truly,

Anita Stahl.

Forty Parishes Represented at Holy Name Society Parade Held in Kingston on Sunday

Rev. Father Keugh is Principal Speaker at Service

FOUR BANDS

Benediction of Blessed Sacrament Closes Ceremonies

Promptly at one o'clock yesterday nearly one hundred cars containing members of the Holy Name Society of St. Michael's Church left the city for Kingston to take part in the annual Holy Name Rally, in which about ten thousand men of the diocese participated. The procession from Belleville was led by a traffic officer and was accompanied by the Argyll Light Infantry Band. A special bus conveyed the high school boys of St. Michael's Academy.

At the Cricket Field, Kingston, representatives of the forty parishes in the diocese lined up for the parade, the parishes being arranged in alphabetical order beginning With Bedford and finishing. Four bands were in attendance, the R.C.H.A. band, and bands from Belleville, Gananoque and Brockville. Each parish had its own banner. Belleville's was a beautiful one of white moire silk finished with gold braid and tassels, and bearing the words lettered in gold, "H.N.S., St. Michael's Church, Belleville," on one side and on the other the words of the Saviour with the inscription, "To the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, Honour and Worship let us pay." This banner was blessed by the Sisters of the House of Providence.

Parade Impressive

The parade was very impressive, the uniforms of the banalmen and of the Catholic cadets of Royal Military College in their scarlet tunics were twenty-five, adding a colourful touch to the procession. The men passed the Cathedral the Cathedral Bells chimed, a short route of procession large numbers of citizens were observed.

On arriving at Queen's stadium the men took their places on the main grandstand, the bands in front occupying the opposite side of the stadium. A beautiful altar was erected before the main grandstand. The four bands were massed on one side of the altar and rendered appropriate music before the ceremonies began. Long seats were ranged by the Carl Read Company conveyed every man to the afternoon's proceedings perfectly to all parts of the stadium.

Rev. Father Callaghan, diocesan director of the Holy Name Society, welcomed the gathering and introduced the preacher for the occasion, Rev. Father Keugh, C.S.B., of Toronto, whose splendid sermon will long be remembered. He impressed on his hearers the privilege that was theirs in being members of the Holy Name Society, an organization whose only purpose was to increase the love and honour once shown the Holy Name of Jesus and to combat the use of obscene speech. Such principles were needed in the world today, when licence was unbridled. It was gratifying to find how in spite of such great numbers pledging themselves to the Holy Name Society ideals and be urged hearers by their good example in going about among men to win greater reverence for the name of Jesus.

Expresses Thanks

His Excellency, Archbishop O'Grien, addressed the gathering at the conclusion of Father Keugh's sermon. He expressed his sincerest thanks to the men for taking part in the demonstration. He warmly praised the city of Kingston for the respect shown by the citizens to the gathering and said it was a delight to live in such a city. He asked the men to remain in their places after the ceremonies to join in prayers for the relief of unemployment and the return of general prosperity. The gathering would be closed by the singing of the Italian Ave Anthem, the speaker said, in honour of the Queen of the Rosary, the gracious sovereign, who embodied all the high and noble qualities of the British Empire and under whose regime it was a privilege to live.

Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament closed the ceremonies. His Excellency acted as celebrant assisted by Rev. Father Keugh and Rev. Dr. Byrne of Kingston. It was a impressive sight to witness the vast assemblage bowed in adoration as the ostensorium was lifted in the blessing. The entire gathering took part in the singing of the Benediction hymns, "O Salutaris" and "Tantum Ergo." During the ceremonies "Come Holy Ghost" and "Mother Dearest Mother Fairest" were sung under the direction of Rev. Father Mourgy and Bishop's National Anthem the beautiful hymn of reverence to God "Holy Name "Holy God We Praise Thy Name," was sung.

Choir Pays Honor to Mrs. McKinnon

Sunday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Gino McKinnon returned to their home from a drive they found to their great surprise that the Bridge Street choir had taken possession and were awaiting their return. The choir had come to do honor to Mrs. McKinnon who has been the consistent soloist in Bridge Street Church for several years and who is soon to move to Toronto to which city Mr. McKinnon is being transferred.

During the evening Mrs. McKinnon was presented with a pretty silver flower basket, and a beautiful bouquet of gladioli. A delightful social hour was spent and delicious refreshments were served.

The church sustains a great loss in the removal of Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon as they were active in many departments of church work, but especially will Mrs. McKinnon's lovely contralto voice and gracious presence be missed from the musical services, and not only will the church miss her but the whole city for she was always most generous with her wonderful talent.

"My mother cannot recover. It's just a matter of time now."

Statement Urges Berlin Not to Hamper Economic Recovery of Whole World

Germany Wants Full Equality in Matter of Disarmament

LONDON ADAMANT

Britain Will Aid in Relieving Franco - German Strain

London, Sept. 19 (AP)—The government of Great Britain today took a position very near that of France in opposition to Germany's method of demanding equality in armaments.

In an official memorandum issued from the Foreign Office yesterday the government insisted the German problem must be solved by negotiation and declared Germany's threat to quit the disarmament conference was "unfortunate" at a time when attention and energy should be directed to economic rehabilitation of the world.

"Granted that this question of equal status would have arisen before the Disarmament Conference concluded six week, there is a grave disadvantage in forcing it to the front at this stage," the note said.

"In view of Germany's domestic difficulties, the initiation of an acute controversy in the political field at this moment must be accounted unwise, and, in view of the concessions already granted to Germany by her creditors; it must be accounted unfriendly."

Met With Approval

The announcement of the British stand was met with general, though not unqualified approval in London today.

Reports from Paris said French newspapers greeted it as a "pleasant surprise," revealing that French and British views are not far apart.

They pointed out it scotched reports of disagreement between the two countries circulated in various quarters.

(The note pleased official circles at Washington).

The British government, the note said, could not support the view that under the present circumstances execution of the Treaty of Versailles Germany is absolved from the provisions Part 5 (which limited German armaments) even though the other nations should fail to agree to disarm or to reduce their armament.

The government said to this legal view, however, an acknowledgment that the limitation of German armament in the treaty was intended to be followed by general armaments elimination by other powers.

"His Majesty's government do not deny the fact," it said, "and do not seek to minimize the force of the contention, based on the preamble of the United Kingdom is committed, very large reductions in all departments of armaments have been made since the Treaty of Versailles was signed.

Hopes for Best

"It is the hope of the United Kingdom government that object may result from Geneva, in spite of the difficulties that have been encountered . . . a really valuable measure of disarmament in which each nation will bind itself to a strict limitation . . . of its weapons of war.

"This desirable consummation," it said, "cannot be attained by peremptory challenge or by withdrawal from deliberations which are about to be resumed. It can only be reached by patient discussion thru the medium of conference between the states concerned."

Serious Warning

Paris, Sept. 19 (AP)—The newspaper Petit Parisien said today the British memorandum on Germany's demand for arms equality issued at London yesterday "constitutes a serious warning for the Berlin chiefs."

It added that the British note "condemns the words and gesture of Berlin more severely than the French note" sent in reply to the German demand last week.

Pertinax, noted political writer, called it "one of the best written and most closely knit diplomatic documents we ever read."

Mock Maneuvres

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP) — Wooden cannon, with stovepipes for barrels, and cardboard covered trucks represenating heavy artillery and tanks, rolled into action near Frankfort today while the cabinet was preparing to consider Great Britain's note countering German claims for equality of armaments.

The mock weapons of war were part of the fall manoeuvres of the Reichswehr, the German army as permitted under the Treaty of Versailles.

In political circles here the opinion was expressed that the Government would not reply to the British note, any more than it did to the French reply to the arms equality demand, but that it would hold fast to its determination to remain away from the Disarmament Conference at Geneva.

President von Hindenburg will attend the manoeuvres of the army at Frankfort tomorrow. They will end Thursday, sooner than usual, for reasons of economy.

GALES SWEPT OVER QUEBEC

Loss to Orchardists is Heavy in Nova Scotia

Montreal, Que., Sept. 19.— Gales swept up from the Atlantic over the week-end leaving a trail of destruction from the Maritime provinces to Riviere Du Loup, Quebec. So far as known there was no loss of life, although lives of fishermen were imperilled along the Atlantic Coast and it was feared later reports would show some had been lost.

Throughout Eastern Canada high winds destroyed much orchard crop. Loss to orchardists was described by H. Chase, one of the most prominent apple shippers of Nova Scotia, as "the greatest ever to strike the valley in his memory."

Part of the cliff at Quebec was washed away by rain and fall upon an abandoned factory. Water streamed down the hill streets, and flooded the lower sections of the city.

Communication lines were broken at different points all the way from Quebec to the Eastern provinces, but repairs were going ahead rapidly.

SHOCK FATAL TO THE WIFE

Husband Claws to Death By Bear, Wife Dies

Emerson, Man., Sept. 19—Two persons are dead here as a result of a farmyard battle with a huge bear. They are Mrs. Joseph Gerbet, Mawvillis, 58-year-old farmer, while Joseph Mawvillis, 32, died after dying of witnessing her husband's death.

The bear came into the farmyard with cows which came home for milking. Mawvillis and his son attempted to drive it away, but it climbed a tree. The only firearm on the farm was a shotgun, and the farmer fired several charges in an attempt to bring the beast down. Wounded in the eyes and head, the bear fell to the ground and the two men attempted to kill it with a knife.

With one vicious slash of its huge paw, however, the animal ripped open the farmer's abdomen and he died instantly. . . .

The bear rose and limped away with the younger man giving chase armed with a pitchfork. It escaped into a swamp and was later found and killed some 400 yards from the scene of the struggle.

Mawvilla's farm is about two miles from Gardenton, a small village thirty miles east of here.

ONE CROUP STICKS TO STATE CANALS

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Delegates to the New York State Waterways Association convention met here today to decide what to do about the projected St. Lawrence deep waterway.

A group of proponents of the fifteen foot channel in the New York's century-old canal system was expected to urge the association to go on record condemning the St. Lawrence project. The international development of the river, under a treaty between the United States and Canada, has the approval, of some groups in the state, but is strongly opposed by others.

The present depth of the canal is twelve feet.

Despite Inclement Weather 'World's Fair' at Shannonville Draws Enormous Crowd

Heavy Downpour in Early Afternoon Drives Crowd Home Early

The "World's Fair" of Shannonville for the year 1932 is a thing of the past, and Saturday afternoon last, the citizens of Tyendinaga showed their loyalty to that institution (their own fair) and turned out in such numbers that despite inclement weather, the attendance proved to be one of the best in recent years. A cold heavy rain-storm put a bad hour or so into the ball game, but the "pulling" contest that had started proved such an attraction and caused so much interest that two hundred spectators ignored the downpour to follow it.

Belleville Band Present

The Belleville Municipal Band furnished music on the "Midway" for the afternoon and the various booths and games were well patronized.- Shannonville's own booth, the "pumpkin pie with ice cream" appeared to be the most busiest. The crowd, however, slighted no one and visiting was interspersed with hot dogs and chewing taffy.

The two baseball games between McIrose and Shannonville and Read and Plainfield drew a crowd along two sides of the diamond and the support for the four teams was vociferous.

Six teams entered the pulling contest and the first winner and placing had been done other owners. Each team appeared on the scene to see what they could do with the stone boat.

The speeding events were the best the World's Fair have yet produced. There were four entries each in the A and C classes, while five were made in the B. Three heats were run in each class and the races proved contests from start to finish. Mayor Tice of Belleville acted as starter and had the afternoon's program finished before 5 o'clock. There was a race all the time.

By-the-by the exhibits of live stock, tethered to cedars in the open, the entries in the booths and on the cackling hens and the various exhibits in agricultural hall had been removed: most of the visiting was completed, and Shannonville Fair 1932 was over, after nearly proving its worth as a drawing card for a theme of happy visitors. .

New Duties Distinct Handicap To American Apple Industry

Duty of $1 Per Barrel While Canadian Apples Are Free

New York, Sept. 19 (CP). — A statement published in the New York Times from Washington on a report of the Department of Agriculture concerning the Imperial Conference lists wheat, apples, oranges, grape-fruit, beans and ham as chief among the Agravian products of the United States to be affected.

"The preferential treaties include a duty of about 4 1-2 cents a bushel on wheat imported by the United Kingdom from countries not in the empire, whereas wheat is to be admitted free.

"Hence the United States exports about 15 per cent. of her production annually, of which about one-third goes to the United Kingdom," the department says in a preliminary study. "this preference of 4 1-2 cents a bushel is a matter of great importance to wheat farmers in the United States. In recent years the United Kingdom has obtained about 46 per cent. of her imported wheat from empire sources and 60 per cent. from foreign countries.

"What, then, should be the effect of the new 4 1-2 per cent preference? It would, of course, tend to divert a larger share of the British wheat import trade to empire countries. But since the Dominions export more than enough wheat to supply the entire import requirements of the United Kingdom, they would still have to compete in other markets with the United States, Argentina and other exporting countries.

"Under these circumstances the effect of the new preference should be not so much to increase the prices received by growers in the United States as to increase their ability to check the competition of non-empire wheat in the United Kingdom and to increase the stability of markets.

"Apple growers in Canada, Australia and New Zealand receive under the British agreements a preference of four shillings six pence per hundred-weight. Foreign apples, which are now subject to the general ad valorem tariff of 10 per cent., will, if these treaties are ratified, have to pay a duty equivalent to approximately $1 a barrel of 144 pounds or 21 cents per box of forty-four pounds, while empire apples will be admitted free.

"The newly proposed duties will gratically double the existing rates on the cheaper varieties," the department states.

"This preference bids fair to be a distinct handicap to the American apple industry, especially in years of low prices. . . . a duty of $1 per barrel and 21 cents per box on American apples, while Canadian and other empire apples enter free should, however, place American apple exporters at a distinct disadvantage in competition with the Canadian shipper."

Part of the bell of the 200-year old "ship" at Camberwell, England, believed to have been used by Dick Turpin, has collapsed.

SUICIDE PACT IS DOUBTED

Bodies of Two Missing Are Found in Soo Canal

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 19 —The bodies of Russell Turner, 35-year-old war veteran, and Miss Margaret Mitchell, 19, were found today floating close together in the power canal here.

They had been missing since last Tuesday. Both lived here. The girl was a waitress in a restaurant.

The two were last seen leaving the restaurant at which the girl worked. A watch on her wrist had stopped at 8.25, which Coroner E. A. Cornell said he thought indicated they had walked only three blocks before falling or jumping into the water. They left the restaurant at 8.15.

Coroner Cornell said he thought it impossible that the couple could have made a suicide pact and decided to end their lives in ten minutes.

He doubted if an inquest would be held.

FAIRBANKS, JR. IN FAST MOVING PHOTO PLAY

Son of His Father Winning Laurels on His Own Account

Surpassing even the characterization of the young nobody from nowhere in "Union Depot," Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has brought to the screen of the Capitol Theatre today a hurtling, fast-moving, thrill-packed production which adds another facet to the talent of this young actor-director.

Keeping pace with the fastest-paced imaginable story, Fairbanks, Jr., has flashed through the "Young Sinners" with all the brilliance of a meteor—and that is the kind of story which may very well have been tailor-made for him. It was an original for the screen by Mary McCall, Jr., originally titled "Hell's Kitchen."

The Goldfish Bowl" an intimation of a a national hero's inability to have his own way, and "Union Depot," typical fish in a goldfish bowl.

Directed Alfred E. Green also deserves special mention for his adroit handling of the varied personalities, ranging all the way from the thrilling undersea rescue from a submarine by men in diving suits and divers to the comparative safety of a telephone booth in Canada. Green, who also directed Fairbanks' previous picture, "Union Depot," was director of "Smart Money" and the well-remembered "Dracula."

Combined in "It's Tough to be Famous" the dramatic power of the Adrian William Fini Murray of "Smart Money" and the reality of "Union Depot" are not slighted comedy, but has, rather, presented to his picture in a family sainte mood which amuses by virtue of the very upsetting circumstances which assail a young man who, after a series of gags conscientiously after almost a death in the ring, wins a sensational hero.

Fairbanks, Jr., as the young hero whose private life suddenly becomes a matter of public property, performs excellently. He makes one visualize the annoyances and vexations that assail the men whose aerial achievements force them to the headlines in spite of modesty and unassuming natures.

"It's Tough to be Famous" will be Famous" was mirrored from the life of any of the country's great heroes of the past few years.

Fairbanks is assisted in his portrayal by a cast of really balanced excellence. Mary Brian appears as the childhood sweetheart of the hero, only to find that their marriage, by the director for the press, paper headlines and photographers. Their marriage is almost dissolved, but a happy ending reconciles them and the picture ends in rain flashes.

Hardie Albright appears as the proud mother of the young hero. Walter Catlett and Oscar Apfel appear as his manager and employer, respectively. Mary Alden may their pets equally well, but limit attempts to appear too much on the space prevents further credit, except to say that Director Green photographed the thrilling scenes of the undersea rescue, both underwater and at the surface of the ocean as the hero is taken to safety from the sub's torpedo tubes.

Don't miss a minute of "It's Tough to be Famous!"

Tonight is Dinneware Out Night when ladies are advised to be early!

LUNCHEON LOOMS AS OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Paris, Sept. 19 (AP) — International political circles today viewed as of the greatest importance a luncheon given by Premier Herriot for United States Ambassador Edge, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania and Theodore Marriner, the new counciller to the American Embassy, who is a disarmament specialist.

Joseph Paul Boncour, the Minister of War, and other governments officials were present.

Before the luncheon it was admitted unofficially that the subjects to be discussed informally would be the Hoover plan of disarmament and the situation created by Japanese recognition of Manchukuo. It was learned that Senator Reed has been doing helpful spadework on both matters, especially in Great Britain where he talked with Prime Minister MacDonald.

U. S. GOLF CHAMPION

Canada has given the golfing world a new hero, C. Ross Somerville of London, who on Saturday won the United States open golf championship. He has been a consistent player, one of the steady type which plays golf. Starting in as cricketeer at Ridley College, he toured England with the Canadian cricket team, he played with United States seniors in hockey, and also with the East London O.H.A. team. He is a member of the London Hunt Club.

The universal appeal of golf is shown in this victory for a man who comes from a country where the golfing season is not so long as it is in the United States where players have in the south twelve months of play. His victory is all the greater. When golf gets into the blood there is something present which finds a way. This Sandy Somerville has proven.

LOOKS LIKE EASY MONEY

An East Toronto man on Saturday won a dual ticket at Thorncliffe racetrack picked up winnings of $8,498. Many others went to the races and went home without money.

The winner this time is a man who has been blessed with work and who feels that he ought to some charitable acts with this "fall." He will find the needs great.

A few days before an unemployed man won a large sum on a race and he felt it had come to him almost as a godsend.

But no one can depend upon such winnings to help out in a situation when men are out of work. Those who arrange the races do not hold out such hopes.

It is the race who win, not the many and fate is as likely to pick a rich man as a poor man, indeed more likely because the rich man will have more money at stake.

The winner of Saturday realized that the winnings came as the result of a good guess, certain shrewdness, good fortune and a large element of chance. That was the proper way to look upon it. The other view might prompt a man to put his last bill on a race in the hope of winning, only to lose it, and be worse off than before.

OSTRACIZED

There have been unearthed in Greece old pieces of pottery used in voting on the ostracism of Aristides of Athens, the name of Aristides being on one of them. Now every High School student knows that Aristides was called the Just and that he was ostracized because, it is said, people were tired in old Athens of hearing him called the Just. Perhaps this was the stone upon which a disgruntled citizen of Athens wrote the name of Aristides for banishment.

If that is true Athens is like many other places, they weary even of the good sometimes. Therefore the good need feel no disgrace, no sorrow if they are unrewarded because they are in the glorious company of Aristides and his class.

THE TRANSIENTS

The coming of the colder weather which is sure to arrive sooner or later will mean an accentuation in the problems of the transients. Of late the roamers have been rather subdued or quiet in this section but with the coming of cooler weather when they cannot sleep out at nights the problem is likely to be considerably emphasized. The plan of taking the huge gigantic matter of putting an end to traffic on "blind baggage" which has been a holiday for thousands during the past couple of years. That will hit hard at the transient class, who want to get from one part of the country to another by some means or other. Already the plan of some men to ride blindbaggage was a surprise to those who knew that riding the rods was looked upon as an offence and that the culprit was jailed. The more rigid enforcement of the law in this regard was a proof of the great problem which had arisen out of idleness. But the laxity gave rise to abuses and created new problems. Hence the enforcement of the regulation prohibiting riding on a train without a ticket is promised. If the enforcement of these men can be stopped there will be, it is felt, a chance to put into force some method of handling the homeless wanderers, many of whom are now workers, by giving them a local habitation and making them establish a residence.

The summer has been a quiet time here with a great deal of freedom from the accustomed panhandler. It is to be hoped that some method will be devised to keep the panhandler out of sight during the winter also.

The reported curing of eleven hundred cases of cancer by the U.S. College of Surgeons is good news, even though these cures or arrested cases were treated before they had reached the out-of-control stage. Science is waging a relentless war to get at the cause of this scourge of the world and to effect cures if possible. Deaths from cancer form ever larger proportions of the total death rate.

OCTOBER SONG

By Aliae Michaelis

October hours are tinted
With colors bright and gay;
October gold is minted
Down every forest way.

A touch of sadness lingers
For summer and the rose;
But under Autumn's fingers
A brighter blossom glows.

October is all misted
With drifting amber haze,
Her painted leaves and twisted
Fall ever through the days.

As to the year October
Comes, so it must to life,
Yet with no trappings sober,
No hint of wintry strife.

But filled with true love's splendor
And softened by times' haze,
October, restful, tender,
Brings tranquil, briefer days!

OCTOBER 1, 1392, is the date set for Ameliasburg Fair, according to a card poster displayed about the city. We would hate to think that Ameliasburg Fair is going back that far, when it seemed so up and coming one short year ago. However, we all make mistakes—but when the printer makes one he can not bury it but it must parade for the benefit of all from the housetops, at least on the walls and windows of the city. Here's hoping that Ameliasburg Fair is bigger and better than ever this year despite the reference to 1392 on the public invitation.

CAMDEN EAST is a village, quiet, drowsy in the summer, somnolent in the winter, away back in the hinterland, north and east of Napanee, one of those villages which to casual inspection appears to have had no past of interest and no future of promise—but this would be a mistake for Camden East has a past of which the inhabitants are justly proud, they can boast that the village was the birthplace of Sir Gilbert Parker. The author was born in Camden East, his father, a retired Imperial army officer, was village magistrate and a lay preacher of considerable power. Gilbert Parker preached a sermon in Bethel Hall, Belleville answering a last minute emergent call when the regular preacher was unavoidably prevented from being present. Capt. Parker happened to be in attendance and upon being asked if he would take the service, consented, and did a remarkably good job of it, according to the recollection of Mrs. Spencer, W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee, in his history of Lennox and Addington, speaks of Sir Gilbert's early boyhood as follows:

"The villagers (of Camden East) love to recall the names of their talented sons who have distinguished themselves in different walks of life. In the heart of the village is still standing an old house in which there was born, about fifty years ago, a lad who was little from the other boys of the neighborhood. He went to the same school, played in the same muddy street, and learned to swim in the same pond as the rest of the youth. His father kept a store and was also a justice of the peace, and it was said of him that his court never adjourned, but justice was administered under the nearest tree where a case overtook him. The boy's grandfather was a Methodist exhorter, a man of little education, but deep in the Book of Books, which he had digested and that was the Book of Books, and in an argument upon the Scriptures, he was never known to come out second best. He was a forceful speaker, and this particular grandson inherited the oratory of the grandfather, and at an early age acquired a local reputation as a speaker and reciter. For a time he was clerk in the store of Mr. James S. Haydon and did not impress his employer as possessing any extraordinary qualifications for the position. Later on he inclined towards the pulpit, moved to Belleville with his father, who was elected lay-reader and deacon in St. Thomas' Church under Rev. Canon Burke."

MODERATION HABIT NEEDED FOR WELFARE

Excesses Undermine and Eventually Kill Offender

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

If we practiced moderation in all things each and every one of us would surely be able to add many years to what might be called the ordinary life span. For, in the last analysis, it is the excesses that undermine and eventually kill. He who overdoes eventually falls sick.

We eat too much, or work too hard, or play too much. Possibly we do think that hard, physical labor can be counteractagious to our recreation that is gone after with the same energy we employ in our work. And instead of resting, or of playing in a common sense fashion, we complicate and do devitalize the system even more.

Consider heart disease, kidney disease, tuberculosis, arterial troubles, liver and stomach disturbances and the like. It's people who never take a vacation or who dissipate in excess food or drink or riotous living who so frequently fall victims to these maladies.

Contagious diseases are, of course another matter. Yet even here we so frequently, if not usually, get sick because of carelessness. We know we should nurse a cold, for example, but we insist on going forward, uninterrupted, just the same. We set told the dangers of smallpox, typhoid and diphtheria, although we have no time to visit a doctor or clinic and take a few minutes for a preventive inoculation.

It isn't so much what we do that matters but the fact that we all tend to be extremists. Regardless of everybody—except those who have a special chemical "idiosyncrasy" for certain foods—instances like strawberries—yes, even spinach can eat everything if only moderation be exercised.

And it's the same with drinking. Lots of people can't stand coffee or tea because they want too much of it. And lots smoke when not but harmful effects resulting if only they would be discreet.

People play tennis and golf so long and hard that they sooner or later suffer physically and with consequence, must stop altogether. Dancing is an excellent recreation too, and fine exercise. But it can be a dangerous pastime if carried on for hours at a stretch and at the expense of much-needed sleep.

Surely reading would seem to be perfectly harmless. Yet hundreds of persons overdo even that. In fact, they read so much, that they read, remember what they read, not to mention the mental confusion that may go with such bad habits.

To be sure, it is natural that people are not moderate. It is human to want to repeat any stimulus that gives a pleasurable sense of comfort or well-being or that seems to do you good. If you like candy and it is agreeable to your taste, your mind tells to repeat candy stimulus until you have finished the box.

But when comes a comforting sensation in small amounts will produce disagreeable effects when excess does. In the case of candy you get nausea, dizziness, revolt and the entire digestion be upset.

Yet we have been given a brain that tells us what is good and what is bad for us if only we would heed its warnings.

It is true that variety is the spice of life. Variety is also excellent for body and mind. Then why not enjoy many things—more things rather than take the risk of being forced to abandon one thing one really likes because of overindulgence.

And the best of it is that not only do excesses not add one bit their thrill for us, but it is also a fact that we can make ourselves like anything and in the end learn to like it.

Make moderation a habit so that you may live long and enjoy life to the full.

KINGSTON FAIR TO CLEAR OFF 1931 DEBT

Kingston, Sept. 19—The Kingston Fair which concluded at the week end enjoyed the largest patronage for ten years, and the receipts will clear the directors indebtedness of $2,100 and have a good surplus. Last winter and spring the city, which owns the grounds, spent a large sum of money in improving the track and helping the unemployed. It has now a finer speedway track and horse racing track than ever before.

SEPT. MEETING W. C. T. U.

The September meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was in charge of Mesdames Brusle and Faulkner.

Meeting opened with singing "All Round the World the White Ribbon is Twined," repeating the Pledge and Prayer.

The President welcomed the members after the vacation. She quoted Mrs. Colvin, President of New York State in saying "Hold up your hands as members of the W.C.T.U. for it stands for organized God-love. Be proud to wear the white bow for it is the bow of Promise that the Liquor Traffic shall not ultimately triumph.

Reference was made to the Women of Finland, who have given the World a rough job, in forming a counter-attack upon the forces of alcohol, with a determination and plan of campaign that has already set the forces of evil trembling with fear. "Prohibition has not failed Finland" these women declare but "Finland has failed Prohibition". The women backed by financial support from the State, are planning the publication of a Temperance newspaper and the holding of meetings throughout the country. Special attention will be given to the system of local option by which the country may be won back to Prohibition.

Mrs. O'Flynn conducted the Devotional Exercises. Her talk was based on Paul's letter to Ephesians, written while in Prison, and exhortations to Love and Courage to Even when things are against us. "It is not by might nor by Power, but by My Spirit," saith the Lord. Let us be courageous and clean in deed. It is then we must show our colors and be true.

Plans were made to send Representatives to the Provincial Convention to be held in Brockville October 3rd to 7th.

Mrs. Moore outlined the campaign of Temperance Education to be held in the Sunday Schools during October and the first Sunday in November and women representing the church were appointed to further this study. Prizes will be given for the best essays on the topic by County, Province and Dominion. Members are asked to encourage the boys and girls in this interesting and instructive contest.

A solo was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Hall. Mrs. Morris contributed an interesting reading.

Mrs. Stonebugh, who during her recent trip visited a W.C.T.U. meeting and Temperance Convention in B. D. C. gave an account of these and stressed the fact, we are not alive to the Temperance issue, as they are in B.C.

A motion was passed that a resolution be sent to Premier Henry and the member of West Hastings, protesting against the sale of beer and wines in hotels.

Redistribution Bill Will Cut Down Present 48

Victoria, Sept. 19 (CP).—Douglas Mowat which has hung over British Columbia politics for weeks was to some extent cleared up today as a result of the publication of Premier T. D. Pattullo's long-awaited statement of his views on the formation of a union government.

Two things are clear. There will be no immediate change in the Cabinet, and the Premier will attempt to form a union government, before the third change early next year.

Before the changes takes place, however, the legislature will meet and will be asked to enact necessary legislation and a redistribution which will cut the present membership of 48 down to the lowest number consistent with proper representation of the people. The size of the Cabinet will also be reduced.

MONEY ON THE RED

By Rebeccah McBride

"They're untrustworthy, unreliable, bad tempered vixens," declared Jim Kirk, general assistant District Attorney, hotly and wound up his tirade by adding, "My motto is—Never trust a Redhead."

His brother lawyer grinned and asked, "What's she?"

"What do you mean who's she?" I

"Just what I said. You're in love with a redheaded wench who's probably stood you up for a date and now you're sore but wait till I see her again. You'll sing a different tune."

"The devil I will. I'm going to teach that redheaded menace a lesson," Kirk looked glumly down at his nearly empty glass and called the waiter for another bottle of—probably near-beer.

He looked up from his glass to find himself staring into a pair of blue eyes which, despite their contriteness, still managed to retain their habitual look of mischief.

The glimmering blue eyes evening wrap she wore made the girl's red hair startlingly vivid. The clinging strand seemed to exude vitality. The face under the bronze curls might have been classed "baby" by the casual observer, but to Jim's older companion's practiced character in the rounded but firm and intelligent chin.

"I think you're wrong Jim" he said aloud.

Jim worked out of his daze and "Miss Leona Ritchie Mr. Dakin"

"I'm late but I'm hungry, too," Leona said, as she sank down gracefully hungry. I haven't had a bite since breakfast."

"Oh, I wouldn't call it being late," Dakin said. "I'll have you two to make it up sister," Attorney Dakin continued, turning to Jim Kirk and grining at Jim, took his leave, "Somebody's waiting for you," he chair around to Jim's side of the table.

"What's wrong, honey? It's not just my being late—I couldn't help it, honest. I'm willed to marry him that she had lost her purse and walked across the street to get him there. Probably in his present state of mind he couldn't believe her anyway, was Leona's mental comment.

Aloud she said, "Wrong? I'm up a tree, Leona. Licked!" Tenderly Leona patted the clinched fist on the table.

"Don't talk like that!"

"You know the Norellus case? Well he's backed down on his confession. Says we coerced her and she talked under pressure. Makes it look for me that I got the confession out of her. And we don't know what that means."

"Isn't there something you can do? Can't you think of something? I wouldn't give up so easily."

"You wouldn't! Oh, sure, there's one thing I can do—I can resign later. Jim's tone was sarcastic. "All I have to do is to go to Washington, D. C. Big Tim and get him to admit that he's not the father of Norellus. Of course, that's simple."

"Don't be sarcastic, Jim," said Leona softly and tremulously.

"Do you? Why don't you marry me then? You've been after me for a hundred times."

"Jim, darling. Slick to facts. A lawyer through and through. Contracts, then I'm going to marry when the short notice. You know my contract has a 'no-marriage' clause."

"Contracts have been broken." "Why, Jim Kirk, you're crazy. And when Sirsaus gave me my chance in the Follies he broke and couldn't even get in the chorus."

Our friends are always first to bring misfortune to us," said Dakin who told Jim of seeing Leona with Sirsaus at dinner. Jim told Maide Du Val and others of the Norellus case.

Jim's face was a poker mask but his inwardly he groaned. He had counted on Leona and she was repeating him in a redhead's coin with the Sirsaus affair. Well, it was all over now.

No wonder she's put his office manager to calling him. Indians were conspiring with Leona to get the sides were communicating with each other and were already becoming failure the next day.

"I could wring her neck." "If there and I could, I guess you can't trust a woman across the street."

Jim finished up what work he had to do and left the office for his buried home. It was four o'clock when his phone rang. Ringing for a had been doing intermittently and tossing about on his bed. Probably a wrong number, he thought, then got out of bed and answered.

The soft, yet vital little voice coming over the wires sent a tingle down his spine.

"Jim, I can't say much. Meet me at the Tropic Night Cafe. Bring some one with you to the door—no way—up the stairs." There was a click. "Leona gone before, he could say a word.

Turn to the cafe, he feared another double-cross. Yet that voice called him and in a few minutes, after rousing Dakin by phone and getting a sleepy promise to meet him at Columbus Circle, he was on his way.

The Tropic Nights was way out on the Merrick Road, but after picking up Dakin and getting across Queensboro Bridge, Jim's small, powerful car made — it in record time.

The back door was unlocked. That might mean anything. If Leona was playing straight, she would have fixed that. If not, well.....he was ready for anything.

The two men made their way softly up the back stairs and to the second floor where Jim knew the private rooms to be. They knocked now for a woman screaming and Jim Recognized Leona's gruff voice saying, "shut up," over and over again.

Then they heard a scuffle and the shrill voice again.

"Don't you touch me, Tim. I've got you down on you and you know it. And I'm goin' to tell you one thing I know. Two-timin' me with that redhead. Me and I'll be done for you! Perjuring myself! Me! Me! Me! Me and your crowd!"

"Shut your mouth!" came Big Tim's growl.

"Shut my mouth, will I? You think I'm scared out this matter or I'll get on that witness stand and perjure myself. No, I'll stick to that confession and tell—everything."

Jim gently turned the door knob. It was unlocked. Cautiously he and Dakin stepped into the room.

Leona's blue eyes winked a signal to him at once: "Play up!" Jim took in the scene. Leona and Tim thrust an arm protectingly around the girl. Tim's face reddened to clinch matters. Maide ran to Jim's side.

"You take me with you. And keep me locked up so this bunch of double-crossers won't get at me."

x x x

Over their shoulders Jim and Dakin were silent. Finally, Dakin said apologetically.

"I guess how you feel, old boy. I guess you're right on that redhead business."

"Right? I'm all wet." Jim was quick to admit. "Leona said so emphatically. "I'm the biggest fool that ever lived. And Leona is the most square, honest, loyal sweetheart a man ever had."

"Yeah," Dakin said.

"Wake up!" Jim grinned. "Will you marry her?" Dakin's face grew red. Leona's show closed. Don't you get it?"

Dakin shook his head.

She was acting all the time. Took the train to get away from Val woman so jealous she'd get him disbarred. The Indians were in the pay of Tim.

Solemnly Dakin reached across the table and grasped Leona's hand.

Jim. "After that," he declared, "my money goes on red every time. Here's to luck and you."

"I'm late but I'm hungry, too," Leona said, as she sank down gracefully hungry. I haven't had a bite since breakfast."

"Oh, I wouldn't call it being late," Dakin said. "I'll have you two to make it up sister," Attorney Dakin continued, turning to Jim Kirk and grining at Jim, took his leave, "Somebody's waiting for you," he chair around to Jim's side of the table.

"What's wrong, honey? It's not just my being late—I couldn't help it, honest. I'm willed to marry him that she had lost her purse and walked across the street to get him there. Probably in his present state of mind he couldn't believe her anyway, was Leona's mental comment.

Aloud she said, "Wrong? I'm up a tree, Leona. Licked!" Tenderly Leona patted the clinched fist on the table.

"Don't talk like that!"

"You know the Norellus case? Well he's backed down on his confession. Says we coerced her and she talked under pressure. Makes it look for me that I got the confession out of her. And we don't know what that means."

"Isn't there something you can do? Can't you think of something? I wouldn't give up so easily."

"You wouldn't! Oh, sure, there's one thing I can do—I can resign later. Jim's tone was sarcastic. "All I have to do is to go to Washington, D. C. Big Tim and get him to admit that he's not the father of Norellus. Of course, that's simple."

"Don't be sarcastic, Jim," said Leona softly and tremulously.

"Do you? Why don't you marry me then? You've been after me for a hundred times."

"Jim, darling. Slick to facts. A lawyer through and through. Contracts, then I'm going to marry when the short notice. You know my contract has a 'no-marriage' clause."

"Contracts have been broken." "Why, Jim Kirk, you're crazy. And when Sirsaus gave me my chance in the Follies he broke and couldn't even get in the chorus."

Our friends are always first to bring misfortune to us," said Dakin who told Jim of seeing Leona with Sirsaus at dinner. Jim told Maide Du Val and others of the Norellus case.

Jim's face was a poker mask but his inwardly he groaned. He had counted on Leona and she was repeating him in a redhead's coin with the Sirsaus affair. Well, it was all over now.

No wonder she's put his office manager to calling him. Indians were conspiring with Leona to get the sides were communicating with each other and were already becoming failure the next day.

"I could wring her neck." "If there and I could, I guess you can't trust a woman across the street."

Jim finished up what work he had to do and left the office for his buried home. It was four o'clock when his phone rang. Ringing for a had been doing intermittently and tossing about on his bed. Probably a wrong number, he thought, then got out of bed and answered.

The soft, yet vital little voice coming over the wires sent a tingle down his spine.

"Jim, I can't say much. Meet me at the Tropic Night Cafe. Bring some one with you to the door—no way—up the stairs." There was a click. "Leona gone before, he could say a word.

Turn to the cafe, he feared another double-cross. Yet that voice called him and in a few minutes, after rousing Dakin by phone and getting a sleepy promise to meet him at Columbus Circle, he was on his way.

The Tropic Nights was way out on the Merrick Road, but after picking up Dakin and getting across Queensboro Bridge, Jim's small, powerful car made — it in record time.

The back door was unlocked. That might mean anything. If Leona was playing straight, she would have fixed that. If not, well.....he was ready for anything.

The two men made their way softly up the back stairs and to the second floor where Jim knew the private rooms to be. They knocked now for a woman screaming and Jim Recognized Leona's gruff voice saying, "shut up," over and over again.

Then they heard a scuffle and the shrill voice again.

"Don't you touch me, Tim. I've got you down on you and you know it. And I'm goin' to tell you one thing I know. Two-timin' me with that redhead. Me and I'll be done for you! Perjuring myself! Me! Me! Me! Me and your crowd!"

"Shut your mouth!" came Big Tim's growl.

"Shut my mouth, will I? You think I'm scared out this matter or I'll get on that witness stand and perjure myself. No, I'll stick to that confession and tell—everything."

Jim gently turned the door knob. It was unlocked. Cautiously he and Dakin stepped into the room.

Leona's blue eyes winked a signal to him at once: "Play up!" Jim took in the scene. Leona and Tim thrust an arm protectingly around the girl. Tim's face reddened to clinch matters. Maide ran to Jim's side.

"You take me with you. And keep me locked up so this bunch of double-crossers won't get at me."

With Jim and Dakin swiftly propelling her, she left the room before Big Tim could recover.

x x x

Over their shoulders Jim and Dakin were silent. Finally, Dakin said apologetically.

"I guess how you feel, old boy. I guess you're right on that redhead business."

"Right? I'm all wet." Jim was quick to admit. "Leona said so emphatically. "I'm the biggest fool that ever lived. And Leona is the most square, honest, loyal sweetheart a man ever had."

"Yeah," Dakin said.

"Wake up!" Jim grinned. "Will you marry her?" Dakin's face grew red. Leona's show closed. Don't you get it?"

Dakin shook his head.

She was acting all the time. Took the train to get away from Val woman so jealous she'd get him disbarred. The Indians were in the pay of Tim.

Solemnly Dakin reached across the table and grasped Leona's hand.

Jim. "After that," he declared, "my money goes on red every time. Here's to luck and you."

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Make-up For Middle Age

We're not for bowing down the well-shod feet, goes in for party, fifty and sixty-year-old girls for right on the right woman, no matter what some of the long-nosed ones may say—she can wear make-up as well as the next one. If she doesnt use it, she looks only partially set up and put together.

Complexions change with the years, but so do offerings of the beautician. Factory hints are going to be picked one casually, they must be modified to suit. In many beauty shops, there are opened compacts. The cash customer may try 'em all from falshting-away what to something that will make the stop light signal look pale. They are all there. And there is one that is for you.

The Beauty Box

What present-day fashions have done for some women is a pleasure to report. There they sat tall, svelte beauties with snippy little waist lines, pencil slim skirts, proportions expanded with gentle curves, hips nowhere at all that anybody can discover, flat cuntums. To these women of generous proportions the fates are flawless, designers kind, dress gracious. And they have inspired beauty aids to tend to their exercises, count their calories, pull their backbones, start a world war against fat cells. The normal figure is the strong, beauty of now and if Mrs. Fashion inspires the slenderness of the skeleton to attain it, she is a beneficient influence.

Feminine feet that bobble along on high heels are going to be grateful for a few hours enasement in low pumps for comfort. Conditioned how decent and patient feet are when they're treated right, it would seem as if they might have a rest cure. Not so. Fashion insists that shoes be unbuckled, an opportunity for sole spread. Women who've been pampering their little dogs look comfortable, wide low-heeled shoes with a strap that will not bind.

Don't wash shimp on soap when shampooing the hair. Many women whose tresses show evidence of soap scum after the shampoo, don't make the lather thick, rich and sparkling, as it should be. A solution doesn't cut into dirt and grease, a combination that will set a stage to an alarming extent in one shampoo. Use a pure soap instead.

Yet another chapter is added to the history of aviation in "Round Fost and Harold Gatty in their book "Around the World in Eight Days" which tells his Pacific flight in the morning of June 23rd, 1931 and New Zealand, the world by way of Harbor Grace, Chester, Berlin, Moscow, Khabarovsk, Blagovestchensk, Khabarovsk, Fairbanks and Minneapolis in 4 days, 18 hours, 51 minutes. Thus the non-stop flying of the Atlantic Ocean, hitherto considered a feat of great endurance and daring, became, for the first time in history, surpassed more than one stage of a much longer flight. The author's attempts in writing the book, each syllable in a chapter or two his impressions of the great way of his journey of unfolding an autobiographical sketch of the flight of Gatty and Fost, the "Winnie Mae" clipped the zero hour from 115 hours and 30 minutes to 90 days, cut over three years from the time-record of the first circumnavigation of the globe—Magellan's to beat the "Graf Zeppelin" by twelve days. A particularly interesting section of the book is the chapter describing the construction of the log book carried on the "Winnie Mae," showing the hour by hour entries as Mr. Gatty made them. Correct Manners

THE WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My husband's cousin is to be married very soon at her home some distance away. I do not know if it will be possible for us to attend. Will you kindly let me know the proper time to send a gift so that we are to be present or if we do not attend the wedding?

2.—How should a person be introduced to a group of people?

3.—What is the correct form for me in signing a letter like this my self?

S.

1.—Whether or not you plan to attend the wedding, you should send your gift any about two weeks before the date of the wedding. Or at least a week before, if two weeks is perhaps impossible. But whether you go or not, send your gift. It is usually considered courteous to have it sent from the shop in which you buy it. Most of these shops now have especially attractive ways of packaging wedding gifts, and all in all, it is the most simple and convenient way of sending them.

2.—When we are introducing one person to a group of people, we should make the introduction seem as complete in each case as it seems to be without so much repetition that the appearance of the form becomes monotonous.

A woman is first introduced to the other women present, and then the men are presented to her. A man also is, of course, first presented to the women present and then introduced to the other men. Unmarried women are introduced to women, married women to women, and so on, may, if we wish, mention only the given name, as Miss Jane Brown, but we do not, we may use the polite formula, Mrs. Henry Smith, Miss Jane Brown, Mrs. William Brown, may I present Mr. William Smith.

3.—This is the correct form for a married woman to use to sign her name to a letter. Mrs. Henry Smith. A woman's husband's name is never used in signing a letter like this.

C.

Yours very truly,
Mary Brown Smith
(Mrs. Henry Smith)

The letter must be signed directly with the informal signature, which would be used, naturally, in the first person.

A letter of any kind must not be signed in this way:

Yours very truly,
Mrs. Charles Smith.

In the form that I have outlined, one may, of course, substitute for the very formal and correct "Yours very truly", the more informal "Yours truly" or "Yours very sincerely".

There is no one more change that is allowed: if the married woman prefers to use her own Christian name, she may, making no change in the form. She may also use the informal name first, and then must write in parentheses underneath her formal name ...Mrs. Charles Smith.

HOPE CHEST

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Will you please comment, please tell me whose place it is to buy the engagement ring, the girl's or the boy's? Also, is it the usually given the engagement ring?

J.

1.—Under the man suggests that he would like to have given to the chest to his fiancee, the girl herself buys it.

2.—It is usually given after the engagement has been announced.

C.

SERVING GUESTS

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Please advise me which of the following is the correct way to serve:

For the host to serve drinks to his wife in the house first, then the lady guests and gentlemen guests. Or should he serve the lady guests first, then his wife, and then the gentlemen guests last?

D.

The lattgr form that you suggest is correct. The host serves first the women guests—then his wife, and last the most guests.

ONE WIN WILL COP FLAG FOR CHICAGO CUBS

Pirates Open Four Game Series in Chicago, Tuesday

DEFEAT REDS

15 Innings Duel is Taken When Hemsley Doubles With Man On

Given an offday by the schedule makers today, the Chicago Cubs collected all their forces for a last-ditch grapple with the Pittsburgh Pirates, that may clinch the National League pennants for the Cubs no later than tomorrow.

Their speedsters got a victory over the Cincinnati Reds in 15 innings yesterday but the Cubs in a position where they can gain the flag by any one victory over the Pirates in the four game series which opened with a double header in Wrigley Field tomorrow. Single games will be played Wednesday and Thursday. Even should the Pirates sweep the series and win their first game with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cubs still could win the pennant by beating Cincinnati in their last two days, Saturday and Sunday.

It was the scatchiest playboy, Bill Hemsley, who broke up the Cubs' duel with the Reds yesterday. The young outfielder hit a double with John Moore on second base in the 15th. It was a tough game for Red Lucas to lose. Lonnie Warneke started for the Cubs but was replaced by Charley Root in the 13th.

Pirates Won Two

The Pirates got effective pitching from Larry French and Leon Chagnon and beat the New York Giants twice, 7-4 and 3-1. Floyd Vaughan was leading the way, the Pirates jumped into an early lead in each contest and then held it safely. The younger Warner collected six hits.

Brooklyn's hold on third place was seriously endangered as the fourth place Phillies took a 5-1 decision behind Phil Collins.

American League

In the American League the champions, New York Yankees beat the St. Louis Browns 7-3 to give Johnny Allen his 17th victory but they could not solve Sam Gray's shuts in the second game and went down 3-1.

The Philadelphia Athletics gained valuable ground in their battle to clinch second place by beating the White Sox twice, 6-4 and 7-5. Jimmy Dykes hit his 33rd homer.

Splitting a double bill with Cleveland, holding the first 7-3 and winning the second 9-2, the Senators lost ground.

McNaughton's wildness enabled Detroit to whip the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

LEONARD and McLARNIN MATCHED

Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion who is staging one of the ring's most remarkable comebacks has been matched for a 10-round bout with Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver welterweight, at Madison Square Garden's new bowl on October 3. Leonard has fought and won 21 bouts during his comeback campaign. Some of those bouts were against fair opponents, such as Billy Townsend and Paulie Walker, but he has met no one in McLarnin's class. Leonard wants to get a match sooner, but McLarnin would not agree to a near date because he wants plenty of time for a rest in the hills to heal. He suffered the cut during his recent bout with Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, Mass., to whom he lost the decision. I'll take there," said Jones. "He has all the stuff and he knows how to play them."

Goodman's spectacular bid for the title unconsistently was checked by the steadiest performer in the 36th National tournament, here on the picturesque Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club. Somerville shot a record-breaking 68 in the third round to check Bill Blaney, new Boston star, and he shot par golf for the last eight holes to overtake and beat Johnny Goodman, 2 and 1 in the 36-hole match.

Great Length Off Tee.

Somerville's greater length off the tee, sup-rior iron play and sensational putting turned the trick. Either was an outfielder, first with the Pittsburgh Pirates and later with Brooklyn, before embarking on his career as an umpire

It seems that Barrie and North Bay were slugging it out in baseball on Saturday last. This means the Victories will now lap the Yellowknifers every Saturday when, we understand, the winner of Barrie and North Bay will play Belleville, Ontario. There was a good baseball day in the Quinte City and we cannot understand why the Bay-de-Verte boys were not represented only to say as to keep in touch with competition during the play-downs.

TRIBUTES PAID BY GOLFERS

By Alan Gould Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Sept. 19.—American golf today accepted the new holder of its championship trophy, Rose "Sandy" Somerville, Canadian sportsman, with praise.

"Somerville's victory strikes a particularly happy chord in our international golf relations," said Herbert H. Ramsay, President of the United States Golf Association. "Johnny Goodman acquitted himself splendidly on behalf of our rising group of younger players, in the finals but he lost Saturday by a close margin to a golfer with real championship stuff.

"It was a great match, a fine victory for Somerville and a real tribute to Canadian golf. I can say happily that since the trophy has to leave this country, it can be in no better hands."

Bobby Jones, who defeated Somerville in the final round of the Georgian's last championship at Merion in 1930, praised the Canadian as one of the finest match players he has ever met.

"But for a lucky putt I got owing to turn things my way at Merion Somerville might have beaten me

METCALF WINS BOTH SPRINTS

Betty Taylor Best Olympic Finalist in 80 Metres Hurdles

By Elmer Dallmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 19.—Ralph Metcalfe, burly colored sprinter from Marquette University, which was called Uncle Sam's chief threat for Olympic sprint title before the Los Angeles games, scored two smashing victories over 19-year-old Bert Pearson, schoolboy flash who was Canada's No. 1 dash man at the 1928 Olympic games, this Saturday in invitation races that featured the Canada-U.S. track and field meet of Hamilton Olympic Club.

In a wind and rain storm that blew up as they went to their marks for the 100 yards, Metcalfe sped into the tape two yards ahead of Pearson in 10 2-5 seconds—slower time than either had been clocked in all season.

Under greatly improved conditions an hour later, Metcalfe won at 220 yards by a scant three feet over Pearson in 21 flat—one-fifth of a second slower than the Canadian record of 21 1-5.

Upset Drop

Another invitation event was supposed to be a match race over the 80-metre hurdle route between two Olympic finalists, Evelyn Hall of Chicago, and Betty Taylor, of Toronto, but Betty Taylor, tall Hamilton girl who failed to reach the finals at Los Angeles, upset everything by beating both in impressive time of 11 4-5, Miss Hall was second to the Hamilton girl and Miss Wilson third.

Cliff Bricker, veteran Galt marathoner, went out of his class to whip Little Bob Hankins of Toronto, holder of the Canadian 5,000 metre record, by 40 yards over the other upset.

Barrel-Chester Norman Deck of Hamilton won the Marathon, covering the wet pavements of the round-the-bay course in 2 hours, 50 minutes, 57 seconds, to beat Alex Burnside, Toronto, by 250 yards.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

According to the Peterboro Examiner no less a personage than Jake Gaudaur is a visitor in the Lift Lock City at present. The colorful coach of Peter, is not just as big a kidder as ever, we understand.

We know of no better stimulate than the return of the ex-Peterboro manager to the helm of the floundering Argonaut ship. He has but making his annual visit to the Lift Lock City we are merely watching these suggestions in order to try and revive the old spirit which formerly prevailed in the old Central lodge.

Although pole is a rather foreign sport in Belleville than interested in that pastime we have an opportunity of seeing some of the best played by experts when Mr. George Artins' picture. A Great Calamity, is shown at the Capitol today. This is supposed to be a millionaire's story but it is one of thrills and is considered one of the fast-est games in the sport world.

Rod La Rocque has taken leave of Belleville and is vacationing at Corcoran in promoting wrestling bouts in Kingston now. Jimmy Samson is staying here and looking after the local end. Perhaps Mr. Corcoran seems to have made up his mind to make his "grapplers" a paying proposition in Eastern Ontario. Although he has not announced his program and for next week we understand that there are to be a number of bouts to be staged matched in Belleville pretty soon.

Al Hildebrand, son of George Hildebrand, of the American League umpire, attracted a lot of attention this spring as third baseman for the University of Southern California team. As a sophomore, young Hildebrand batted .400 this spring and started out at the same fast pace this season. Al's father was an outfielder, first with the San Francisco Seals and later with Brooklyn, before embarking on his career as an umpire

According to information received Tommy Burns, Belleville's hope in the recent C.N.E. swim, will attempt to swim from the Government pier to Nine Mile Point and back on Wednesday. It is understood that Tommy's friends are a bit skeptical as to his prowess in the water and have laid a little bet that he can't finish the distance in seven hours. As the distance is only nine miles, the stocky Blue swimmer will have to cover that distance in seven hours, which will be no mean task. Tommy intends paddling for a time.

All Canada is honoring "Silent Sandy" Somerville of London, Ont., upon his winning of the United States open golf championship when he staged one of the brightest comebacks ever seen in that great golf classic. Sandy was trailing at the end of the twenty seventh hole but he battled gamely to pull ahead and win the coveted title, two up and one to go.

With the world's series but ten days away the baseball lovers are getting out the old dope book and trying to win the series with figures and averages. Queer as it may seem averages do not seem to stick any closer during baseball's fall classic.

Today's question: In how many games did Earnshaw relieve Grove and receive credit for the winning? ans. 7. R. L.

Earnshaw relieved Grove in ten games in 1931, but in neither game was he credited with victory or charged with defeat.

Shoux City, Ia., Sept. 19 — A "revolt" against the selling of livestock and grain in all agricultural states of the Mid-West today became the objective of leaders of the Iowa-born farm "revolt."

The plan calling on agriculturists to withhold their livestock and grain until they receive prices equal to production costs is to go into effect next Wednesday, but pickering is to be frowned upon by leaders of the movement.

Walters had cashed $500 in cheques at the time he was arrested in a bank here, according to police.

Buffalo, however, showed even greater improvement, going up from the cellar to finish in third place after a battle with Baltimore, that was decided until the last day of the season. Rochester, champion for four straight seasons, slumped to fifth, while Jersey held fourth.

Baltimore and Jersey City also showed improvement, while Albany, formerly Reading and Toronto dropped lower.

MARKET QUIET VOLUME LIGHT

First Two Hours Dullest Of Trading in Months

Toronto, Sept. 19—The forenoon session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today presented a distinct contrast to that of the corresponding Monday of a year ago, when the market was faced with the suspension of the gold standard by Great Britain and the committee concerned the minimum price rule to prevent panicky dumping of securities. Today the market was very quiet, volume light and price fluctuations narrow. In fact it was the dullest two hours in many months.

Leaders failed to set an example for the balance of the list and international Nickel, Consolidated Smelters, Brazilian Traction and C.P.R., were fractions higher. Ford was unchanged at 4½. Gold Mines were evenly. Utilities lower, and Industrial issues were firm.

PRICE TREND NOT DEFINITE

Bidding Not Brisk But Sales Compared Favorably

Toronto, Sept. 19 — Standard Stock and Mining Exchange gave a quietly irregular performance in the opening session of the week to-day. Price action being confined to a narrow range and showing absence of definite trend. Bidding was not brisk but sales, amount to 167,000 shares for the first two hours, compared favorably with last week's average.

International Nickel regained 25 cents to 8½ at noon. Consolidated Hudson Bay was off 10 at $3.70, however, and Base Metals off fractions.

In the gold group Teck-Hughes firmed 6 to $3.35 in odd-lot sales and Macassa, Rowley and Brest Twitchell were slightly higher. Hollinger dipped 10 to $3.35 and Sylvanite, Lamaque and Dome Mines eased a cent or so each. Oils were mixed, with Homestead up one at 23.

WALL STREET TURNS LOWER

Rally Succeeding to Weakness Flattens Out in P. M.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Late selling which centered mainly in U.S. Steel issues wiped out a short-lived rally in railroad farm equipment and utility shares today. Losses averaged around 1 to 3 points, following early advances of like proportions. Steel common was down more than 2 and the preferred broke about 7. Losses of 1 point or more were registered by Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and American Can; Sales approximated 1,300,000 shares.

New York, Sept. 19—The Stock Market moved sluggishly today, but showed strong resistance to the early selling flurry. The list turned upward on trading around the afternoon hours, with most rails and many industrials moderately higher.

Railroad securities appeared to furnish the backbone of the market. They yielded a point, or so at one time, but quickly retraced their steps, holding steadily above the final prices of Saturday. Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Louisville and Nashville, among others, were a point or so up on the day.

U. S. Steel issues were under some early pressure when a break of 6¼ points carried the common to a new low record, presumably based on doubts as to dividend continuance. Later, however, common shares rallied by Saturday's close after a dip of more than 8 points, and the preferred regained about one-quarter of its losses. Chrysler, Case, Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, National Cash Register and Consolidated Gas were up 1 to 2 points. Trading was the dullest in several weeks.

Strength of cotton, which advanced on weather news, and firmness of grains helped a little in the stock market. Wall Street has been paying close attention to the subject of commodities.

Letters to the Editor

DOLLAR FEE
Belleville, Sept. 17 1932.
To the Editor, Ontario Intelligencer.
Dear Sir,—

It was with great interest that I read in your issue of today's paper, the letter from Principal Macfarlaurin setting forth the reasons for the one dollar fee and the use to which it is expended. This statement could and should have been issued by the Board of Education to the School commencement, so that parents would know why this fee was being enforced. I note that the Collegiate Institute Board will venture the guess that a careful examination would reveal that the majority of the money is expended on sports. I am not opposed to sports for children, far from it, but I do object to pupils receiving the ultimatum that unless this fee is paid by a certain date that they will be unable to continue at school. It is evident from Principal Macfarlane's statement that this fee was set by the Board of Education. The revised Statutes of Ontario 1927, Chapter 324, Section 41, (1) reads: No fees shall be payable by pupils attending a high school. They have a right to attend under the provisions of this Act.

Section (1) of the same chapter reads—High schools shall be known as collegiate Institute.

There may be some other section which permits fees to be levied. If so will the Chairman of the Board of Education please enlighten us.

I still remain,

Ratepayer.

BELLEVILLIAN SEES STARS SHOT ON 'LOT'

Mr. J. C. McCarthy Has Inside View of Hollywood

"Money" is the only scarcity in California today", said Mr. J. C. McCarthy of this city, upon his return from an extended visit to the "Sunshine State" of California this morning.

Mr. McCarthy has been visiting in the southland for the past six weeks and returned to Belleville highly in his praise of some of the conditions found in California.

Mr. McCarthy, who some years ago built the Belle Theatre, was naturally interested in the movie colony at Hollywood and made frequent visits to the studios the making of films a that world-famous movie town. Many of these visits were action being "shot" on the lot and related as to how swiftly and accurately scenes are filmed that various guides. "The extras are very hard hit at present", continued Mr. McCarthy as he went on to say that many of the well known actresses could be seen lined up at the casting gates for days at a time. The rate of pay for these extras is between $3 and $6 a day although a few of the older and more experienced ones collect as high as $10 a day for their services. Taken all in all Mr. McCarthy was of the opinion that these extras collected but one or two days per week.

"Living Cheap

"Living is very cheap in Los Angeles", said Mr. McCarthy as he related his experiences while out there at present. Lemons and oranges sell for one cent a dozen while the finest of fruit can be purchased for one cent a bunch. "Why for 30c a person could go to the open market and purchase enough vegetables to last for a family a week" said Mr. McCarthy. Rents are also very cheap as there was pointed out by Mr. McCarthy when he related as to how Mr. J. H. Blake, ex-Belleville resident now living in Los Angeles, owned a large apartment block and a fine residence. "The bungalow used to rent for $120 a month, while now Mr. Blake considers himself very fortunate to get $75 a month for the same house. Lack of work is the cause for the present conditions out there," said Mr. McCarthy, "and it is generally felt that the Californians feel that things are on the upward grade and look for better times following the presidential election, which takes in November. Very little building is being done in Los Angeles now just although Mr. McCarthy pointed out, that on the island of Catalina, the playground of the rich, there was very little if any sign of any hard times.

"Los Angeles is the worst hit city of any in America," said Mr. McCarthy, as he again told of the lowness in price of fruit. While on the subject of fruit Mr. McCarthy spoke of the Los Angeles Theatre that cost $1,500,000 and Grauman $1,500,000.

"There is not a single drop of rainfall in Los Angeles from April to December," said Mr. McCarthy as he told of the dry season there. All the time he was in California the temperature never went above 94 and was never below 65 degrees. "It is just a most ideal weather condition all the time."

Ross Somerville Wins U. S. Amateur Golf Championship Defeating Johnny Goodman

Thrilling Duel on Links Won By Canadian 2 and 1

ONCE BEHIND

Explosion Shot on 27th Green Was Deciding Factor

Five Farms Course, Baltimore Country Club, Sept. 19—The amateur golf championship of the United States passed into Canadian hands Saturday for the first time in history as C. R. (Sandy) Somerville, slender, 28 year old stockbroker of London, Ontario, outplayed 20-year-old Johnny Goodman of Omaha, Neb. to win the second medal for this classic title in six years.

Somerville conquered Goodman 2 and 1 in a championship match that was featured by spectacular flights of scoring punctuated with brilliant putting and packed with thrilling finishing moments to keep a gallery of 4000 fans roaring right down to the finish on the thirty-fifth green.

The score:

Goodman, in	355 454 42x
Somerville, in	444 354 432
	Somerville won 2 and 1.

Exciting Final

It was easily the most tense and exciting final since George von Elm turned back Bobby Jones by exactly the same margin in 1928 at Baltusrol, and Somerville won it just as easily all the way. His superior steadiness of nerve plus the edge in his ability to regulate his best shots down the length of the Maryland round over the rolling Maryland country, climbed the decisive.

The Ashland, Neb. boy was the first invader to win the American crown since Harold H. Hilton, British star, was the victor in 1911.

Somerville does not hold the Canadian amateur championship this year, although he has already rated the best amateur in the Dominion. He tilted the Canadian title championship in the fourth tournament in which he has competed, coming through after a week of remarkably consistent, brilliant play, including a record-smashing 68, for a new course record, in the 36-hole round against Bill Blaney of Boston.

Unquestionably, the two best golfers in the field came together in the title fight Saturday. After wading through all opposition easily in the top flight, the smooth husky hatched before all the week against Goodman, who whipped two young Walter Cup aces, Ed Dudley and Ed Throned the defending champion, Francis Quimet, in a semi-finals.

Close from Start

The match was so close from the start that neither player was ever more than one or two fortunate shots-off frequently and with dramatic suddenness. Somerville, using his brilliant wedge through all stages, he was able to recapture his control and shoot his own eight birdies to even par.

The Canadian after holding a remarkable fifty-foot putt on the eighteenth hole for a hard-won 40-out and later becoming two up in the twentieth apparently shot away his chances of victory by dropping his first twenty-first, twenty-second, fifth and twenty-third holes to Goodman. It looked very much as though Goodman was off on another streak as gave him a lead of two up at the eleventh hole after getting four birdies in the holes with miraculous shots.

The Indiana crowd, stricken by Goodman's youthful assurance, was rolling for a victory. Somerville, unruffled confidently down the twenty-eighth hole, but his putter "hot" and pushed to a twelve-foot to go two up and two to go on the thirty-fourth.

The Canadian star holeted his iron shot to the high thirty-fifth green, set in the deep woods, for the final crushing blow. Johnny's ball bumped the front page of the green and dropped back into the rough. He tried hard to sink his chip shot and prolong the match, the ball stopping less than two feet from the cup but Somerville then roiled his long putt dead to the hole and it was all over.

The victory of the Canadian was enhanced in glory by the brilliant 36 hole golf of Somerville in the mid-round sensation and also by the fact that naturally the crowd was for the home talent.

The afternoon's gallery, augmented from 3,000 to 4,000 grew impatiently of trouble as they tried to keep the lines from stampeding on around the green. The only time the crowd seemed to disturb either player, however, was on the 242-yard, where Somerville, after a fine recovery from a trap to the left corner of the green, took four shots to get down, and was smiling at his sudsidue.

A set illustration of the sterling play of both men, this marks the only seven on either card.

Great Variety

The extraordinary consistency of Somerville under pressure was demonstrated in the morning round, where Somerville was down a full up at the sixth hole. He rolled in a 25-putt for a birdie 3 on the seventh got down a 60 foot chip.

Sandy scored a birdie 4 to collect for a birdie 3 on the eighth to square and followed this up with a 15-foot putt for a birdie on the ninth. Goodman came back with a 10 footer for a birdie on the tenth to go one in 35, even par. Goodman's instrument failed him on the 10th green when he holed a 13-footer for a birdie 3 to halve.

Thereafter Somerville laid his man two strokes and they exchanged birdies on the twelfth where the Canadian was down a 60 foot chip.

Their morning rounds, 71 for the winner and 72 for the runner-up represented the best golf of the day. Rose had 32 putts and Goodman 31. Somerville had 36 putts for the afternoon round to the 17th.

ILL 5 MONTHS APPEAL JUDGE DIES IN SLEEP

Distinguished Career as Lawyer and as Jurist

CHURCH WORKER

Member of One of Old and Honored Families in Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 1.—Hon. Justice Frank Egerton Hodgins, K.C., LL.C., LL.D., K.C., of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, who served with distinction at the Bar of Ontario for thirty-three years and on the High Court Bench for twenty years, died in his sleep during the early hours of this morning at his home, "Clorynewood," 3 Dale Avenue, Rosedale.

Ill Five Months

For five months his Lordship had been ill and had undergone two major operations, but as late as Saturday last his physicians were of the opinion that, although he had been dangerously ill at times he showed signs of making steady progress. He suspected end was not due, doctors said last night, to any specific malady, but to illness at his advanced age of 72 years.

Mr. Justice Hodgins was a member of one of the old and honored families of Toronto. He was born March 27, 1854, the son of Dr. J. George Hodgins, a historian of educational, twice Deputy Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario. He was a brother of the late Mr. Justice Hodgins of the Bench at the Bar and on the Bench Mr. Justice Hodgins was a nephew of Sir Adam Wilson. He was educated at Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto College. After being called to the Bar in 1877 he entered upon the practice of his profession with well known leaders at the Bar of Ontario, and soon became personality, he quickly became a well known figure in the courts. He was created a King's Counsel in 1900.

Before his appointment to the Bench, 29 years ago, he was also law firm of Hodgins, Heighington and Bastedo. During his active career at the Bar Mr. Justice Hodgins was a member of many important cases. He was counsel for the Province at the Bar and was solicitor for the Toronto Board of Education, and was elected President of the Ontario Bar Association in 1908. Mr. Justice Hodgins was also the author of "The Life Insurance Contract in Ontario," a standard work for the six years served as legal agent for the Dominion Government.

Church Activities

An Anglican and Canadian denomination, his activity in church affairs had been almost as prominent as his professional and judicial career. He was one of the first wardens of St. Simon's Church and at the time of his death was a lay delegate to the Synod of Toronto. Some years ago he was Chairman of the Anglican Lay Readers Missionary Movement, and for a time was also Chairman of the Executive Committee for a Religious Census. He was also a devoted Hymnal for the Anglican Church; in his church, legal and judicial life Mr. Justice Hodgins formed many intimate friendships and these were not confined to Canada. Almost every year he visited Europe, for his health vacation, and there met leaders of the bar and judges.

Mr. Justice Hodgins was a lover of horses. He was a member of the Toronto Woodbine, conducted by the Ontario Jockey Club, of which for a number of years he was an ardent golfer, being a member of the Toronto Golf Club. For years he had been a member of the Toronto Club.

Mr. Justice Hodgins was married in 1880 to Miss Anne Mackiem. She died eleven years ago and later he married Miss Blanche Lockhart. He had four daughters. They are Mrs. Elaine De La Cour of Brazil, Mrs. Dorothy and Mrs. Lucille Addock in England and the wife of Dr. D. E. S. Wishart of Toronto. The funeral will take place Tuesday.

CANADA PLANS ONE LOAN IN UNITED STATES

Will Take Care of 50 Million Dollar Maturity

OTHERS DOMESTIC

Total Flotation Expected to Be Around 200 Million Mark

OTTAWA, Sept. 19. — Canadian Government loans aggregating at least $180,000,000 during the coming Winter are under preparation by the Department of Finance, the probabilities are that without any conversion financing the total will reach $200,000,000.

Present plans provide for the launching of the first loan in two years in the United States to refund $50,000,000 of Dominion obligations maturing in that market. It is proposed that they will cover refunding only with provision for payment in gold if they mature in dollars or have currency clauses attached.

The balance of the financing will be done in Canada through a domestic loan. The rate at which it is to be offered has not been determined, but present indications are that it will be 4 1-2 per cent. The decision depends upon consideration now being given to a moratorium pleas premised upon successful practice in the United Kingdom. If it is decided that the lowest rate to be offered on the new domestic loan will probably be 4 per cent.

On C.N.R. Account

Financing for 1932 on account of Canadian National Railways will total $60,000,000, it is stated. Present indications are that the system will pay operating expenses and fixed charges this year, to be applied upon interest to the public, which totals $50,000,000. Capital expenditures will approximate $10,000,000. A carry-over of unspent relief on account of unemployed is $16,000,000, which will be available in the 1932-33 program, is estimated at not less than $30,000,000 additional, which would bring the total of new domestic financing requirements to $60,000,000.

Fiscal returns for the first five months of the year show revenues and same ratio is maintained, a deficit of $4,000,000 on current account and ordinary expenditures for the year. Ordinary expenditures $90,000,000. Revenues for last year were $334,741,000 and for the first five months of 1932 they are off $4,000,000 from last years' level, suggesting the $40,000,000 deficit for the full year in spite of increased taxation and drastic retrenchment. Finance and revenue organization officials are sanguine that the later months of the year will make up through sales and customs taxes this deficit. Revenue is augmented by the addition loan which the Government is contemplating as probable.

RAILS BEING TAKEN UP NEAR DESERONTO

Fifty men started to take up the C.N.R. rails, from the ferry, west of the town of Deseronto at Lake Anne.

Not only are the rails being taken up, but a portion of the platform at the Deseronto station has been taken, also the old section number greet the passersby.

Some time ago the last passenger service through Deseronto was discontinued and now freight trains prevailed at that time, but as no avail.

The railway commissioners met at the town hall and after hearing arguments reserved their decision, which, however, was given out at a later date.

The railway from Deseronto west was built possibly twenty-two years ago, and connecting with Napanee was the former Canadian Northern line.

Many years ago the Rathbun Company had a large lumber yard from Deseronto to Tweed, and about the same time a spur line ran form Deseronto northward to the Harrington line of the Grand Trunk, North of Tweed.

It is understood that the old charter will now be taken up, and be taken up, from the ferry east to Napanee and at the present time Napanee is the local freight shed. wilbj

ARREST ONE

Argument Over Who Had Right to Speak is Cause

Toronto, Sept. 19 — Six Macedonians were injured and one was later wounded with a jack-knife following a free-for-all fight which broke up a political meeting in the Labor Temple at Queen and Sherbourne Streets here on Sunday afternoon.

A hurry call was sent in by the caretaker, James Sutherland, but when Sergeant Reginald Lundy and Patrol Sergeant Robert Bell, accompanied by other constables, arrived the meeting had dispersed.

Later while a group of Macedonians were walking along Queen Street an argument developed. Suddenly a Bearcat Street one of them whipped out a jack-knife and wounded Lazar Kolonoff, 33, of 35 Bright Street in the left shoulder.

Ivan Dmitroff, 33, of Sydenham Street, was pointed out to Constable Samuel Priestley as the man who had used the knife and he was arrested on a charge of wounding and taken to the East Dundas Street station.

Six Go to Hospital

In the meantime six other Macedonians were receiving medical attention at St. Michael's Hospital for various injuries inflicted with chairs, doorknobs and anything else to hand. The arrival of Kolonoff made the seventh casualty.

The following were given medical attention and were later able to go home:

Michael Dalkoff, 48, of 182 Sackville Street, cut over the right ear and left eye, requiring six stitches.

Peter Dimitroff, 40, of 438 Queen Street east, cuts on scalp requiring one stitch.

George Obrisk, 49, 9 Belvin Place, cuts on head and nose requiring two stitches.

George Zolunoli, 39, of 438 Queen Street east, cuts on the right side of the scalp requiring five stitches.

Alexander Dimitroff, 40, of 440 Queen Street east, cut on head requiring one stitch.

Lambro Sotoroff, 31, of 340 Dundas Street east, cuts on scalp and left side of head.

The meeting was called by the Macedonian Labor Party Association, a political league, but when it was found that it was not open to a number of members of the International Workers Order, a heated argument arose as to who had the right to speak and then things began to happen.

Chairs, doorknobs and everything handy that was used soon the meeting was over with the audience of about 60 or more making a hurried exit to the street. Only some broken chairs and some excited Macedonians on the floor greeted the police on their arrival from No. 2 station.

Two Boys Severely Mauled By Police Dog at Court

Ottawa, Sept. 19—Attacked by alsefi leg, stripping it to the bone, police dog in the garden of the Chief Justice here, Clifford Daley, aged 16, and Leonard McCloskey, aged 12, are in hospital. Both youngsters were severely bitten, the McCloskey boy more seriously. It required twenty-one stitches to close the wounds on the lower part of his body. On a hunt for apples, young McCloskey and his chum went to the garden Saturday evening. Daley climbed a tree and while shaking a branch, had his grip and tumbled into the garden below. The dog, roaming the convent grounds, rushed at the prostrate boy. He tore at the boy's rabbit.

Giles closed the meeting with prayer.

A treat of fruit from two or three of the members, with the hostess, was much appreciated and thanks given to them and to the hostess for opening her home.

The collection was $1.30.

OUTLINES THE PARTY POLICY

Roosevelt in Favor of National Transportation Policy

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 19—Before a crowd that packed into every available seat of the historic Mormon house of worship, the Salt Lake Tabernacle, Roosevelt, Democratic presidential candidate, said Saturday night the Government should cooperate with the railways to work out a national transportation policy.

The crowd cheered frequently as Roosevelt outlined a programme which he said, comprised the transportation policy of the Democratic party.

Roosevelt put the policy briefly in closing:

"Avoid financial excesses; adjust plant to traffic; co-ordinate all carrier service; protect the worker; give the public rates as low as reasonably, swiftly and well."

It is part of the difficulties he attributed to poorly regulated motor competition, as well as to what he termed unreasonable competition among the railways themselves.

Of the sciences, physical science contains the largest number of certain and accepted laws.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Day after day Mary Faith nursed Kim, hovering over him with solicitous or the little clinical thermometer that told the story of the fever that was torturing him. One night when his temperature was very high, he begged to call for Pete. He was sitting beside him and she laid her hand on his arm and asked him what he wanted.

"I want Mary Faith," he mutter-ed in the thick voice of delirium.

"Oh, my dear, I'm right here. I am the person he thinks of and wants," she told herself as she sat there trembling, he long hour of the night. He might flirt with a pretty girl, might go out to places like the Golden Pheasant Tavern for afternoon's pleasure, might wander up to the Maidens' flat for a Dutch supper and a highball. But all those things were simply cheap amusements away from her, she knew. She and Kim had built this little home of theirs were the important things in their lives. It was the reality certain of it.

On the ninth day, the fever broke and Kim was "out of the woods." A week later he was able to "get up," sit up, and Mary Faith brought her chair, face tender and hung over him, her face tender and lovely with the joy of nursing near him and taking care of him.

The baby, who adored Kim, spent half the day with him, chattering away about all his small unsteady legs, or rolling his red crochet ball up and down the counterpane of Kim's bed.

"It's so wonderful—you're getting well and the three of us are here together, safe and happy," Mary Faith said one bright snowy morning as she put Kim's room to order. She leaned over him and laid her rosy cheek against the white one for a second. But in that second she felt him draw away from her.

"If you're thinking leaving around in here, I'd like to be down and be quiet," he said jerkily. "Take the baby with you when you go."

He could not have hurt her more —or surprised her more—if he had struck her, she has seemed so wholly hers during the past week or two. But she knew now that this was only because he had been weak and passive in his illness.

Mary Faith had been sleeping on the couch in the sitting room ever since New Year's night, and when Kim was well enough to go back to work she made no change in that arrangement. February warmed into March, and at the end of March things were just as they had been in the autumn before Kim's illness. He stayed out late four or three times a week, making no excuse for his absences, but he had very little to say to Mary Faith about anything. When he did talk to her, it was of ordinary things.

"Has my suit come back from the cleaner, Mary Faith?"

"It's in your closet, Kim."

"If you'll add up the grocery bill, I'll give you the money for it."

"Thanks, Kim."

No kiss now when he left for the office. No more pleasant evenings before the sitting room fire. No gay little jaunts to the neighborhood moving pictures theatre.

CHAPTER XXXIX

"What can be wrong?" Mary Faith asked herself a hundred times a day. "What have I done, or left undone?"

And she knew that it was nothing she had done or had not done that was responsible for Kim's behavior. She knew that he was bored and out of love with her once more, just as he had been before. "Well, he had always come back to her, hadn't he?

"What's the matter with him? He acts as if this place was a boarding house," his mother remarked frequently. "I declare, he runs around almost as much now as he did before he was married."

Mary Faith went until the fifteenth of March.

Mary Faith was always to remember that day because of the three things that happened on it.

The baby made a whole sentence that day, "I see birdie." Mrs. Parrell announced that she was going to be married to Dr. Thatcher the next morning. And Kim broke his news that he intended to leave his wife.

The day started out beautifully, with sunshine and blue sky and everything gaily in the flat just as usual.

A little after ten Mrs. Parrell started on her weekly search for bargains, she did this every Friday and returned at nightfall, loaded with toys for the baby, dish-towels that left lint all over the dishes, mayonnaise mixers that refused to work.

"Say 'bye-bye' to Nana," she said, kissing little Kim good-bye. She never spoke of herself as "Grandmother."

"Bye," said the baby, and went on playing with his string of spools.

Now, isn't it wonderful—the way he says that, Mary Faith Kimberley walked and talked long before he was two years old, and this baby is as smart as well" She never said or gave Mary Faith any credit for producing a beautiful and precocious child.

Mary Faith, so he can wave good-bye to his Nana," she said, opening the front door.

But the baby had no eyes for her departing back. He was busy with the held him up to the window. He went into raptures over two sparrows on the sidewalk, and it was then that he spoke the sentence that Mary Faith interpreted as "I see birdie."

She tried to make him say it again, but he struggled to get out of her arms and began to play with the spools. But Mary Faith was positive, nevertheless, that he had said those three little words. Late that afternoon, when the flat was in order and dinner was under way, she sat down to make an entry to that effect in his baby-record book. Then she began to write: "This morning at breakfast Kim put words together to make a sentence——" She had reached that point when she heard the sound of Kim's car, and she flung down her pen and started to get his dinner.

Long afterward she was to open the book and find the unfinished entry, trailing a long streak of ink after it, like a tiny wood; and she never did write it. She never could bring herself to make a clean house dress of horror-like memories of that March afternoon "set off" her blue eyes. The hope that Mary Faith had always had in March flared up once again as Kim stepped in. Her face began to change the moment she heard his key in the door. Kim's face flushed a dark angry red.

"I suppose you're telling me that I'm not ready enough," Kim said sullenly.

Mary Faith looked at him steadily.

"I think you'd understand fair play better than you do. If you'd been alloyed to lead a regular boy's life when you were little, she said coolly. "You've told me, yourself, how you were tied to your mother's apron-strings, how you had to lie to her to get with the other little boys. ——Yes, I do think you'd be more or a man if you'd had a father to bring you up."

And all at once she was crying wildly, as she could hardly hear the angry things he was saying to her.

"Kim, let's not quarrel like this," she sobbed. "We can talk this over and find out or two when we've both calmed down a little——"

"I've said everything I want to say," he cut in, "and I've made up my mind as to what I'm going to do. I'm clearing out, and the only way you'll get any money out of me is to sue for a divorce and ask the court to give you alimony. I've tried to be fair, and you've refused to let me be fair. From now on you can fight for what you want, understand?" And shaking with rage, he flung himself out of the flat.

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 34. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Above Tarzan, Werper had stood, his murderous knife poised for the fatal thrust; but fear stayed his hand. What if the first blow should fail to strike his victim's heart? Awakened, the giant ape-man could literally tear him to pieces. Werper shuddered. Again, closer, came the soft padded footsteps in the reeds. Werper abandoned his design. The jewels were his. Before him lay the open plain and escape. Behind was death at Tarzan's hands or the jaws of the beast creeping ever nearer!

CHAPTER XI.

Claire Maidon! ..... The name leaped at her out of all the other words that Jack had said. She heard nothing else. She needed nothing else but that name to tell her instantly why Kim was sitting violently, "I haven't said that I'm in love with her."

But a dull red flush crept under his bluff tan, and the three men read his head defiantly, like a wayward boy who has been found out in some stupid deception.

"It just happens that I do think a lot of Claire, though," he added awkwardly, as if he were half-ashamed of what he was saying. "I wasn't going to tell you this—but you've asked for it, so here goes. Claire and I are going to be married as soon as her divorce is through."

His voice was not true. Kim! Mary Faith cried. "You were in love with her when you asked me to marry you two years ago, and you knew you were in love with her. Two years ago when you were so infatuated with Gloria——and this last year, when you had always cared for her with that girl in the drug-store in the background. Oh, Kim, you've got over this one, Kim. You're like that. I don't say one woman is just the same as another to you, but almost. If there's anybody you are faithful to, you're faithful to me—in a way. You always do come back to me, Kim, don't you?"

He wouldn't answer her. He stood looking at her for a minute or two longer, swinging his head from side to side.

"But even if you are in love with Claire," he went on, "you can't think entirely of yourself now. You have a son and you've got to stick to him. For a few years he'll be growing up, and I won't be able to do the things for him that a boy's father ought to do. I won't be able to tell him how to take a punch in the jaw in the schoolyard, or take him fishing, or explain baseball scores to him. I can't do any of the things that your father should have done for you, if he'd, wanted to make a man of you."

Kim's face flushed a dark angry red.

"I suppose you're telling me that I'm not manly enough," Kim said sullenly.

Mary Faith looked at him steadily.

"I think you'd understand fair play better than you do. If you'd been alloyed to lead a regular boy's life when you were little," she said coolly. "You've told me, yourself, how you were tied to your mother's apron-strings, how you had to lie to her to get with the other little boys. ——Yes, I do think you'd be more or a man if you'd had a father to bring you up."

BUSTER KEATON AND "SCHNOZZLE" IN "SPEAK EASILY"

Another Fun Riot For Popular Pair of Fun Makers

Buster Keaton and Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante combine their comicalities as the most hilarious of all screen comedy teams in "Speak Easily," which opens Thursday at the Belle Theatre for two days.

The fun riot they started in "The Passionate Plumber" is carried on into this new laugh romance with added comedy embellishments. Keaton has been acclaimed as the frozen-faced comedy king and Durante has recently come to the favor as the madcap purveyor of long-nosed "hot-cha" antics. Together they are said to provide the funniest screen situations that have ever been filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

"Speak Easily," adapted from Clarence Budington Kelland's story, "Footlights." The theme concerns the misfortunes of his innocent-minded college professor, played by Keaton, who inherits nearly a million dollars and decides to go out and "see life", and makes the acquaintance of Durante, the piano player of a musical show stranded in a small town, and "adopts" the entire troupe for a Broadway run. The many complications that ensue in their theatrical career provide plenty of comedy.

Ruth Selwyn, recently featured in "Polly of the Circus" and "Love Morals for Old," has the feminine lead in "Speak Easily" as Keaton's romantic heart interest. Thelma Todd, whose co-starring comedy appearances with Keaton have achieved outstanding popularity, is cast as a vamping actress, who makes things exciting for Keaton and Durante. The wise-cracking Hedda Hopper, last seen with Greta Garbo, in "As You Desire Me," plays a nagging mother, and other important parts are filled by William Pawley, Hank Mann, Edward Brophy, Edward Sedgwick, veteran comedy director, is at the megaphone and also demonstrates his versatility by enacting the part of an amazing "bare footed" female stowaway. Sedgwick has worked with Keaton on many of the outstanding successes including "Spite Marriage," "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" and "The Passionate Plumber."

70,000 WITNESSES SCORES

Murder at a football game! While 70,000 spectators look on, a man dies on the field, and no one sees who killed him! That is the dramatic situation which serves as the basis for "70,000 Witnesses," the mystery melodrama which comes to the Belle today to especially audiences to all performances.

The film is unusual, and it is fascinating. Built around the single dramatic basis to a breath-taking climax, it doesn't "stand high" among both foot-ball pictures and mystery thrillers. The game during which results the death of the star half-back of the State team, is thrilling. But, of course, the moment the boy staggers and drops, as he is supposed to, from a knockdown for State, the film assumes the note of utter detachment with which it records the solution of a particularly baffling mystery.

Chalk up another winner for Director Ross, who have been supplying the theatre-going public with especially good, new season product of late. Ross' latest achievement, "The Age of Innocence," starring Barbara Stanwyck and George Brent, is now playing to the delight of offering on the same program. Following her great hit in "Night Nurse," she is back again in the type of alluring role that has won for her so many admirers. She is back again as a young, vibrant, entrancingly charmed girl who soon close their engagements at the Belle tonight.

Sir Edward German, the famous English composer, is now in a nursing home for serious eye trouble.

More Scotia's apple crop for 1932 is unofficially estimated at 1,000,000 barrels.

Miss McNabb on Staff Of Public Library Pro Tem

Decided Increase in Non-Fiction Reading Report Shows

CIRCULATION UP

Corby Public Library Board met Friday evening and a report of the summer's work was submitted by the librarian, Miss Margaret White. At this meeting Miss Jewel McNab was appointed librarian pro tem and also fills the latter is at Library School.

Mr. Frank Cushing gave in detail an account of the Trust Company's to the Corby Estate and the ruling of the judge in regard to the account. Mr. H. J. Clarke moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cushing for his concise explanation.

The librarian's report follows:

September 16th, 1932.

Corby Public Library Board,

Belleville, Ont.

Gentlemen:

The summer of 1932 has been an exceptionally busy one at the library. During the three months we have circulated almost 30,000 books. This is an increase of 3,000 over the last figure for the same months, and despite the fact that the library was closed for ten days in July this year. The public, people without positions and those with reduced incomes are taking advantage of their library privileges as they have never done before. Also their reading is not confined to the very light-fiction type. The records for the summer show a decided increase in non-fiction reading—and we are getting so many requests for outstanding non-fiction volumes, which show that library patrons are reading books of more solid stuff than they have in the past.

In June, there was an increase of 100 per cent in book circulation in the Boys' and Girls' Room. Our school libraries have proved receptive to this idea, and we hope that the teachers will co-operate with us in maintaining this interest.

Two hundred and fourteen new names have been added to our register and 71 names have been withdrawn, number of which were cancellations for out-of-town expenditure.

During the summer, 261 volumes were discarded from the adult shelves and 134 from the juvenile section. 119 new books were added to the library and 147 volumes rebound.

From July 4th to 14th, the changes were made in the ground floor of the library. The new arrangement has proved most satisfactory both to borrowers of the library and to the staff. The books are within now in a much more systematic way and the congestion is greatly lessened on busy nights. The Board has been commended many times on having accomplished such a remarkable change in the arrangement of the Library. Also, the Library is now open continuously from 10 o'clock until 6 for circulation of books, whereas formerly, it was closed from 1 to 2 o'clock. This added service is much appreciated by library patrons.

Miss Ethel Adams leaves this month to go to the Ontario Library School. We were very fortunate in having the services of Miss Adams during the past year, as she has done most excellent work in the Library. Much as we regret losing her at the present time, we realize that she will have added greatly to her knowledge of librarianship and will be an even more able assistant on her return next Spring.

I remain, Sirs,
Yours most faithfully,
Margaret E. White,
Librarian.

WINDOWS

By Marion Heath

The boy looked out of his window. Only a narrow alley-way confronted his window. Only a narrow alley-way separated the two windows.

The girl's look corresponded to his.

A tired—beaten—discouraged look, worst of all, I am lonely. Lonely!

The boy was thinking savagely: "I'm just a silly sentimental fool to prevent me from speaking to her. If I did, she would be sure to think I'm a low down guy, trying to pick her up." And if she should think that, she would be right, unless I think she wasn't a nice girl, decent, clean, the girl I am looking for. Anyone could see that by looking at her. Gee, it would be great if I could talk to her across. Let's go for a walk, do you want to? or "Feel like going to the movies tonight?"

But he didn't call across, and after a little while, the girl pulled down the shade and turned away from her window. The boy wasn't sleepy, but he didn't feel like reading, so he went to bed and sat up thinking of the girl—wistful face, and just before he dropped off to sleep, he made his mind up he would call across to her the following evening.

But he didn't.

And the night after that, and several nights following, he watched for her, but she didn't come to her window.

"She's probably moved away," the boy thought dismally, and in her joy for good, imagine trying to find her in New York City. Why, I don't even know her name!"

He was angry at himself for having been so stupid, and his anger drove him to action. Sauntering casually into the female lobby of the apartment house where she lived, he engaged a good-natured colored elevator boy in conversation. He was clever enough to learn from the boy what her name was, without disclosing that he did not know it.

"Yes, Miss Lamberton, sah. She's very nice lady, too. She been sick for quite a few days, yes, sah."

The boy went away, returning in less than half an hour, this time with a bunch of cheap, but bright-colored flowers, and a book. He had chosen a humorous story—one that would make her laugh.

"I'd like to see Miss Lambert—a moment," he announced boldly to the elevator man.

"Just say her cousin from the country."

"Yes, sah."

He decided while the attendant was engaged in making the phone call to her room, thought she wouldn't see him? Suppose she didn't have any country cousin? Then, almost excitedly, he did have a country cousin; one, at least.

His heart gave a leap when the elevator man turned to him with a negative nod, and started toward the elevator. He followed, almost on the air of excitement.

The elevator door swung open. "Miss Lamberton, sah," and the colored man call after him.

The door closed behind her two before he could summon enough courage to knock on the door marked 10.

After the knock, there was an interval, then a shrill "Come in," about decided to knock again when the door opened, revealing a tall, slim girl, with pale, fair hair, standing facing him, looking at him questioningly. She was pale and there were dark circles under her eyes.

"Miss Lamberton, I'm really just a lavendar pair of house pajamas, but I'm afraid my face was astonishing painfully, shifting from one foot to the other. Then, he raised his eyes and, for the first time, saw what she really looked like. He saw, also, a dark dawning recognition in her soft, dark blue eyes.

"Bob!" it can't be—Bob Jeffers, is it really you?" There was a ring of relief, of joy in her voice.

Then into his mind, which has been a groping blindly for a half forgotten image, there came clear-cut memory—of the little girl who had walked to school with him, way back in those long ago Clintonville days, a little girl with dark, curly eyes, and two funny little pigtails, who had once come back to him.

"Margaret Lamberton!" he cried.

She motioned him to follow her into the room. Still dazed at the suddenness of this meeting, he blindly obeyed her invitation to sit down.

"Why in the world did you say you were my cousin from the country?" she demanded.

He reddened, and stared about for a reply.

"The fact is," she went on, "I haven't a single cousin, country or otherwise. But I was curious. That's why I had you come up. How is Clintonville?"

"I really don't know. I've been here in New York for almost five years."

"So have I."

She regarded him for a long moment with a steady look, and a puzzled frown.

"Now, I know, who you are," she said, at length. "You're the boy in the window across the way. I didn't recognize you before. I suppose it was too dark. But you must have recognized me?"

She waited for his reply, studying his face.

"No, I didn't," he confessed lamely. "I thought you were some one I'd known a long time ago."

"Well, I'm glad you're lonely, too," she laughed. "Then, with a little sigh, she remarked: "Isn't New York a lonely place?"

"Not now," Bob answered.

PREMIER'S BOYHOOD FRIENDS TO ATTEND

Woodview, Buckinghamshire, Sept. 18 (CP-Cable)—Many old fatherfolk, friends of Ramsay MacDonald in his boyhood days at Lossiemouth, Scotland, will be present at the great attending tomorrow's wedding of Joan, second daughter of the British Premier, to Dr. Alastair Mackintosh.

Joan has spent the past three weeks at the picturesque inn which is the property of Mrs. Ethel Peters, summer residence of Prime Minister, in order to comply with the residential qualifications necessary for the ceremony.

The ceremony will take place in the small Congregational chapel, which will make the seating of the guests a difficult problem. Among them are also a few members of former student friends of the bride and bridegroom.

Isabel MacDonald will preside over the wedding reception. The service will be conducted by Rev. Hector Maclean from the Isle of Skye.

GERMANY DID NOT FORCE THE DISCUSSION

German Spokesman Takes Issue With English Note

FRANCE CHALLENGED

German Gov't Should Resist Proposal of France

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP)—A government spokesman took issue today with the "unfriendly form" of yesterday's British note saying Germany's procedure in demanding arms equality "was without saying," he said, "that we cannot accept the reasoning of the British memorandum according to which Germany of her own accord and without compulsion, for reason raised a political issue of vast implications."

The unfriendly form which clothes the charge that we proceeded in a manner technically wrong and calculated to disturb the harmony between nations does not establish the truthfulness of this charge.

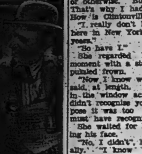
"This is an old question which has long been recognized by the people of all foreign countries as urgent. The English note is in striking contrast to English political opinion. It was not Germany which, out of a clear sky, forced discussion of this question, but the negative character of the resolutions of the last session of the Disarmament Conference.

"Hence a positive result seems possible along the lines followed hitherto. Germany pointed the way to this result in Geneva.

He asserted that no normal man could forward to be the juridical conference, as construed in the British memorandum, between the procedure of treaty provisions and the conditions for achieving that purpose.

As for the reported suggestion by Premier Herriot of France that an international investigation be conducted of Germany's "clandestine armaments" the spokesman said:

"Any German government would and should refuse with indignation to drag it it permitted foreign powers to exercise such control in Germany.



Certain secret documents regarding German armaments in the hands of French Senate Foreign Affairs Committee are the work of the former government to be the same ones used during the administration of the late Gustav Stresemann, the spokesman said.

FIRE OPENING GUN TUESDAY

Kiwanis Karnival Has Made Real Preparation For Week

The Kiwanis Club needs the money this year more than ever before. Their programme of welfare and charity work has been a heavy one and their fund for this work is growing dangerously near the zero mark, and while the Kiwanis Club always "gives you more than your money's worth" they also appeal to the public on the grounds of public welfare to rally to the carnival in order to maintain their work.

Just one more day and the 1932 Kiwanis Karnival will be on in this city. This Karnival has won its way into the hearts of the people to such an extent that it is an annual event of first importance and should forward to as the final method of relaxation and entertainment of the season. On former occasions the first night of the carnival was a night looked forward upon as a preliminary opening to get ready for the week, but this year it is different. The Monday night opening has been eliminated and the show goes on in full force on Tuesday night. The Skyh Shore, of course, ranks high in the features of Show stage programmes but along with this will be an unusually high class array of vaudeville talent direct from the big circuits, and other novelty features that go to make a show worth while several times the price of admission.

Business Dress for Business

ARTICLE NO. 28

Neat and appropriate dress for all members of staff means more to business today than in the past.

The day has gone by when the salesman need not pay attention to his personal dress.

A man's business clothes should be neat, reasonably well pressed, shirt and tie blending—not clashing, tie pin neat, well-drawn of chore hair trimmed.

Parcel boys neat even if it means paying them more. A neatly dressed boy is a better assistant to you, more pleasing to our customers. Make sure they are polite as well. A boy's manners hurts your business.

The lady members of the staff. Here I tread on dangerous ground but many a good saleswoman depreciates her value to the business by her dress, her hair and her general appearance. Frequently it is the young woman with most ability that makes the mistake of overlooking the most vital factor in her job of selling goods. It is not a necessary policy in a retail store to put your staff in a uniform nor to say that all should wear black, but dresses for afternoon or evening wear are not suited for store or office. Clothing for business hours should be purchased for that purpose with an eye to its suitability and utility—not a silk or dress purchased to grab social eye salon and then relegated to speak against you in your work-a-day contacts.

Don't be too good looking. That is don't dress to have men say "She's stunning" or to have the girls say "She's a good looking fellow". There is many a national advertiser who uses pretty pictures that cost him a heap of money to create his art work and in lessened results—because his picture talks so loudly his real message makes attention. Don't be behind the counter—if you attract attention to yourself you take it away from the goods you are selling.

Have as simple rules which will enable you to be healthy and attractive.

Keep regular hours. The average adult needs eight hours sleep. Eat lightly at noons. Drink plenty of water, at least three glasses a day. Pause if possible during the afternoon's work to recover your balance. One store urges each salesman to wash his face at 3 o'clock, brush his hair, clean his shoes, stand near an open window for three minutes, and then come back on the floor and defy any customer to upset you.

Take as much outdoor exercise as possible.

Stand erect, hold up your chin, and you will give your customers confidence in you and your store.

Avoid tight clothing. Wear comfortable shoes that permit you to stand firmly and give your toes plenty of room to spread and rest.

Rubber heels are easy on the feet.

Take care of your hands. If they perspire, wash them frequently with a solution of alum water to protect delicate merchandise.

Aim to create a favorable impression by your obvious refinement of manner. Avoid annoying and distracting habits.

Bank Clerk Stated He Knew Trust Funds Were Short

Winnipeg, Sept. 20—(By The Canadian Press)—Trust moneys in the custody of the investment firm of Machray and Machray were lumped together with private funds of the partnership in one bank account, according to evidence now being given by the firm as an accountant, since 1925.

Kerr, in evidence yesterday at hearing of a petition in bankruptcy against the firm brought by the University of Manitoba following the revelation of shortages in university endowment funds and the laying of a charge of theft of $801,175 against John A. Machray, head of the firm.

Machray, who was owner and chairman of the Board of Governors of the university as well as Chancellor of the Church of England in Rupert's Land is to appear in police court Thursday on the university theft charge and faces another charge of stealing $80,000 from a former law partner. Meanwhile the affairs of the Church of England are continuing an examination of their affairs and attempting to devise ways of raising money to carry on the work of the church. A preliminary auditor's report places the loss on church funds handled by Machray at $360,000.

Despite warnings by the judge that he was making dangerous admissions Kerr said he knew a mortgage handled in the trust funds for some time. He said nothing about it to Dr. Sharpe because he thought the information should have come from Machray.

Mr. Sharpe's counsel is opposing the application to have his client in bankruptcy and found support in Kerr's statement that all university moneys were handled by Machray's instructions.

The hearing is continuing this afternoon.

According to H. J., he hasn't had any real since he received the cheque. Salesmen have declared an open season on the Reilly's and they are being offered "absolutely unbelievable bargains" in new automobiles, and such things.

But——and this is quoting H. J. Reilly entirely—some man last night won whatever prizes may be offered for the best line appeared, declaring he had lost all his money at the track and thought Reilly should give him a "break", particularly since the loser had four children to support.

It didn't work, so the man later returned after promising to bring Reilly the children, so he could see them. Then the borrower did come back, he had not four, but FIVE children with him.

P.S.—He didn't get a share of the $2,000.

President of the New United Methodism May Go to House of Lords

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 20 — (Canadian Press Cable)—Albert Hall, scene of many historic gatherings, today saw the reunion, of three great branches of methodism—Wesleyan Methodists, Primitive Methodists and United Methodists—separated for more than 90 years.

Approximately 10,000 representatives from many countries crowded the formal reuniting of the followers of John Wesley, the consummation of plans which have been in the course of preparation for nearly 20 years. And the day when the pioneer work was mainly responsible for today's ceremony was the proudest man at the celebrations was Sir Robert Perks, vigorous despite the weight of 83 years. In 1913 he submitted a resolution calling for a preliminary meeting at the Wesleyan Conference held that year. From that time forward plans for the reunion have progressed steadily.

Ambassadors Attend.

High Commissioners of the Dominions and Ambassadors of the various countries where Methodism is active attended the Church of England was represented by Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London, and Rt. Rev. H. Ernest Woods, Bishop of Croydon.

The United Church of Canada was represented by a delegation of seven, James Endicott, D.D., Foreign Mission Secretary and Ex-Moderator of the General Council of the Church.

Previous to the meeting in Albert Hall a devotional service was held in the morning in Wesley's Chapel, City Road, the historic home of Methodism.

Dr. Scott Lidgett, who has worked infatigably for years on behalf of the reunion, presided at a whole, will be the first President of the united body. A report which lacks confirmation has it that the King may signalize the great act of reunion by Rev. J. Scott Lidgett to the House of Lords.

Divine Guidance.

The Duke of York read a message from the King which said, in part:

"I congratulate the United Churches on the attainment of this happy result. They may well see it in a token of divine guidance and blessing. I welcome it as marking a further step in the unity of christian peoples, a cause which is always near my heart."

From another portion of the King's letter, he read:

"Methodist people always have been marked by their zeal for the high standard of living in religion and for the spread of the Gospel of Christ and for moral, social and spiritual welfare of their fellow men. I trust and pray that the union in which you are about to enter may quicken and strengthen that zeal and enable them with increased efficiency and devotion to fulfil their service to His cause and kingdom to the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

The Duke then links naturally and informally with world methodism in England in a message to methodism.

London, Sept. 20 —(AP) —The United Methodist Church, largest Protestant organization in the world was created this afternoon in Albert Hall by a ceremony which included 10,000 representatives from many nations to witness the union of three branches of the church.

The Duke of York, representing the King, welcomed the delegates.

"This union of Methodist Churches marks the opening of a new era in the life of one of the greatest evangelical forces in the modern world," he said. "Indeed, I think Wesley's great movement which had made more spiritual difference to the English people than any other single influence, has methodism.

"Today's ceremony is historic. The Empire will unite with you in the prayers and good wishes of the King, who has methodism's message to strength in the service of Christ until the victory over evil is won."

Problem of Defaulting Nations Is Challenge to Whole League

Eamon De Valera Will Preside at The Meeting

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—By an odd irony President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State is to preside over the Council of the League of Nations, which will be called upon to face to face with the problem of defaulting nations. It is a problem challenging, in the opinion of the League itself.

Debts to Nations totalling £83,000,000 were issued under the auspices of the League for the financial reconstruction. Of this total $60,000,000 was issued by Great Britain. Excepting the Free City of Danzig and the State of Estonia all the League's creditors are in default.

As chairman of the London Committee formed to protect bondholders, Sir Austen Chamberlain has addressed memorials to both the governments of the United Kingdom and the League Council calling for action. The government of the United Kingdom is urged to move that the Council of the League of Nations take into immediate consideration the "very grave situation, which has arisen in respect of the bonds issued for its auspices and subscribed on faith in its approval."

The memorial to the League Council recalls the investing public has been assured in the most implicit terms, that the loans for which it had been provided by the delegates of the present members of the League "are subject to protect the security under the Financial Scheme of the League.

"This is apparently in flagrant disregard of the elementary principles of common honesty and fair dealing" said the Times, editorially commenting on the situation. "It cannot fail to exercise the most injurious effect upon the relations between creditors and debtors all over the world and must gravely diminish seriously the process of economic reconstruction."

STEP BY STEP ARMAMENT CUT IS WAY OF U.S.

Hoover Says Germany's Recent Mose is Inopportune

U. S. PLAN CLEAR

States Anxious Germany Participate in Arms Conference

Washington, Sept. 20—(AP) — President Hoover today issued a statement declaring that the United States was divorced from what he termed "the German arms question," but said this country was "anxious that Germany shall continue to participate in the Arms Conference."

The President referred to press dispatches from abroad, and it was assumed by his aides he referred to reports that Senator Reed of Pennsylvania and Ambassador Edge of France conferred recently over the people of the United States believed Germany's recent notes for armament equality was inopportune.

The President's statement follows:

Reduction of All Arms.

"With reference to press dispatches from Europe on the German arms question, the position of this government is clear. The sole question in which this country is interested is the reduction and limitations of the whole world, step by step.

"We are not a party to the Versailles Treaty and its limitation on German arms. That is solely a European question. The United States has already declared that it feels no part in that discussion.

"We are anxious that Germany shall continue to participate in the Arms Conference which has now been in session for three years, the entire world and shall lend her aid in this great purpose."

Broke Record Held by Kaye Don of Britain

TWO RUNS

No Further Attempt Will be Made to Set it Higher

Algonac, Mich., Sept. 20 — Gar Wood, speedboat pilot, drove his Miss America X over a measured mile in the St. Clair River here today at a speed of 124.91 miles per hour to recapture from Kaye Don, British pilot, the world's hydroplane speed record.

Don, who failed a fortnight ago in an attempt to take the Harmsworth trophy from Wood and Miss America X, established the record at 119.75 on Loch Lomond, Scotland, July 18th last.

Wood went after the record this morning with little preliminary turning. He did not even stop before zooming on the course. Officials he said, felt the course was ready and despite a drizzle of rain, brought his big 4-cylinder brown-hulled Miss America X out to row unpressed on the first official trial against the record.

Swinging around the shot the craft downstream, even faster, the official timers announced that the average speed was 124.91 miles per hour, the world's record at 124.91 miles an hour, exactly 5.16 miles and hour faster than the old mark.

The first run, upstream, had been clocked at a fraction over 124 miles an hour. Downstream, the big craft went over the course at 125.43 miles an hour.

Could do Better

Wood started to make another trial and drove his America X upstream a second time at 122.17 miles an hour. He gave up the attempt at the end of the third mile, however, and brought his boat back slowly to return it to his boathouse. He said he was satisfied with the record and would make no further attempt to boost it at present. He indicated, however, his belief that under more favorable conditions the craft could do much better.

In an unofficial trial yesterday it was clocked at 126.32 miles an hour.

Net in Straight Line

Timers and race officials said afterwards the Miss America X showed no signs of distress record despite the fact that she did not have to turn at the end of the course. Wood, they said, had propped the throttle open and allowed the boat in the river that he would run close to them, in order that motion pictures might be taken. He found however, that the boat on which they were filming was outside the measured nautical mile course.

Wood's boat, which has the giant six hour he wheeled the giant engine in the starboard and ran close enough for pictures, then ported the wheel and dashed for the finish line, 7½ miles and 1414 miles an hour for the first dash.

GEORGE NELLER FOUND GUILTY

Sentence of The Court is Postponed Until Thursday

"The accused was undoubtedly trying to supplement his loss of earnings in this manner, was clearly brought out when the case proceeded and I see no other conclusion than to find the accused guilty," said Magistrate Mikel at conclusion of the evidence when George Neller of Point Anne appeared on a charge of keeping liquor for sale, Thursday.

Following this statement, however, Mr. Chas. A. Payne, K.C., counsel for the defence, asked His Worship to postpone the judgment of the court until next Thursday so that the defence might have a written copy of the judgment in case of an appeal in the matter. This request was granted by His Worship.

The case against Neller, heard in Tuesday's police court, was enlarged on that day when the evidence of the majority of the evidence in the case was heard. The accused man was arrested on Saturday last the following information handed out by Clifford MacDonald of Trenton. MacDonald previously testified that he had purchased a drink of wine and a bottle of beer from Neller following which he drove his car into a ditch on a hill at Point Anne, later being arrested.

Witnesses at the end of the trial, Tuesday morning, Provincial Constable Clifford Ross was called to the stand and upon cross-examination by Mr. Payne, testified that MacDonald had three quarts of beer in his car at the time of his arrest. Ross said that he had found on his own behalf and it was pointed out to him by Neller but $1785.65 worth of liquor since last November 23, 1931. This "only averages out to but 58c a day," said the accused counsel. Neller told the court that he had formerly had more liquor lately because he had a bigger trade.

Upon the request of Crown Attorney Bruce Bonter, Neller's record was found in the court room and Magistrate Mikel read the accused's name being Joseph Troykowski. Joe told the court that he had a record in the U.S.A. for one or two or three weeks ago. He said that he had been in the liquor business and wine on their respective permits and had drifted themselves. It was pointed out by the Crown, that Neller's wages had been cut to about one-third during the past year.

"I can't understand why a man buys more liquor than usual after he has been laid off work for only one half," said His Worship.

Magistrate Mikel said the case had decreased, is that any reason that his appetite for liquor should diminish?" asked His Worship.

"Well, it looks pretty funny when a man's income is decreased because his earnings and he can still deal in liquor," he added Crown Attorney Donnan.

After adjourning the previous evidence heard last Wednesday, when it was pointed out that Neller had been employed by the city and that his earnings had been cut to as low as $15 per week, His Worship said he was a little inclined to accept the defence counsel's request in delaying the final arguments of both Crown Attorney Donnan and Chas. A. Payne, K.C. stated that his verbal judgment in the case.

BARTER CASE STIRS IRONY

British Liberal Press Comments Upon Bennett

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(Canadian Press Cable)—News of the agreement whereby wire products of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd., are exchanged for Russian Oil products has caused comment in the Liberal press.

"We congratulate the Premier of Canada on the business deal whereby Canada exchanges Aluminum for Russian Oil," observes the Daily News, "nearly wrecked the Ottawa Conference because our representatives would not agree to destroy the Bills of Exchange to help Soviet Russia, yet simultaneously the Aluminum Company of Canada was granted by this agreement, Mr. Bennett (Premier) N. S. Bennett of Canada) forgive us if we have satisfaction in the fact that leading of Aluminum and Canada will give work to 2,000 Canadian who want it. We are glad to see even Mr. Bennett can put aside prejudices on occasion".

Irony Is Keen

The Manchester Guardian, under the caption "Pillar of Empire" asks "was the bargain struck before or after Mr. Bennett tried go insert an embargo on Russian goods into the text of the Anglo-Canadian agreement at Ottawa? When he made his gallant, if belated, stand, did he know a Russian order worth $50,000 was in Canadian Manufacturers' pocket? Evidence hitherto suggests he did".

That is not the only amusing fact in this unique affair. Mr. Danish, not a British, vessel is chartered to carry oil, and the real profits of the transaction find their way in time to the United States as the Aluminum Company of Canada is a subsidiary of Mr. Mellon's Andrew Mellon, former United States Secretary of the Treasury and present Ambassador to the United Kingdom) Corporation at Pittsburg. Even Mr. Bennett's worst enemy became a little frayed toward the close of the Imperial Conference."

EXPLORATION

The first white to gaze on Lake Ontario, Etienne Brule, was a French youth. His memory was recalled on Saturday by the unveiling of a memorial tablet at the Old Mill on the Humber, in Toronto in his honor. The part of the French in opening up the northern part of the New World has been acknowledged but generally speaking the story of French exploration is not fully known to English speaking students.

Belleville's former citizen who created a world of romance, the late Sir Gilbert Parker, turned to early French Canadians for the themes of some of his stories. The artist was captivated by the story of these pioneers of Gallic origin.

It is a good thing for Ontario to realize what a debt is owing to the French Canadian for the building of Upper Canada.

The New World offered great opportunities for exploration, but the three greatest lines of exploration being the English, French and Spanish. Canada is fortunate in having the two streams of French and Anglo-Saxon merging in the present structure of the Dominion.

WITH THE POLICE

The time should soon come when boys and girls should be initiated in their earliest years into the mystery of police control of law and order, so that law will seem no burden to them, will even be shown to them as their own best safety, really their own wishes put in the form of authority. No child should be afraid of a policeman and no parent should be guilty of threatening a child with the words "If you don't behave I'll tell the policeman about you."

A little insight into the workings of police forces, the methods followed by detectives when a crime is committed, the sifting of clues would not be a bad study for the young, who would then see that the way of the criminal is the way of folly, desperation and a false ideal in life.

Friendship with the policeman should be one of the happiest occasions as when a youngster takes the big safe hand of the officer and is piloted across the dangerous roadway.

Familiarity with the police will breed not contempt but respect for the police and for their place in modern civilization. Many a boy who errs might have been saved had his first meeting with the police not been after a mishap by the hand of citizenship. The police are our deputies, our burden-bearers.

There is very much sport made in films and in funny papers about police and detectives. There should be no more banter of this kind than there should be laughter at a lifeguard who saves a child or a lifeguard who might provide a scene for mirth but the scene would be so written and presented as not to be a sport of the guards. Unfortunately caricatures of police foibles cover the entire system or are misunderstood. This should not be the case.

HIS QUIET WAY

A hero came home to London with a trophy, the U.S. amateur golf crown and did not make a demonstration. He even avoided it very successfully. He did not give the citizens an opportunity to pay him honor.

In the victory as in his game he did not allow the plaudits of the gallery to dazzle or bewilder him. Herein he is the ideal type. The world is full enough of publicity hunters that it can treasure the unobtrusive type of man like Sandy Somerville.

COMMENTS

Now that scientists have found the missing link in the animal creation between the fishes and the toads which they are supposed to be associated in their evolution, someone might try to find an answer to the problem of why man cuts short the dog's tail when nature did not intend it.

Though all that glitters is not gold the cloud may have a silver lining, and sometimes the glitter is gold, so Ben Rouillard, prospector, haggard and worn with being snowbound in the big toy when the foot scraped a gold vein indicating one of the richest discoveries. Had he not been wandering seeking a way out of the defile in which he had found himself he would not have been so fortunate as to discover for himself and others this source of metal wealth.

People have got the rat where they want him and where they don't want him. He is known as a menace to public health. No one has arisen to defend him. He is worse off than the wolf. At this season the rat seeks homes and shelter and will find a lethal welcome wherever he goes. Kingston dump, infested with rodents, is to be cleaned up because the authorities feel that the rat is too dangerous to be at large even there.

The setting for untold romances,
A spacious place and most discreet,
Brief tete-a-tetes between blithe dances,
Much whispered nonsense, prized and sweet.

The haven for unhappy lovers
To whom the fates have been unkind;
In these dim spaces safety hovers
And passers-by are wisely blind.

The lights are low and softly shaded,
Intriguing and becoming, too,
For those with charms a little faded,
But hearts as fresh as morning dew.

What tales of every deep emotion
These walls might tell, if they could speak,
Of jealousy, of hate, devotion,
Of love too strong, of faith too weak!

A setting for untold romances;
A kiss, a promise or a tear,
A last farewell, a flirt's false glances;
All these and more each day are here!

JOHN A. GIBSON, a past director of Rotary International, past president of Toronto Rotary Club, and one of the stepfathers of Belleville Rotary Club, addressed the local club on Monday on the "Rotary Membership and Classification" in which he pointed out some of the difficulties of adhering strictly to Rotary rules as to classification of members, particularly in a club like Toronto with 380 members. Rotary classification permits membership of only one clergyman of the Protestant churches, notwithstanding the many churches of the faith under different management. Rotary classification deals with individuals and not with churches, hence the Roman Catholic church has one representative, and the Protestant churches one representative in each club, and one each for all other religions, Hinduism, Shintoism, and all the others isms. What a thought for church union.

MY FRIEND "THE CYNIC" offers this: "I understand that the High School is now over-crowded with around 1000 pupils, and there is some suggestion of staggering the classes—probably the older pupils, but it sounds ominous. Might I suggest, instead that we put on a modest addition costing a few $250,000 or so? I could then have a class for pupils of 20 to 30, another class for pupils 30 to 40, and perhaps another for boys from 40 to 60. Of course they'd have to pay extra, not for 60 to pay taxes, but if one cannot pay taxes by the time he is 60 then he will never be able to. Anyway I am in favor of everybody going to school, and nobody going to work, but they should pay for their own education." And having got that off his chest no doubt he feels better.

CLOTHES HAVE PSYCHOLOGY OF THEIR OWN

Often Modify Personality of Wearer Says Bisch

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Women at least suspect that clothes have a psychology all their own, while men are careless about clothes and often do not realize how important and how subtle the personality of the wearer.

Clothes affect your mind, as well as the minds of those who behold them. If you haven't seen an evening gown or a dress suit for a long time, put one on and see how different you feel; or if you have felt your purse strings about to be stretched by including a new garment of any kind, take a chance and note the way in which your new clothes can make in your outlook.

Not only is there a psychology of clothes. There is also an anatomy of clothes. The wrong clothes for a man or woman may be termed their structure, their anatomy; and this anatomy must be right.

Tight-fitting clothes hamper your movements and restrict your activities. This makes you irritable, because it interferes with the smooth performance of your duties. Clothes that are too loose flap around the body and produce a feeling of sloucliness. This engenders in a fairly careless way, which of course is anything but desirable in the development of personality.

Furthermore, when clothes do not fit well or are generally poorly tailored they make their possessor self-conscious and over-sensitive. Such clothes likewise draw attention to any peculiarities of figure or gait that the individual may possess, and thus accentuate them. They make the wearer feel that he is living in a glass house.

Not only must we speak of an anatomy and psychology of clothes, but also of a physiology of clothes. By physiology I mean the suitability of clothes as to thickness and texture, and their consequent effects upon general well-being.

Thin clothes in cold weather permit too free loss of body radiation, hence put a needless strain on the heart and circulation, which must function all the more in order to keep the body warm. Clothes that are in hot weather are also bad. They prevent proper radiation and do not permit the body to cool. Both conditions make for mental restlessness and nervousness, which are not to mention the pernicious results of the nervous machinery.

To return again to the psychology of clothes, the color, the cut and the general appropriateness of clothes in relation to the occasion for which they are to be worn.

Garish colors and inharmonious combination as between shoes, gowns and hat, are conspicuous in the way a dress hangs—these and other clothes defects can make a woman an object of criticism, or even ridicule; and for a man to be conspicuous in dress is to be equally absurd.

Furthermore, dark-colored clothes tend to depress the spirits while gay colors cheer them. One should therefore change clothes colors frequently. If you have been wearing mourning, don't put on something different. The effect upon the mind is astounding.

Everybody wants assurance, poise and personality, and that is just what the right kind of clothes for your particular type of personality can give you. Never follow slavishly by the prevailing seasonal styles. Make modifications to suit your taste and, if I may be permitted to say so, to suit your peculiar style of beauty."

Time and thought spent in the selection of your clothes is distinctly worthwhile. Don't let anybody—salesman or friend—tell you what you should wear. Find out for yourself, and stick to it.

Letters to The Editor

QUESTION OF FOOD

Belleville, Ont., September 19, 1932.

The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir:

Please permit the use of your columns to draw attention to a very important and much needed endeavour in our city, more so than ever this fall.

Winter with its increased problems is fast approaching. There is much lack of the abundance of supplies for many. Some, who have had individual gardens, find insufficient results by reason of not having had proper seed, fertilizers, equipment, etc. and through spasmodic rainfalls.

Can not something be done here in a public co-operative way to assist these people? I am obliged to seek additional help, who in the rural districts have a surplus of such things as potatoes, wood, tomatoes and apples that may be profitably harvested as is said to be the case in recent years, but which otherwise will go freely if volunteer transportation can be arranged in Municipal Clubs, Church environs ministers of the gospel could explain the duties of practical Christianity by sending their efforts as sort of up-to-the-minute in practical experience. Last year a blessed work was accomplished by the Belleville and district societies for the Saskatchewan folk in their plight. Now a home missionary service can be continued nearer by. It will save the taxpayer much in the cost of city relief distribution again. Welfare organizations, Social Service Council, Good Samaritans ret. Industrial commissioners find it difficult to place them in many industries and increase of population. Suggestions from these ways are helped to be profitable citizens.

Yours gratefully,

Visionary.

SEEWAY PACT TO BE FOUGHT

Condemn Building Water Way With American Money

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 20—With the completion of the St. Lawrence Waterways project as "economically unsound," by speakers at the opening session of the New York State Waterway Association here today, the battle was joined, the stage was set for a battle today.

Adoption of a resolution condemning the St. Lawrence project unfavorably, was to be moved by delegates today. Speakers before the convention, however, generally condemned building a waterway in a "foreign country" with the aid of American money, urging as an alternative an All-American waterway from Chicago down the Great Lakes with the deepened Welland Canal.

Peter G. Ten Eyck of Albany, President of the Association, called upon the delegates to fight the St. Lawrence project to the "last ditch."

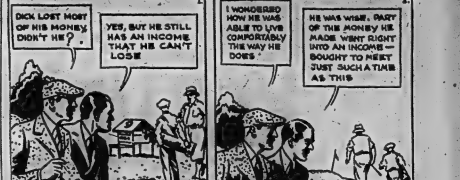
NO LIGHT SHED ON DEATH OF WARDEN



Rossburn, Man., Sept. 20.—A belated coroner's inquest last night failed to throw any light on the death of the killer of Lawrence Lees, Dauphin Warden, who was shot in his cottage in Riding Mountain Park on the night of July 13. The verdict was that Lees came to his death from wounds caused by bullet fired by a person unknown.

Almost completely recovered from the wounds received at the same time, Lees' young widow was the first witness. She told of hearing the fall of the attack calmly and after the shot, described her husband came through a window while the two were eating a late supper. She herself was shot while telephoning for help.

DUFF REPORT ON RAILWAYS TO BE GIVEN

Government Will be Handed Document Today

CONJECTURES

Likely to Urge Board and Sharp Reduction in Financing

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)— The much discussed report of the Royal Commission appointed to study Canada's transportation troubles will be presented tomorrow by the hands of the government today.

Many forecasts have been made as to what these recommendations will be. Among those are that a board be named, headed by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, and to include representatives of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, and an "outsider" to pass on economies for two systems. It is understood that the railway will receive one representative each on the Board.

Wide Powers

The three-member Board would have wide-powers in recommending economies and the elimination of waste, duplication of services, etc.

Abandonment of certain country quarters, government, railway and business circles the report will be delivered to Prime Minister R. B. Bennett by Mr. Justice Lyman P. Duff, Chairman of the Royal Commission. He will be accompanied by many commissioners who helped find it convenient to be in the Capital when the report is delivered. Joseph Pleaville, Toronto and Beauval Lumber Merchant, Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, will likely be present, when the report is handed to Mr. Justice Duff and his colleagues.

Urge Reduction

Problems considered during the lengthy investigations into the transportation include financial affairs of the two railway systems which have relieved the report will urge substantial reduction in the Capital Cost of the Canadian National Railway. Motor competition, offered by passenger and freight carriers, was another subject carefully considered, and recommendations governing this class of traffic are certain to be included in the findings of the commission.

Conjecture that the Duff commission will recommend the scrapping of the Dominion railways, it is understood, was unfounded, the commissioners taking the view, that an original Canadian National system is able under the present situation in Canada.

Today, it is expected, a lengthy summary of the findings will be made public, but it is believed that the main report will be issued until parliament meets next month.

EXPORT TREND IS REVERSED

Majority of Goods Going to British Empire Countries

OTTAWA, Sept. 20. — A great change in the trend of Canadian exports has developed, whereby the exports to the United States for some time past, exceeding the total exports to all British Empire countries combined, the situation is now reversed. In July and August the change is very definite, according to figures issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics yesterday. During these two months the export to the United States totalled $34,714,43 and to British Empire countries $40,258,935. In July and August 1931, the export to the United States was $42,230,000 and to the British Empire countries $36,738,067.

ROYALTY AT CELEBRATION

United Methodists in Britain Largest Protestant Body

London, Sept. 20 — Methodists from all parts of the world have gathered today in London for the official celebration in Albert Hall of the final union of the three great branches of the Methodist Church, the Wesleyan Methodists, the United Methodists and the Wesleyans, making it the largest Protestant church in the world.

The Act of Union has been drafting a short time and will be in the religious history of the country from the birth of John Wesley.

The Duke and Duchess of York are to be present to represent the King, while delegates from the American and other Protestant churches will attend greetings.

An estimated community of 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 Methodists and an estimated church property valued at between $300,000,000 and $450,000,000 will be affected by the Union.

Vacant land in Lewisham, London, having quite known owners has a total value of $25,000 and the local council is wondering where it may collect $10,000 spent in paving in front of the lots.

Help Kiwanis to Help Others is Appeal Made

After weeks of concentrated effort by the members of the Kiwanis Club in preparation for this big event, the doors of the Armouries are swung wide open tonight for the initiation, opening on the 1932 edition of the annual Karnival. Karnival Style Revue—and a trip through the Mediterranean today! Kiwanis is out to help others in this slogan for the Karnival and it is a plea directed at every individual in Belleville—for the busy business and professional men behind the money raising effort are not with it for personal gain—but to have the welfare of the unemployed of our community at heart and work hard to help lessen their burdens during the coming, trying months.

It is not on these grounds alone that the committee ask the public to get the habit and start attending the Big Show tonight. But it is the duty of the Kiwanis Club to put on a show that guarantees you more than your moneys worth and tonight's programme will be no exception. Start right—Start tonight

Mayor G. O. Tice.

George A. Lee.

Who will introduce Mr. Don Copeland at the opening of the Kiwanis Karnival

TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE:

As Mayor of the City of Belleville I heartily commend the efforts of the Kiwanis Club in their charitable activities throughout our city. They have as a Club recognized needy cases and all needy causes brought to their attention with the result that they never fail to carry on their worthy endeavours.

The annual Kiwanis Carnival which starts tonight is their chief source of the necessary money to sponsor this philanthropic work, and by trying to assist under-privileged children they will be enjoying themselves and only from the residents can this revenue come. Kiwanis members with the help of Kiwanian parents have given of their time and ability to make this year's show a success. Novel features have been arranged but it would be well not to tell the secret. Suffice it to say there will be vaudeville of the highest quality, a fashion show that will be a delight, and a midway that is sure to please. We believe as members of the Kiwanis Club, the annual Karnival is getting bigger and certainly better. The price of admission has been changed, it is still 25c and the money takes you all through the show. So come out tonight and take every night of the week in helping the Karnival you are helping others. Help to enjoyment of comforts and pleasures previously denied.

I am encouraged this year's Karnival to both young and old, knowing that all will see something worth-while and will be glad to lend their attention with the result that they never fail to carry on their worthy endeavours.

Mitzi and the Moon

By Lilliace Mitchell

Jed Wilson unlocked the door, drawer, and, reluctantly. His mind was filled with a thousand thoughts: Arlene who would grieve for him a while, and then probably marry one of the well-to-do young business men she knew; Arlene who had left him while on the honeymoon-the-world-; the great moon that hung in the sky like a golden ball in the dark heaven; Mitzi, the little dog on which he had staked everything and lost.

Mitzi whined. Without opening his eyes Jed reached out. Jed took the dog out to the back porch, ran an instant the dog looked up into his face and then ran down the stairs with that odd humpbump that would have told anyone the dog did not really want to go. Jed went back to his room and looked out of the east window. There in the side yard Mitzi sniffed and sniffed about the ancient oak.

"Every block in the city ought to have a warning sign: 'Beware of dogs,' he told himself, "I hate to have everything I own to think of Arlene. The folks downstairs like Mitzi. It's lucky they know Arlene as well."

Once more he turned over the thoughts that tormented him.

"....your script has passed the first screen-with flying colors. We shall report to you not later than the thirteenth as to our final decision. As you realize, we shall return the material express collect at six but there was no need here to show that it had been. Here is the message, and Jed almost accepted Contract and advance royalty following by air mail. Let us see your next book within the month if at all possible. Congratulations!' Call this message back to me, please."

But Jed did not bother with this part at all. He went to his window and looked out. There lay the vacant lot at the side still there for weeds, still looking beautiful under the full moon. There was Mitzi, too, sniffing, snuffing Mitzi now she had forgotten her wailing for the beautiful Arlene. Arlene looking, looking at that moon too, maybe, the fickle Arlene! They could never have the little country place they had planned on together now, and he and Mitzi would live on the sky and murmured softly:

"Lucky moon! Lucky moon!"

Letters to The Editor

MOBILIZATION DATA

September 19, 1932.

The Editor, Belleville Intelligencer, City.

Sir,—The enclosed letters from F. W. Bentley of Winnipeg, and Lt.-Colonel J. C. Preston, Officer Commanding 30th Regiment, will make pleasant reading for all those in Belleville who remember that "mobilization" and stay here of the 38th Regiment, O.R., in a Battalion of gentlemen.

Yours very truly,
W. N. Ponton.

Press F. W. Bentley
439 Ingersole Avenue,
Winnipeg, Man.
September 10th 1932.

Col. Ponton, D.S.O.,
Belleville, Ont.,

My dear Colonel,—

Your interest in the old 38th Batt., which was mobilized in the fine old city of Belleville, Ontario, in the early days of 1918, I have never forgotten and I well remember the grand send-off the old city gave us when we left for Montreal and England and France. That memory will ever be cherished, in my mind, of the goodness and many kindnesses so unselfishly given by yourself and the good people of Belleville. I spent some real days in the old town during the good old days of mobilizing. There were sad memories, true as you will remember, the attack of spinal meningitis whilst we were quartered in the canning factory, and which carried off many of my old pals, whom I had learned to love.

I congratulate you, Colonel, on being elected to the City in the Last Society recently held in Calgary and may you long live to enjoy the honors. I am sending you my pledges to return to Belleville, since the war to be a small token of appreciation for all the kindnesses shown us by the good people of Belleville, and the boys back at the old 38th Battalion.

Kind regards to all old boys of the old 38th Battalion.

Ever your comrade-in-arms,
Frederick William Bentley,
Box 1, R.R. No. 1, 1125A7

Orangeville, Ont.,
14th September 1932.

Colonel W. N. Ponton,
Belleville.

Dear Colonel Ponton,—

I thank you sincerely for your letter of the 12th instant, enclosing copy of Mr. Bentley's letter of the 29th Battalion, C.E.F. It was good of you to send it on to me and I appreciate very much your thoughtfulness in doing so.

It is now a year of Bentley again and to know that he has not forgotten the old boys, and also yourself and many other citizens of Belleville is very encouraging to numerous days of 1915. Every member of the old unit has very pleasant memories and appreciation which he expresses, although perhaps, as he mentions, in the way of the old days of us, few will write and say so, as Mr. Bentley has done. I am sure there are so many who did not realize what we were since associated the last roll call.

Personally, I feel that the members of the Old Battalion can never adequately express the debt of gratitude all owe to the people of Belleville, for invaluable sympathy, support and kindness in a thousand and ways.

The only Officers of the Battalion in the vicinity of Belleville, whose names occur to me are Lieutenant-Colonels Bywater and Vanderwater, unless perchance Rev. Lieutenant-Colonel Scrimger should be within reach. I return Bentley's letter herewith.

I am sorry I do have seen so little of you at Old Toronto.

With kindest regards and best wishes for your continued health and happiness.

Yours faithfully,
J. A. Preston.

THUMB-NAIL ROTTED WITH GOUT

Could Hardly Walk—Now Quite Well

When a man such as this can publish his picture as a user of every sufferer from that complaint. His experience is followed by, we give it in his own words:—

"For some years I was a great sufferer from rheumatic gout. There was a time when I could not walk or stand alone. My hands were red, and the thumb on my right hand was swollen and the nail was rotting away. I tried many things, but nothing seemed to give me any improvement. At last I tried Kruschen Salts. I found relief every morning for more than a year, and I am so glad to say my health has begun to get much better, and that the thumb nail, which I thought has regained its normal power, and my nail also is quite normal. I feel I must give my testimony, hoping others will also find a great relief. My friends say I am a walking advertisement for Kruschen."—A. W. Goot is typical of dozens of complaints which science has proved are caused by imperfect blood—the impurities in the blood-stream are caused by insufficient elimination of waste matter; 9 in a word—constipation, whether slight or serious.

Kruschen Salts go right down to the root of the trouble and remove the cause. They neutralise harmful acids in the stomach and prevent them forming again. They end the constipation evil by gently persuading the organs of elimination to function exactly as Nature intended they should.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 40c. and 75c. per bottle.

If Modern Cleaned It's Clean

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Hand Beautifying Keeps to High Mark

Marvelous how nice hands are these days. Strange also, because more women are doing their housework than ever before. Many a gal has had to be taught how to do laundry work, beside down to drudgery at the washtub, to save money. They say there's been no slack season in the cosmetic business; clothes lines have had a boom.

For fair hands we can thank the manufacturers of the cleaning agents. They don't give us skinbleaching scrubbing powders that our mothers wrestled with, didn't dare handle without the protection of rubber gloves. Household soap has been developed to a bland confection, and that's been a help. Perhaps somebody will devise a furniture polish that won't put black greasy lines in knuckles. Maybe there are some of them now. Anyhow, it isn't the polish but the dirt that the cleaning cloth picks up that does the mischief.

At any rate turn your observing eye handwise wherever you happen to be, and no horrid sights will make you feel squeamish. There aren't any chewed finger nails any more. No broken cuticle. As for those black bordered ones—a woman would as soon display a dirty face as to have them. Children are taught nail care as soon as they are taught to keep their feet brushed. Not only for the sake of appearance but to safeguard health, since germs and germicides have a way of setting up housekeeping under nail rims.

After slinging hymn 406, the President took charge of the devotional exercises. The devotional theme for the month was "The Fearlessness of the Master." The Secretary and Treasurer read very encouraging reports to date.

An invitation from Mrs. John Reading, and that the October meeting be held at her home on the evening of the 3rd, was accepted. Devotional activities includes the men of the congregation.

The Study Secretary read a letter asking for good used clothing for children and adults in needy districts.

Hymn 416 was sung and a most interesting talk was given by Miss Sweetman, deaconess who was for some years a missionary at the Union Station, Toronto. She told many cheerful things about her work.

This is a most important work as so many young girls, travelling from small towns off the dangers of the large cities, are looked after, and guided to safe boarding houses, or put on the right track. Christian leaders of groups of young girls.

The meeting closed with the Lord's prayer.

VOTE AGAINST THE NEW FORM

First Vote in Four But Others Council Changes Mind

Ottawa, Sept. 20—By the narrow margin of one vote the Ottawa city council last night decided against the submission of a public vote to the electors on the form of city government by the 928 stood 15 to 13. This was a reversal of a decision made some little time ago, when council by a vote of 12 to 11 adopted the recommendation of the Board of Control for submission of two questions on civic governments. The electors were to be asked to say whether or not they favored government by an executive council composed of a Mayor and six Councillors, elected at large for a two year term, or whether they favored the present system. Under the present system the city is divided into wards each returning two aldermen, while the Mayor and four Controllers are elected at large.

"Bossing" The Visiting Child

(By Celestiaux Cleaneux)

I didn't think half of us who have ever had little fellows in our homes have been annoyed and bewildered as to when to do about the visiting child who smashes our child's toys, snatches things, pushes, and has no concern over our child's screams. How much can we expect or demand of the young guest? How far can we go in discipline without bringing the trade mother down on our necks for "bossing" her child?

Rules of the Home

We haven't the rights that are ours over our own child, of course, but I do believe we can, in all fairness, require the visiting child to observe the rules of our house, to observe the same rules our little child's playthings that we ask of him.

We can't blame our small daughters for rushing to the door and encase the visitor insists upon playing with the most beloved doll of the visitor has shown that she is careless with the toys of others. We can't scold the small son who belligerently shouts "get out" to the boy from next door use his electric train when experience has taught us that his guest wrecks every toy he touches. Nor can we always send the offender home if we don't want our child to have any compunctions, which is most certainly detrimental to his mental, moral and social growth.

He Will Conform

However, we can kindly say to the little guest: "We are very careful of toys in this house. We are glad to have you come over to play, but if you want to stay you will have to be careful of the playthings, too."

And, too, we can tactfully but firmly say, "if you continue to smash Sonny's train I shall have to put it away wherever you come to see him."

Make your statements impersonal, don't let any emotion you may have toward the visiting child be shown. Keep a calm, cool face, a fact, a rule, and see that he lives up to it. If you demand it of your child, the guest will fall in line. Children enjoy being angled out for rules, but will promptly laugh and easily when each child is expected to obey.

Correct Manners

EATING CHICKEN

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Is it correct to eat chicken with your fingers in company, or in public eating places? It has been pointed out to me as being a breach of etiquette. So I am asking you to settle this question for me, if you will.

Frank

The "pointer out" was correct, sir. We has mustn't eat chicken in our fingers in company or in eating places....not, that is, if we have any regard for our good manners. I'm sure you will agree with me that this doesn't give a good impression; that it is an unpleasant operation, for one gets grease on our fingers, then our fingers soil our napkins. And all the time, really, we can, with a little care and consistence, get the chicken off the bone with our knives and forks, and in the meantime we can be neat and tidy and eaten and can carry on our conversation in a civilized manner....a manner we can't do when we are gnawing bones.

CORDIAL GREETING

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I have never troubled to write to you before, but I am simple reason that I have learned quite a few lessons from your letters, and one is my trouble.

I am going to spend the week end very soon with mother of my young man friend. I would like to know if it is proper to shake hands with her upon my arrival? This has been troubling me considerably.

Your hostess will undoubtedly offer her hand, but I believe that you in welcoming you to her home. I am so sure that she will do this since all hostesses do..... that you needn't worry about this question any longer. This is a cordial form of greeting appropriate to all forms of hospitality.

THANK YOU

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Do you....does one....ever thank a colored maid? Suppose he is a man-of-all-work on a small yacht and hands a visitor a glass of ginger ale? Should she say "Thank you"?

R.

Yes....to all your questions. If we are always mindful of people, if we are gently bred, if we are born with or have acquired that sweetest of all qualities, a kind and considerate heart, then we say "Thank you" to anyone who does us a service, however small, however, in the line of duty. And this, at the time quoted, goes "without regard to race, creed, or color".

THE WEDDING BOUQUET

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Will you please help me?

I am about to be married soon, with a morning church wedding, wearing a simple dress and straw hat. Is it or is it not correct for me to carry flowers?

B. K.

This is as you wish, dear lady. If you wish to carry flowers, it is quite correct for you to do so, provided that they are appropriate in form and arrangement for your simple costume. Or you may, if you prefer, wear a simple corsage, say on your shoulder. For such an occasion, lovely corsages may be made of gardenias, with only their effective shining leaves as background. Or the gardenias may be combined with white or yellow orchids, or with small yellow roses, or with lilies of the valley.

SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

A girl friend of mine is married very soon. This is her second marriage. She is twenty-nine years old, and I am to be her bridesmaid. Do you think it is proper to give her a shower?

Reader.

There isn't any rule about this, and you must use your own good judgment about it. It isn't, of course, necessary, and it isn't considered very good form for a close relative of the bride to give a shower for her. Then too not very often are showers given for a bride-to-be-second-time.

Mrs. Beechman will be glad to answer question on etiquette submitted by readers.

GIRL WRITER ORDERED TO LEAVE RUSSIA

Writing of False News is Charged by Russian Police

28 YEARS OLD

Toronto Girl Has Been in Russia for Four Years

Moscow, Sept. 20 (AP) — Rhea Morgan, a Toronto, Ontario, girl, correspondent here for the London Daily Express and the Toronto Evening Telegram, was ordered expelled from Soviet Russia today on a charge of writing false news about the country.

The order followed recent publication by the Daily Express of a series of articles she wrote after a trip to the timber regions in Northern Russia, purporting to relate conditions in which the recent police at a prison camp near Archangel.

These articles and several others she had written in recent months were quoted at length today in the newspaper Izvestia, widely attacked in a half-page editorial under the "provocateur from the Bourgeois camp."

28 Years Old

Miss Morgan, who is 28, is now at Tiflis. She telegraphed a friend here that she had received the order of expulsion last Saturday over the signature of Yagoda, vice-chairman of the Soviet secret police. She was directed to leave the country within twenty-four hours.

She has been in Russia four years as correspondent for newspapers, periodicals and magazines in Canada and England. At present she is accompanying Alva Johnston, famous sports writer of the New York World-Telegram, who is touring the Caucasus.

Invokes British Aid

Miss Clyman invoked the aid of the British Embassy here in seeking permission to return to Moscow before leaving the country, but the question has not been decided by the police.

This is the first expulsion of a foreign correspondent in ten years, although a representative of the Canadian Press and a representative of the Christian Science Monitor have been refused permission to enter the country in recent years.

Joan MacDonald Is Wedded In Village Church

Small Church is Crowded As Premier Gives Daughter Away

Conrad Nagel, "The Man Called Back," opening at Capitol Theatre, Wednesday.

WENDOVER, Buckinghamshire, Eng., Sept. 20.—(AP)—The Little Congregational Church in this picturesque village was packed to the capacity of 400 today when Dr. Joan Macdonald, daughter of the Prime Minister, was married to a fellow student of the College of Art in Edinburgh, Dr. Alastair Mackinnon.

Her father came over from his country place at Chequers and gave the bride away. It was a great occasion for the village people who have been looking forward to the big event. Many of them left their work early in the afternoon, after which they might watch the bridal procession.

An enormous streamer hung across the High Street bearing the words "Good Wishes". The schoolchildren who were given a holiday lined the roadway to the church and cheered the wedding party when it arrived.

Inside the church, which was decorated with lilies and chrysanthemums from the gardens at Chequers and with white heather from Scotland, Miss MacDonald, the bride's sister, acted as Mistress of Ceremonies.

Four Bridesmaids

The bride was attended by four bridesmaids wearing white satin. Her own gown of heavy crepe silk, patterned with white and gold ears, leaves and butterflies, with a train 10 feet long.

She wore a half-moon shaped headdress of lilies and carried a bouquet of white roses.

The place of their honeymoon has been kept secret, but it is believed they would go to the cottage at Chequers. They were planning to carry out some work in medical research, and the bride spent the time in this village to comply with the necessary residence requirements before marriage. She spent last night at Chequers and left this morning with her father. She is the first bride that Chequers since that estate has been the summer residence of Great Britain's prime ministers.

She is 23, a few years younger than her husband. They met while both were students in surgery at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh. He proposed to her when Miss MacDonald was a bridesmaid at his sister's wedding two years ago, but Joan would not be married until she had finished her studies which she did only a few weeks ago.

"Obey" Omitted

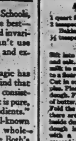
The word "obey" was omitted from the ceremony. The benediction was given by Canon Charlton.

The King telegraphed the Prime Minister congratulations on the happy couple. "The Queen and I wish the young couple every happiness", the message read.

Cheering crowds greeted the bride

Miss Jessie Marie De Both makes her delicious

Apple Dumplings



with Magic Baking Powder

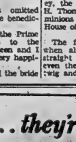
"When a young housewife asks me what baking powder she should use," says Miss De Both, director of the famous De Both Home Makers' Cooking Schools, "this is my advice: Use the best—one that is pure, uniform and invariably dependable. You can't use second-rate baking powder and expect first-rate results.

"My experience with Magic has been particularly happy. I find that it never varies—that it is consistently reliable. And I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Statements by other well-known cookery authorities give wholehearted support to Miss De Both's judgment.

In fact, the majority of dietitians and cookery teachers throughout Canada use and recommend Magic exclusively.

"CONTAINS NO ALUM" Read the statement on the can—it guarantees that Magic Baking Powder is free from alum or any harmful ingredient.



Made in Canada

Apple Dumplings
1 cupful flour
1/4 cups milk
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 teaspoonful salt
Chopped apples
Sugar
Cinnamon

Sift into a bowl flour, baking powder and salt. Rub in the butter. Add cold milk to make soft dough. Turn out on to a floured board and roll into a sheet. Cut in squares. Peel and core the apples. Place an apple on each square of dough. Fill the core with a small piece of butter, sugar and a little cinnamon. Fold the dough over, making sure that there are no openings, as the cooked apple dumplings make the sauce while dough is baking. Brush dumplings with a little cream and place in greased pans. Bake in moderate oven for about 30 minutes. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

Mrs. Alex Gold of England Favored to Win Title

Kanawaki Golf Club, Kanawaki, Que., Sept. 30—Summer-like weather with little wind greeted the 33 survivors of yesterday's qualifying round in the Canadian Women's Open Golf Championship as they teed off this morning for the first round of match play.

The field was cut off by Mrs. Gold, the English player who provided the sensation of yesterday's play by winning the medal with an 83, and Mrs. Harvey Martin, Summerlea, Montreal, golfer. Mrs. Gold beat Mrs. Harvey 6 and 4 today to enter the next round.

The remainder of the early matches showed the favorites to be coming through as expected. Miss Fay Mills, Ottawa, defeated Mrs. Three up on Mrs. Lawson Williams, Royal Montreal at the turn, and Miss Bernice Wall of Oakhoch, Wis., had a ten hole battle before beating Nora Hanbin of Rosemere, Montreal, at the ninth.

The best of the early matches was that between Miss Doris Taylor and Miss Rita Hope, Canada's young Kanawaki bosses. They were all square at the 18th hole.

Kanawaki Golf Club, Kanawaki, Que. (By The Canadian Press) — A field of 16 women golfers truly international in composition, entered the second round of the Canadian Women's Open Golf Championship at Kanawaki this morning when them were numbered all the preliminary tournament favorites. The first round of match play over 18 holes today cut the qualifying field of 32 in half and there was no surprise quality in the cutting process, most of the leaders coming through with one-sided victories.

The surviving field consisted of one English woman, five United States stars, and 10 Canadians, two from Montreal, three from Toronto and one each from Ottawa and Hamilton.

Mrs. Alex Gold, Beaconsfield, England, led the field but in the second round with an easy 5 and 4 victory over Miss Harvey Martin, Summerlea player. Mrs. Gold was not pressed at any point but four up at the turn. Yesterday's qualifying medalist again showed stylish form and she is one of the most highly favored to succeed Miss Maureen Orcutt, the champion.

When the pies were found inside in the house, they were given to the pigs, who still are suffering pains for the poison.

"Spider" Pladner Dropped With Barrage of Rights, Lefts As Panama Brown Retains Title

Champion Does Dance And Leaves Ring Untouched

GWYNNE WINS

Defeats Opponent in 1st Round in Professional Debut

Toronto, Sept. 20—Panama Al Brown, dusky leader of the dark-tanned light division, continues serenely upon his uninterrupted rule today by reason of two lightning right hand drives that dropped a would-be usurper from France.

For just two minutes and twenty one seconds of their championship bout last night Emile (Spider) Pladner stood up against the sangly negro. Loose-jointed, agile and shifty, Pladner lured into the Frenchman with a few opening jabs sneaked two lefts to the face and followed them with two more right rights. The first sent the Spider sprawling. He came up groggily at the count of seven and walked into the same trap.

THE BIG SWAT

When the world's series opens next Wednesday, George Herman "Babe" Ruth will launch upon his ninth series in baseball's classic. He has played one more world's championship baseball team than any other man; namely six. His batting record in the 1926 series was .625, the highest ever known. Ruth's total of 10 home runs in the world's series is well over the .300 mark, another record.

32 READY FOR MATCH PLAY

Open Championship is Headed For States or England

Montreal, Sept. 20—Thirty-two entrants from England, Canada and the United States will tee off tomorrow in the first day of match play for the Canadian Women's Golf Championship at Kanawaki Golf Club. The rather small field of 61 was reduced in the qualifying round yesterday. Mrs. Alex. Gold of Beaconsfield, England, carded off-qualifying honors with 82 strokes, Peggy Wasdin of Buffalo, N.Y., was second with 85 and Doris Taylor, of Kanawaki was third with 86.

The tricky Kanawaki greens were a stumbling block for many and the champion herself was said to have been seen in many traps. The young Montrealer, however, finished with the greens brilliantly. Although she took 46 on the way out, about because she dubbed her drives on the eighth and ninth holes, she came back in par 38 with birdies on the 14th and 18th.

Withdrawal of Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N.J., who has held the championship for the past two years is regarded as leaving Canadian hopes somewhat better chance to win the title. Play of Mrs. Gold and Peggy Wasdin yesterday, however, gave evidence of a distinct threat the championship would remain among the United States or travel across the Atlantic. Par-ticularly strong was Mrs. Gold's win yesterday owing to the fact she did not come to Canada to enter the match but put in her entry on a sudden decision.

CUBS ARE ALL BUT IN FOR SERIES HONEY

"Crooecial" Series With Pirates Opens Today in Chicago

NEED ONE GAME

Phillies Making Game Fight to Reach Third Hole

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Chicago Cubs, scenting world series money, moved today to put the finishing touches on the Pittsburgh Pirates, their last surviving rivals for the National League title.

They met at Wrigley Field, home of the pennant-winning Cubs, in a double header labelled "sudden death" for the Pirates.

A victory in either tussle was all the Cubs needed to make their triumph official and assure them a week or rest before tackling the Athletics, Philadelphia champs, in the big battle.

Although today's games were important, they were not, strictly speaking, "must" games. Precisely, The Cubs could drop all four parties with the Pirates and still win out by taking one game from their last two games.

Tonight, however, a certain peshion in the prospective beaching of the three Cubs flags. It was easy to remember how, in the latter day of July, the Chicagoans had come along better than six games ahead of the field. The crowd, particularly Tony Piet and Floyd Vaughan would conduct themselves in a way to stem this something pulled loose.

While all the banner was going on at Wrigley Field today, the Phillies and Brooklyn Dodgers were engaged in a postponed game that had Philadelphia fans pretty well worked up. The Phillies hoped to knock the Dodgers out of third place, were trying to do just that in the game having beaten Max Carey's gang, 5 to 3 yesterday. Homers by Chuck Klein and Dick Bartell helped do it in the National League's only other postponement of the season, a rainout with two on was the body blow.

The Boston Red Sox enlivened an otherwise drab program from the American League by trimming Detroit, 3 to 1. Big Smead Jolley caught for the Sox and knocked across three runs with a homer.

Lefty Grove marked up his 25th victory of the season as the Athletics defeated Chicago 2 to 0. The sox got to the great southpaw for 12 hits but were unable to push across one inning.

Four clubs, including the Yanks, were idle.

WATERWAY IS SOON REALITY

Finished Six Months Earlier Than Had Been Expected

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 20—The Illinois waterway, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico—through which a fleet of half million tons of freight a month—appeared today to be in official completion by November 15, six months earlier than had been expected.

Meantime Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois, and others have announced plans for the first broadcast into the provinces of the St. Lawrence Waterway, a proposal up for ratification by the Senate in December.

"We in this section of the midwest have a closer interest in the Illinois waterway than in the St. Lawrence channel," said Senator Glenn. "Chicago and Illinois have spent $100,000,000 to make the waterway to the Gulf a reality."

Constructed at a cost of $107,500,000, the waterway's opening awaits only the construction of movable bridges at five points in Joliet and Utica. The canal itself will have been completed by the Federal Government within a month.

300 YEAR OLD TREE FELLED BY A GALE

Annapolis Royal, N.S., Sept. 20.—A great French Willow tree that sheltered early settlers in this historic town over 300 years ago, was felled by the week-end gale.

Standing majestically on a street corner, it had been pointed out to visitors as one of the landmarks of old Port Royal.

The tree had a diameter of five feet, and in recent years its hollow trunk had been a playhouse for children.

NO NEW CASES

Brockville, Sept. 20—There are no new developments in connection with the outbreak of infantile paralysis in the township of Elizabethtown not far from the village of Lyn, Dr. Hutchison, of the local health authorities. All contacts are under quarantine and no new cases have developed.

In order to defray their expenses to either Barrie or North Bay the local Victorias are canvassing for funds in the business district. To date the canvassers have met with success in every place but with gentlemen when they have approached. The players were somewhat disappointed when the news flashed told them of the postponement of yesterday's game on account of rain. The Victorias had hoped, but in vain, to have game here on Wednesday afternoon.

This lay-off of over ten days will not do the cause of the club any good. We learn, in the guise of a prevarication, should be advanced to the idle for over a ten day period, especially when the team has hit its stride as they have been enjoyed of late. This lay off may put them off their pedestal and upset them from the intermediate finals. Coach Chauncey Gerrow and Manager Fanning are at a loss to know what to do as the team can't play every evening now. A good long workout on Wednesday afternoon would put the players right on edge. Archie Campbell is one pitcher who will have an plenty of work. The more games Campbell pitches the better he seems to get.

Yesterday we spoke of Tommy Fedder's swimming to Manasauga Point and back on Wednesday. It seems this is according to the label, made by Tommy he cannot swim for such long distances to cover the course, some miles further, in the all-day seven hours. If the weather continues to get any cooler we have our doubts as to the wisdom of taking a dip in the icy waters of the Bay of Quinte at present.

Coach Les Shiels will have his B.C.I. grid stars out every afternoon this week. He has arranged to exhibition football game with the fast Oshawa Collegiate team for next Saturday at 2.30 p.m. The Intermediate baseball game being a thing of the past the football team will have to be staged at a later date. Coach Shiels has a number of plenty of response from the football squad this year and the coach-ate as he has some fifty or more footballers out every afternoon. Pine-hurst is also getting their peewees on the field, however.

Jimmie Falwell and Jack Keyhoe, his two kicking halves, were in the job last night and can secure-ly say that the "pigskin" as far as usual. Coupled with some of last year's juniors and what is left of last year's senior team the coach feels that he can place a fairly good rooter team in the field this fall. As usual the junior team will be picked from the freshmen classes of the school.

Major R. J. E. Graham was crowned club champion at the annual championship tournament at the Bay of Quinte Golf Club held on Tuesday. "Bob" was always a very proficient golfer and is to be congratulated upon his present achievement. He beat Dr G. H. Stoble in the final match two up and one.

Some little street talk is being heard locally regarding this wher-ever's hocker teams. According to the dope Belleville will again be in the O.H.A. with a good junior team and a better intermediate team than they have enjoyed in some years past. Last night's brainy Brownie Flasher fight in Toronto was somewhat of a flop

It seems that neither fighter could make the proper weight at 3 p.m. yesterday afternoon. Both had to take extra physical training while, losing the extra poundage, before the bout. When the flash-bound boys hit Pladner and the Frenchman hit the floor, exit Madam. It is too bad that the over terminated so quickly as Toronto has a good fireright or handed weight town. Toronto's own contender, Gwynne Wins, also disappointed his professional career quite suspiciously when he flashiend his fistic opponents in two rounds.

John J. McGraw recently came to the front with a statement to the effect that the Giants are very close world's series this year. He concedes the Yankees having the superior hitting strength of the two but thinks that the Cubs pitching staff and head shoulder over the Yankee's hurlers.

The majority of the American sport writers are calling Max Schmeling to win quite easily over Mickey Walker in the Tay Bulldog on Friday night. If Max can win from a couple of push-overs this week he will offer another crack at the title next summer and be many thousands of dollars richer for his efforts during the so-called comeback. Barnum was right.

SEARCH FOR GOLD CARGO

Boat Being Searched Capsized Near Baltimore in 1798

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 20—A cargo of $10,000,000 in gold in the hull of a sunken war sloop off the coast of Cape May, N.J., is the goal of two Baltimore salvage vessels here preparing to search the ocean.

Resuming the work abandoned by a syndicate of divers a month ago, the two vessels were equipped for searching for and raising the, hull of the old warship, the Delbrask, which was believed to have had a cargo valued at $10,000,000 aboard when it sank in 1798.

Old charts have been obtained from the British Admiralty to aid in the search for the hulk of the Delbrask which is believed to be intact, having been built of Teak-wood.

The Delbrask was capsized by a hurricane and put up fried as she was about to send a boat ashore with officers after she had captured two Spanish galleons and plundered them of their gold.

Chief diver under the command of Clarence A. A. Jackson of Baltimore, a deep sea diver and navigator.

VICTORIAS ARE ENJOYING SELVES

Invitations are coming thick and fast to the Belleville Victorias who are carrying on in the Intermediate "B" O.B.A.A. playoffs. They are now waiting for the winner of North Bay-Barrie series, the fine game to be played Saturday. Tonight the team will be guests of Chris. Holmes, manager of the Capitol Theatre, and on Wednesday they will look over the picture at the Regent, the guests of George H. Purhan.

SAYS FLIER WOULD MARRY

Intends to Marry if Woman Wants to or Not

Miami, Fla., Sept. 20 — James J. Forrester of the Federal Labor Department, said today he had learned that Captain William N. Lancaster, British war flier and third side of the love triangle which collapsed with the shot that killed Forrester, plans to marry Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller—the woman in the case.

"I intend to marry Mrs. Keith-Miller whether she wants me or not," Forrester said the British flier declared. Forrester concluded labor department deportation hearings for both, and his reports swell adjudicated, went to Washington.

The declaration was in contrast to the assertion of Mrs. Keith-Miller while on the witness stand in the process of trial relative to the acquittal of Lancaster on a murder charge growing out of the death of Gale Caesar.

Woman's Testimony

"If do not love the gentleman Lancaster) and had not for the past two years," the beautiful Englishwoman was only "intensely fond of him."

Captain Lancaster now is in Waterbury, Vt., seeking the consent of his mother to marry Mrs. Keith-Miller. Forrester said, having left Miami on Sunday. He is returning to Washington.

The flier gained his freedom on bond of $500, set after service of the labor department deportation warrant, which August Pladner, two days after his acquittal on the murder charge.

Little Benny's Note Book

I'm reading a swell book called For Pair Honor's Sake, all about people having duels when they get insulted. It's a peach of a book and us fellows was sitting on the bench today and I says to Jimmy and me and Skinny Martin started to fight on account of a argument about weather the earth is a billion or a billion and one miles through. Jimmy says I'm up with myself and I says Hay, who you think you're tawking to, you shrimp?

Well I'd rather be a shrimp than a big stiff, Jimmy says, and I says shrimp started to eat a string bean that long (holds) and the string broke.

Skinny is a goog anser, and Skinny said, I'll show you who's a shrimp, you shrimp. If you get fresh with me I'll punch you in the nose and bring fresh with. he said, and I said, he is that a threat, and he said I have a duel I'll challence you to fight me with bolders.

All rite, come on around to the back room now, Skinny said and I said, What's the matter, afraid, who ever heard of fighting a duel in a place like this, you don't know much about duels, I said.

Oh I don't know as much as you do, Skinny said, and I said, Like heck you do, or you wouldn't think you could have one in a alley. You have to be held out in the country, or at a dawn, or nothing doing down the park. I said.

O well I guess is that guy, do you think I'd trawk all a ways out to the park to fite a silly guy like you that I could lick one handed easy? Skinny said, and I said, Well, all rite, if you don't want to fite a duel it's none of my business.

Which led to a argument of the fellows came around and we got up a impromptu fite instead. I'm feeling lucky on account of Skinny Martin being one of the best fighters around.

NORTH BAY BLOCK BURNS

Tenants Driven From Their Homes in Night Attire

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 20.—(By The Canadian Press)—Fire which almost totally destroyed the Sallidas Block here early today, broke out at day, and damaged an adjoining building, the Bank of Commerce.

Tenants were discovered by Mrs. Robert Moffat, a tenant in the Sallidas Block, before other occupants of the building were aroused.

Tenants rushed from the building in their night attire while firemen began a two-hour battle with flames and blunderbuss streams escaping from the leaking refrigeration plant in the building.

Principal tenants in the block in the Sallidas Block, which quarter-ed a fine restaurant, a general fur-nishings store and a ladies' wear store was valued at $14,000 and was slightly damaged by smoke.

Peary, the explorer, reported a temperature ranging from 11 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit below zero at the North Pole. Amundsen reported a temperature of about 11 degrees at the South Pole.

Eyelashes should match the frock according to a "freak" Paris fashion. The ladies which are either dyed or covered with artificial lashes will have to see that the eyes themselves change color.

ENGLISH COURTS AND HULA GIRLS IN THIS FILM

The sensational trial of Dicie Kenyon for the murder of her husband is one of the dramatic highlights of "The Man Called Back" opening Wednesday (Classwar) at the Capitol Theatre.

Realising the importance of having these scenes portrayed authentic, the technical staff invaded the Los Angeles County Law Library in their research for the proper procedure in the English Criminal Courts.

They felt fact that English law is the parent of our American law we have departed from many of the English customs.

One of the interesting details of difference is the confining of verpjoce in the courtroom to one particular spot. There is no moving about, except for the coming and going of witnesses. Everyone has designated position in the room and he must stay in that place while there is in session. The acquittal of Lancaster on a murder charge growing out of the death of Gale Caesar.

Woman's Testimony

"I do not love the gentleman Lancaster) and had not for the past two years," the beautiful Englishwoman was only "intensely fond of him."

Strong Cast

A cast of famous screen players has been assembled for the picture in "The Man Called Back." Reading the cast reads like a "popular star" who has been absent from the screen for some time, but during which time he has been making a national personal appearance tour.

Conrad Nagel plays the stellar role of the English barrister, while Phillis Ha way back to success in Andree Soudan's strong story, originally known as "Silent Thunder." Genevieve Tobin and Lionel Atwill are two of many screen hits. In his ballad for regeneration, is Doris Kenyon, the beautiful blonde star of many screen hits. In leading roles are Clarence Haddon Mung, seasoned stage and screen player, Edgar Norton and Lionel Belmore.

Robert Fleury directed "The Man Called Back."

"It's Tough To Be Famous" ends tonight.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"Well!" Amazed by the suddenness of the calamity that had befallen her, Mary Faith sank down on the top before the fire and held her hands to her head and tried to think clearly. It came to her gradually that the storm that had hung heavy had been gathering for a long time. All the last weeks the clouds had been gathering....Weeks ago she should have seen what was happening and tried to stop it somehow. She ought to have gone to Claire and appealed to her. Reminded her that Kim had a little baby, as well as a wife and mother to support.

"But it probably wouldn't have done any good," she decided. Claire was just as hard and cold as Kim was. She couldn't see Claire giving up anybody or anything she wanted.

At last she sat Mrs. Farrell candy mango, carrying an amply shopping bag and with it, under her arm, a large bunch of lavender sweet peas. Mary Faith saw at once that she was breathless with some kind of powerful excitement. There was color in her usually pale face, and she actually wheezed with excitement. "Mary Faith, you'll never have happened to her, to whom nothing of importance had happened, "I've just had the most surprising visit!

"My-Mary Faith!" Her voice shook and she was breathless with the laugh.

"Mary Faith, you'll never believe me —I'm going to be married!"

She turned and glanced toward the dining-room. "Is Kimberley here? I suppose I ought to let him know first."

"He is here, but he's gone."

"Hmmm— She gave Mary Faith a sharp look. "Has the calamity happened?"

"Something like that," Mary Faith answered.

"Well, I'm sorry he's not here. I'd have liked him to have my news first, of all!" Triumph and pride gleamed in her eyes. "Yes, Dr. Thatcher and I are going to be married the morning of his sister's house. And we're going to Florida for our honeymoon! My, I never dreamed of such a thing happening to me when I walked out of this flat this morning!"

She rambled on and on, all excited. She was far too excited to settle down to anything, and Mary Faith did most of her packing. Only once did she come down to earth and that was when she came into Mary Faith's room to say good night.

"Doctor's house looks awfully bare to me," she said. "He's going to send a lot more of his furniture into it when we come back from the south....It's old stuff, but it's solid walnut and I can have it done over for you and Kim never did like it much anyway."

Mary Faith did not tell her that Kim had left the flat and was not coming back. She realized that Mrs. Farrell was gloriously happy for the first time in years, and she was not going to do a thing to shadow that happiness.

"I'll clean everything while you're away," she said, "and, by the time you get back, I will be all ready for you when you get back."

Kim was as good as his word. A week went by, and Mary Faith heard nothing from him. Finally she telephoned and asked him just where he wanted her to send his trunks.

"Athletic Club" he told her shortly.

"Have you heard about your mother and Dr. Thatcher?"

"Yes, I know," he said curtly. "I had a wire from them. Is there anything else?"

"I have got to have some money, Kim. Your mother wants her things sent, and I'll have to have some place to go when she takes it out of the flat."

There was a click as he rang off abruptly. The sharp little sound that was like a period at the end of a sentence. He was telling her once more that he was really through with her. That he was not going to send her any money. That he was going to force her to sue, for divorce and alimony.

She hung the receiver back upon its metal hook and turned away from the telephone quickly, as if it were some kind of an infernal machine that had just wounded her terribly and had the power to wound her again.

All the rest of the day she went around the flat going the little familiar things and trying to decide just what to do. Of course she must get a position as a stenographer at twenty-five dollars a week or so.... A position as a governess for a nurse girl But could she pay for and have for the baby out of that and have for the baby out of that and have for the baby out of that

Favorable Season Increases Corn Borer, But Not to Cause Alarm Says L. Caesar

Provincial Entomologist Inspects This Section of Province

GIVES REASONS

Fall Suggestions to Eradicate Borer Are Given

Professor L. Caesar of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and Provincial Entomologist for Ontario, who is in this section of the province looking over the pest-ridden situation hereabouts, Monday afternoon granted a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer an interview regarding the corn borer and its ramifications throughout Ontario. Caesar's remarks is as follows:

Situation This Fall

There is an increase of the borer in most of the counties this fall, but not sufficient to injure seriously more than a field here and there in any one county.

Essex and Kent, where the borer has been in the past most destructive, will once more have a good crop, and the borers get it in another way, till corn all matures, this spring's ploughing to late fields.

As usual early corn is worst attacked, though there are some exceptions this year, for some very early corn has escaped, and has been very lightly attacked, much less so than corn planted a week later.

Cause of Increase

The main cause for this increase, undoubtedly, is exceptionally favorable weather for the insect. In Europe it has been known that some seasons have been very favorable for the borer, and this accounts for the increase from time to time.

In Canada and the United States during twelve years since the borer was first found there it has not been at least three years which were much more favorable for the pest than the average, and in these the weather was so unfavorable to the borer, July and early August, that 90 per cent. of the young borers perished before they could enter the corn. Last year only 10 per cent. perished, leaving five times as many borers to attack the corn as the previous year. The percentage killed this winter will prove to be not understood, but it is estimated it will be fewer than last year.

These periodic fluctuations are to be expected until parasites or other forces in nature begin to be effective.

Moist, warm weather in July and early August, as we have been experienced out, promotes propagation for the moth from which the borer develops, lives longer and lays more eggs and a greater number of young borers enter the plants and mature.

Value of Act

Careful study of the subject indicates that while the Corn Borer Act has not been the cause of the favorable seasons, it has, on the average during the past years of its operation greatly decreased the borer in the majority of the counties, which have been longest and most seriously infested. It has enabled the farmers in all counties to continue the growing of corn with comparatively little loss.

In 1926, the year before the Act came into operation, in Essex, in 40,000 acres of corn was either totally or partially ruined in Essex and Kent alone. In the entire six years under the Act, not more than 10,000 acres, at the most, in these two counties and all the other counties combined, were ruined.

Had there been no Act most of the counties under the Act would have had little or no corn today in fact Essex and Kent would not have had an ear.

Fall Suggestions

1. Cut corn as low as possible to make it as easy as possible to plow under.

2. If stubble is higher than four inches, disc the field twice to break or loosen it, so it may be plowed more easily.

3. Use a wide furrow plow if possible—and—a—skimmer. Plough deeply and never crosswise, the stubble rows, and see to it that the last furrow before the stubble rows runs close to the stubble, so that on the next round the stubble will be thrown flat into the furrow and buried completely. There are now hundreds of farmers in every county who are handling their corn fields in this way, and have little or no hand picking to do in the spring.

Not be Discouraged

Corn growers should not be unnecessarily discouraged because of the borer in the corn this year, as there are sure to be seasons unfavorable to it in the future as there have been in the past.

The Dominion Parasite Laboratory in Belleville has received and liberated a huge number of parasites of the borer, many from Asia and America. These seems to have established themselves in the corn fields and attacked a great many borers. If they are able to survive our winters, as it is hoped they will, they will perform an important part in the fight against the insect in Ontario.

Sunday

Replying to a question why the borer had proved so pre-eminently destructive in Essex and Kent, Prof. Caesar pointed out that in these two counties the tunneling corn was grown, and after the gathering, the stalks were left on the surface to rot, cut up with the disc the following spring and the fields sown even through planting. They left the borers alive in the cut up stalks.

Since the coming of the Corn Borer Act, this practice has been abandoned and the corn fields in these counties are now cut or burned over and the stubble ploughed in.

Another factor in the situation is the torn borer infests weeds, and that these weeds be done away with before the borer can be eliminated from the district. Prof. Caesar points out that this is an erroneous idea; the borers do not breed on weeds, but on corn, and in corn except those in the cornfield itself, and the Corn Borer Act deals in those weeds have come from the corn infested.

There are many borers in weeds in the pasture plots which resemble the corn borer but are a different specie and these do not attack the corn.

NONE HUNGRY THIS WINTER

Hon. W. G. Martin Makes Announcement at Kiwanis Convention.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 20. —(By the Canadian Press)—Elimination of officers is an important item on the final day's agenda of the Ontario, Quebec, Maritime District Kiwanis Convention here.

Different committee reports and discussions with many delegates on action of the delegates during the morning. At noon Immediate Past Governor J. A. Richardson will preside as a fellowship luncheon.

Election of officers will take place in the afternoon and any unfinished business will be cleared up. Afterward the visitors are to be given an opportunity to view the different points of interest around the city before they climax their three-day session with a banquet tonight.

Hon. W. G. Martin, Ontario Minister of Welfare speaking at a breakfast last night stressed the need of brotherhood as a cure for business and international afflictions, while assuring his hearers that the Government would see that none go hungry in Ontario during the coming winter.

"SPEAK EASILY" WITH BUSTER AND SCHNOZZLE

As a timely offering to audiences craving comedy on the screen as never before, Jim Barton, famous "Speak Easily," featuring Buster Keaton and Jimmy Schnozzle Durante, opens at the Belle today for two day's engagement, matinee daily.

These two capable funsters, who started their antics together in "The Passionate Plumber," have become the outstanding mad-cap comedy team in pictures. The situations between them never lag and the action is kept moving at neck-tie speed.

Their new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle is an adaptation of Clarence Budington Kelland's story, "Footlights," which concerns the adventures of an absent-minded college professor, played by Keaton, who inherits a million dollars and goes out to see life. On his way to New York he picks up a broken, down musical show with Jimmy, a piano player, portrayed by Durante. Their theatrical adventures in the big city provide many side-splitting incidents.

The various numbers in the backstage sequences are especially effective and feature some of the latest Broadway routines staged by Arthur Appell, well-known New York dance director. When the show is finally put on it features the antics of Keaton and Durante in the production, the... audience decided to the entertainment with unrestrained laughter.

The supporting cast is headed by Ruth Selwyn, who recently played opposite Jack Benny in "Five and Ten" and "Polly of the Circus." She is a sparkling light comedy actress and handles her role as Fanny Peets, small-time chorus girl, with finesse. Trixie Friganza, Todd, vivacious blonde, is particularly entertaining as the alluring big-town vamp who causes plenty of heart palpitations for Buster and Schnozzle.

Others in the cast who perform their comedy roles in the hilarious spirit of this offering include Hedda Hopper as the jealous mother of Fanny Peets; Lawrence Grant, who is very convincing as Dr. Bolton, the college dean; Sidney Toler as the excitable stage manager; Henry Armetta as Tony the Italian scrub; William Pawley and Edward Brophy.

GANDHI NOW ON LAST FAST AND IS FREE

Fast Protest Against Settlement of Election Problems

WON'T LEAVE CELL

Friends Ask Mahatma to Desist From Proposed Death

Poona, India, Sept. 20 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, leader of the Hindu Nationalist Congress' civil disobedience movements against the British Government, began at noon today the "fast unto death" which he announced last week as a protest against Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's settlement of the Indian communal elections problem.

As he started his self-imposed starvation regime he was technically a free man. The government this morning let down the bars of his prison, and for the first time he has been a prisoner since January, but the Mahatma spurned the proffered freedom.

He said he would not leave his cell where they confined him and moved and the indications were the government would not remove him by force.

Asked to Desist.

Hundreds of telegrams and letters from friends of the Mahatma, ranging from 20 pages to a few words, pleading with him not to carry out his fast and some of these have added their efforts to dissuade him. He began preparation for the fast by cutting down on the amount of food taken at a meal and spacing the meals further apart.

Gandhi is 63. Most of his life has been spent in jail. The last period of it he has seemed to remain entirely cheerful.

By his closest followers and disciples, including Madeline Slade, the former naval officer's daughter and daughter of a British admiral, who renounced everything to follow him, he is called "Bapu" which means father.

Once a prosperous lawyer in India and South Africa, he has lived like a beggar since he took the leadership of the cause of civil disobedience in India.

Except for his loin cloth, he goes almost quite naked. He sleeps on the floor. He has no home. Like Buddha and Mohammed, he is a wanderer, depending upon the charity of others for shelter and simple food. When asked his occupation he has replied: "Farmer and Weaver."

Arrested on Return.

Gandhi was arrested the last time following his return from the United States, where his publication, "Young India," was suppressed. He was arrested on his return to India and sentenced to a year of civil disobedience campaign, claiming its conference had failed to provide the solution of Indian unity for which it existed.

His wife also was arrested. She is 56. Although during a part of his life he has been a vegetarian, he can devote all his time to his work, they say, through goats' milk alone. She lacks the education of her husband, but helps him in all his work.

Gandhi was reported indisposed when he began his fast but his physician advised him not to see any more friends for the present.

AHMADABAD, India, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Hold Back Out Here today as Mahatma Gandhi fast in Yeroda jail at Poona. Trouble has been feared by authorities to open some of the Hindu temples to the "untouchables."

Police were called out to disperse an angry crowd of Hindus, members of the Jains, a Hindu sect, who staged a demonstration outside one temple, following a Government agreement that the lower classes would be admitted.

The Jains had set up a picket on the temple steps to prevent the Untouchables from entering.

GIVEN PRIVILEGE TO BUY FEEDER CATTLE

In announcing the plan, Mr. Kennedy stated there was an abundance of feed in Ontario but farmers had not the cash to purchase. In Western Canada, the situation is exactly the reverse. Feed supplies are plentiful and feed is scarce.

CARE OF FEET IS EXPLAINED

Gerald Spafford, Guest Speaker at Y's Men's Luncheon

In a brief and interesting address, Sergt. Major Gerald Spafford, of this city, a fine member of the local Y's Men's Club an educational talk on the care of the feet at their weekly meeting held Monday evening.

Dr. Spafford opened his talk by briefly outlining the early study of the feet by the ancient Doctor Loule, a Pennsylvania specialist, had written on the subject. Following a foot clinic in New York since which time the study of feet declined and corn ailments has advanced in rapid strides.

Simplified Ailments

With the aid of a blackboard Sergeant Major Spafford explained the various ailments of the feet, their cause and the ultimate results of such ailments, when neglected. So great and perfect is the construction of the bridge of a man's foot, that an architect remarked that he could tell a man's foot for the pattern of one of the bridges in the world. Others explained the speaker when illustrating that the human foot is made to use and the speaker then related exactly what happened when a man to purchase Western cattle may borrow the money at four per cent interest.

In announcing the plan, Mr. Kennedy stated there was an abundance of feed in Ontario but farmers had not the cash to purchase. In Western Canada, the situation is exactly the reverse. Feed supplies are plentiful and feed is scarce.

FARM STRIKE NEAR LONDON

Unorganized Attempt Puts up Prices is Claim

London, Ont., Sept. 20 (CP) — An unorganized strike was in progress today among garage farmers of Middlesex County, an unusually reliable source reported.

The farmers' tactics, expected in some circles to bring results, were aimed at raising prices. Thousands of bushels of wheat were being held in granaries. Prices showed have been raised ten cents a bushel since the strike.

K. Miller, district seed inspector, said most of each week's activities consisted of each week selling their grain. A London buyer confirmed that the strike had asked that his name be not revealed.

The leaders said he expected a sharp rise in prices soon as he expected a poor spring crop would supply their cash needs within a short time.

Prices have risen from 40 to 45 cents a bushel to 50 and 55 cents, depending on quality.

Some farmers are holding last year's crop as well as that just harvested and, when they are forced to sell, they will get, or let get small amounts of last year's grain.

Western Ontario oat crop is reported to be small this year, buyers said. The quality is not good and will probably be used chiefly for feed. Buyers are depending on the Western Canada crop.

HONEY CROP IS VERY POOR

Harvesting in Ontario Has Generally Been Completed

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—(By the Canadian Press)—Threshing operations in Ontario have generally been completed with the exception of Northern Ontario, where snow has delayed the work and 35 per cent. of the crop is still unharvested, according to the weekly crop of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Central Ontario is completely harvested with the exception of buckwheat. Livestock is in good condition with pastures in excellent shape. Silos are being filled with after-harvest cultivation fairly general.

Harvesting of buckwheat is underway in Eastern Ontario with correcting and also-filling general. Slightly better prospects for grapes for cheese and butter fat. The honey crop this year is very poor, being only two-thirds of a full crop and colored honey barely sufficient to winter the bees.

Northern Ontario's harvest has been delayed by early snow and rain. Tremskanning reported heavy loss in the Timiskaming district through blight. A few carloads of surplus stock has been shipped out at very low prices.

MANY RECOMMENDATIONS IN DUFF REPORT

Recommend Commission of Three Trustees be Appointed Having the Same Power as Present Directors

Duff Report Released Showing Necessity of Able Management Free From All Political Interference And Containing Many Recommendations

AGGRESSIVE COMPETITION SHOULD CEASE

Unless Prepared to Accept Plan Proposed Stability of Nation's Finances And Financial Position of C.P.R. Will be Materially Affected

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—Appointment of a commission of three trustees to whom shall be vested all the powers of the present board of directors of the Canadian National Railways is one of the outstanding recommendations of the commission on railways and transportation. Summary of the report was made public early this afternoon by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett.

The annual budget of the Canadian National System would be under the control of these trustees, appointments should be made by the Government as and when vacancies be filled from a panel of eligible names to be submitted.

Imposition of a statutory duty upon the board of directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway and also the trustees of the Canadian National that they adopt as soon as practicable such co-operative measures, plans and arrangements as shall comply with the requirements handling of traffic be best adapted to the removal of unnecessary or wasteful services or practices, is also recommended.

Unwarranted duplication in services of facilities must be eliminated. A joint operation of all such properties which may be conveniently and without undue disturbance to either party be so operated is urged.

Should Meet Other Board

It is recommended that the board of trustees of the Canadian National and an equal number of directors of the Canadian Pacific shall meet at regular intervals for the purpose of discussing and agreeing upon co-operative measures and services.

In the event of failure to agree and for the purpose of settling disputes or details of any scheme, it is recommended that an arbitral tribunal should be set up on each occasion. This arbitral should be composed of the chief commissioner of the railway commission and of one representative from each of the two railways.

As a further measure of protection, it is recommended that at the request of either railway, and upon it being shown that the president of the Exchequer Court, that the matters in dispute involve large additional members may be appointed by him to the arbitral tribunal.

The powers of the arbitral tribunal may be invoked by either railway or by Dominion or any provincial government in the event of conflict between the board of railway commissioners and the arbitral tribunal, it is recommended that the order or decision of the arbitral tribunal shall prevail.

Powers of Tribunal

The arbitral tribunal should have full jurisdiction as to measures relating to:

(A) Joint use of terminals.

(B) Running rights and joint use of tracks and the abandonment of use or functional duplications or where such may be advisable.

(C) Control and prohibition in respect to the construction of new railways and provision of facilities and additional services where no essential need of the public is involved.

(D) The joint use of facilities where this would promote economy or permit the discontinuance of duplicating or unremunerative services or facilities.

(E) Abandonment of lines, services or facilities.

(F) Pooling of any part or parts of freight traffic or passenger traffic.

(G) Things necessarily incidental to the above enumerated matters.

Cease Competition

In regard to subsidiary services such as hotels telegraph systems and express services the recommendation is of the opinion that aggressive competition should cease. The board of trustees of the Canadian National and the directors of the Canadian Pacific should agree on schemes, which would permit of the working in harmony of these services, which are now operating competitively.

Since the debt of the Canadian National is in the hands of the public it is now very large and more than the railway can carry from

FACE ANOTHER BITTER FIGHT

Likely Prussian Diet Will Be Dissolved Before Finish

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—(AP)— President Paul von Hindenburg and Chancellor Franz von Papen faced another stirring fight with a parliament today and the problem of dissolving the house to end with another dissolution order.

Today's fight was with the Prussian diet, parliamentary body of the commonwealth state, over which a dictatorship was established several weeks ago by presidential decree.

The crisis came about over the growing friction between the diet, in which the National Socialists and Communists have a heavy representation, and the dictatorial commissioners set up by the Chancellor, when he removed the regular state officials.

In case the diet were dissolved, a new Reichstag was less than a month ago, it would mean still another important election in a large part of Germany. INSURANCE TO BE BLIND FOR THE ROBBERY

Witness States Refuse was to Engage Manager in Conversation

HAS RECORD

Plan of Robbery Was Discussed in The Woods

Windsor, N.S., Sept. 21 (CP) — Sydney A. Fraser, standing trial here on three counts arising from the Bluenoses' bank holdup on August 23, was to talk insurance with the manager and be a "blind" for the gang under a scheme discussed in the Marlborough woods the Saturday before the attempted robbery, Clarence Lyons, Halifax grocery clerk, said today from the witness stand.

Lyons, who was the first witness this morning, said that at first he thought it was to be "a warehouse job." He said Freckleton had told it over, and decided Edson Boudreau would be a good companion.

Lyons, examined directly by Crown Prosecutor Gerald D. Richard, said he had known Freckleton for years.

Refuse, with Freckleton, Boutilier and Lyons had gone over the plan of the robbery, Lyons said. Edwards Boutilier had suggested to Refuse that they would be "perfect" to go into it. On cross-examination by William Walsh, associated with O. H. Vernon in the defence, Lyons admitted he was "out on suspended sentence" for stealing from the railroad but did not "hang around with thieves."

Story of Police

The story of police participation in the Bluenose bank robbery was told by the Halifax force.

Had Refuse, Boutilier who had come to Edson Boutilier who had come to told him about the confidence in the woods. Boutilier was unable to name the men who had talked to him. That was on Monday night, August 22.

Kennedy had met the two men, supposed to be from New York or Prince Edward Island" in Boutilier's home the next morning, but did not know their names.

He had called Detective Steven son out to his house to hear Boutilier's story and to meet Mr. Baker Boutilier to the R.C.M.P.

On the following day R.C.M.P. Inspector J. P. Blakeney, Sgt. S. J. Harvey, Corporal Hall, Dr. Taylor James Baker of the city force, and Kennedy had gone to Shubenacadie.

In the bank he had seen the bandits enter, he said, and he met with Refuse right behind him, he says as Freckleton was in the act of swearing. Then he heard one of the bandits say "put up your hands. We have you." Freckleton at that time was pointing his gun at Robertson, the bank manager, but on seeing the police turned and fled.

He remembered positively that Freckleton had fired through his office, he said. The second shot had been fired in the direction of Ball, who was standing near the vault.

TOMMY PEDDER LIKELY TO WIN

First Half of Journey Made in Record Time

Shortly after 11 a.m. Wednesday Tommy Pedder, Belleville's youthful marathon swimmer, plunged into the waters of the Bay of Quinte to try and swim from the Government Dock in Belleville to the Massassaga Dock and return, some nine miles in all, being a total journey of seven hours.

Pedder immediately started to swim in a general southerly direction and so as to avoid the south side of the bay. Once Pedder got well into the current of the channel he turned eastward and with the aid of what strong current in the channel made excellent progress in his race against time.

Pedder was using a strong overarm stroke, which was propelling him through the water at a somewhat rapid speed. He was accompanied by two companions, who followed the chunky little swimmer in a row boat carrying the necessary foods to nourish the swimmer in case he became tired or exhausted.

At 1.23 p.m. Pedder had rounded the point just this side of Massassaga Park and was swimming strongly, still using his over-arm stroke to get advantage. It is the opinion of Pedder and his companions to return by way of the north shore so as to evade the strong eastward current, which is so prevalent on the south shore. By crossing from the south to the north shore at Massassaga and returning along this shoreline Pedder will be swimming in rather still water as there is little, if any, current on the Hastings side of the bay.

The swim was arranged after some of Pedder's friends had wagered him, that he could not cover the distance in seven hours. If Pedder does, however, be is not to share for one year.

Increase Attendance, Revenue At Opening Night of Karnival

"Mr. Cheerio" Enthusiastically Received by Club Members

Attended by hundreds of citizens and hundreds of members of the Cheerio Club in the city, the Karnival Week's Karnival, formally opened by Mr. Don. Copeland, the Mr. Cheerio of the week, early Monday night, was away to a good start in the Armouries last evening. Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., president of the Kiwanis Club attended to the visitors a welcome on behalf of the club and expressed the hope, that the entertainment provided would prove a delight to the audience. He called upon Mr. George Lee, general chairman of the Karnival who hoped, that the patrons would return each evening of the Karnival.

Mayor Geo. F. Tice, in introducing Mr. Copeland, recalled the words of praise Mr. Cheerio had used concerning the Belleville Karnival, which had entertained over 2,000 CFCO and Belleville's sight on the air recently.

Greeted With Applause

Mr. Copeland's appearance was greeted with warm applause from the faces of the little children, who made up Belleville's portion of the Cheerio Club lit up as they beheld Mr. Cheerio himself in person. In addressing the audience, Mr. Copeland asked them to remember, that behind the Karnival there was a great purpose, and behind that purpose unselfish thoughtfulness, and cheerful assistance of time and money by Kiwanians. The Mr. Cheerio of the Karnival is raising funds for charitable purposes and Mr. Copeland asked all to co-operate.

The Style Show and vaudeville entertainment then began and after the show a dance was held on the Armouries main floor with the Commodores providing music for the dance. During the rest of the evening Mr. Cheerio strolled about among the booths and was greeted many a little Cheerio Club member, whose club button was a conspicuous part of his costume.

Vaudeville Popular

Vaudeville at the Kiwanis Karnival last evening was very popular. The audience welcomed Jimmie "Slim" Burgess as master of ceremonies and Burgess introduced a any number of new gags and chuckle-makers, which kept the crowd merry at the style show and dance after he did some clever Amos and Andyizing before the Karnival manager, whose tricks was balancing a flaming cone of paper on his nose. The Commodores Dance Orchestra rendered some clever work in dancing and vaudeville selections and a duet with violinist and accordion player were especially well rendered.

Based on Study

The report of the Commission is based upon a most comprehensive study of the transportation difficulties. In the prosecution of its investigations the Commission travelled from coast to coast over the greater part of the railway mileage of our two great railways. It had had the advantage of many conferences with the leading railway officials of the Dominion, and of the railway unions, and has had in close consultation with the Canadian Railway Board of Investment. At the various provincial capitals and at many important centres, public hearings were held at which representations from municipal and other transportation organizations as well as private individuals were invited to present their views.

The public may therefore, be assured that the Commission has failed to obtain first hand and complete information upon the subject matter of the inquiry.

"Following the recommendations of the commission the government will invite parliament to pass legislation which will ensure:

(A) The physical integrity of the Canadian National Railway System and its complete freedom from political interference and competition;

(B) The termination of the era of financial irresponsibility on the part of the management of the Canadian National Railways, which should make possible the initiation of measures which will at once relieve the railway of its present financial burdens, while preserving and increasing the efficiency of its services to the country as a whole.

(C) The termination of the era of expensive and unprofitable competition between the Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway by the provision in a plan of co-operation designed to avoid unnecessary and wasteful duplication of service."

The Prime Minister expressed confidence that "the measures taken to preserve the integrity of the Canadian National Railway System and to relieve such railway of the heavy drain upon its national exchequer, will receive the support of all sections of the Canadian people.

The Government has been fortunate in securing as members of this commission, gentlemen of such standing, ability, judgment, disinterestedness and capacity have undertaken the duties involved in the report to which their signatures are appended, and the people of the Government I wish to make public a grateful acknowledgement of this service.

W. E. Tummon, M. P. Guest Speaker at Kiwanis Luncheon

"The oceans of the world are the commercial highways of the world and the development of the St. Lawrence Waterway would be a distinct advantage to the interior of the empire and foreign trade," said W. E. Tummon, M.P., speaking at the Kiwanis luncheon on Tuesday. Clearly and concisely he explained, the advantages that would be obtained from this deepening but explained that although the Canadian Parliament would not ratify the agreement every part until it had been dealt with in the United States Senate.

The speaker was introduced by the president of the club A. B. Collins, K.C., and a Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by George O. Tice. The speakers were all situated over the progress made in the survey preparations and expected the entertainment afforded to the patrons this year would bring in sufficient revenue to carry out the several schemes now before the Club. Gerald Young, retiring president of the Fort Arthur Club was in attendance and welcomed by the members.

By the use of a large map the speaker showed the route taken by the ocean going steamers and packet boats and explained in detail, what would be done if the project went through. A 27 foot channel from Montreal to the head of the Lakes would be dredged and the 14 foot canals between Prescott and Montreal would be simultaneously deepened. This would proceed from the head of the lakes with locks alignment to Montreal, while boats coming from the continent could proceed to the centre of Canada without unloading. "An age of extreme close competition is one thing, that makes the present," said the speaker. "A large portion of the commerce of Canada lies between Quebec and the head of the lakes and as Canada is the fifth trading nation in the world, it can easily be seen the advantages, that would be derived with the trade lanes from England to the head of the lakes. Ships would be able to make one voyage in the season instead of three months of the year for navigation and with the deepening it would be possible to move freight and passengers from Montreal to the lakes in one day. This is a direct relationship to Imperial and Empire trade and this is the reason why it is the chief recent economic conference.

INTENTION OF PARLIAMENT

(B) The termination of the era of financial irresponsibility on the part of the management of the Canadian National Railways, which should make possible the initiation of measures which will at once relieve the railway of its present financial burdens, while preserving and increasing the efficiency of its services to the country as a whole.

(C) The termination of the era of expensive and unprofitable competition between the Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway by the provision in a plan of co-operation designed to avoid unnecessary and wasteful duplication of service."

The Prime Minister expressed confidence that "the measures taken to preserve the integrity of the Canadian National Railway System and to relieve such railway of the heavy drain upon its national exchequer, will receive the support of all sections of the Canadian people.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.— (By the Canadian Press)— Prime Minister R. B. Bennett tabled in the House of Statement today on the report of the Royal Commission on Transportation Commission.

The report of the Royal Commission on Railways and Transportation in Canada yesterday presented to the House.

This report will be tabled in Parliament today, and it is the intention of the Government to submit legislation at this session with effect to those recommendations of the Commission which it is considered in the public interest that they should be adopted.

There is now widespread anxiety concerning the railway situation, largely owing to misconceptions regarding the report, which have become the property of Government and decided to publish immediately a summary of the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report, together with a statement of the facts in respect thereto.

The Government has been fortunate in securing as members of this commission, gentlemen of such standing, ability, judgment, disinterestedness and capacity have undertaken the duties involved in the report to which their signatures are appended, and the people of the Government I wish to make public a grateful acknowledgement of this service.

Based on Study

The report of the Commission is based upon a most comprehensive study of the transportation difficulties. In the prosecution of its investigations the Commission travelled from coast to coast over the greater part of the railway mileage of our two great railways. It had had the advantage of many conferences with the leading railway officials of the Dominion, and of the railway unions, and has had in close consultation with the Canadian Railway Board of Investment. At the various provincial capitals and at many important centres, public hearings were held at which representations from municipal and other transportation organizations as well as private individuals were invited to present their views.

The public may therefore, be assured that the Commission has failed to obtain first hand and complete information upon the subject matter of the inquiry.

"Following the recommendations of the commission the government will invite parliament to pass legislation which will ensure:

(A) The physical integrity of the Canadian National Railway System and its complete freedom from political interference and competition;

(B) The termination of the era of financial irresponsibility on the part of the management of the Canadian National Railways, which should make possible the initiation of measures which will at once relieve the railway of its present financial burdens, while preserving and increasing the efficiency of its services to the country as a whole.

(C) The termination of the era of expensive and unprofitable competition between the Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway by the provision in a plan of co-operation designed to avoid unnecessary and wasteful duplication of service.

Situation Grave

"The Canadian railway situation is a grave one. It is not the desire of this government to apportion responsibility or blame for that situation, which have unquestionably aggravated an always difficult problem. It is, however, the intention of the government to give the transportation aspect of this question early opportunity to adequately discharge the functions for which it was created. And I believe, when we shall have secured the necessary measure of reorganization in the National system and real and effective co-operation between the National and private systems, that Canadian railway transportation will be upon that basis of fair and profitable competition which is so vital to the welfare of this country.

"I am confident that when parliament takes to preserve the integrity of the Canadian National Railway system and to relieve Canada from the heavy drain upon its national exchequer, will receive the unqualified support of the Canadian people."

My goodness it seems to think this is a restorant or a hotel or something where he caswander in and out as free as he likes, and I'm sick of always saying, And to add insult to injury, he hasn't even got his hair cut.

Well O' pop, yeah, that's not my fault. I went to get it cut all rite I said.

And quite rite, too, pop said, and I said, Why Willyum; if I was a lady in a hurry in a barber shop I'd certery expect a small boy to be a gentleman and allow me to go first,

And if I was a small boy in a barber shop I'd expect a lady to act like a gruleeman and wait her own turn, pop said.

And they kept on argreving about it and forgot all about me being late for supper, and I sat down and ate feeling lucky.

STAND STRAIN OF FAST FOR CONSIDERABLE TIME

Bombay, India, Sept. 21 (AP) — Mahatma Gandhi informed the government today today more need be no undue haste or anxiety to save his life since he has begun the second 'the strain of his death fast for some time.

"Since there appears to be a misunderstanding as to the purpose of my fast," he said, "I repeat that it is aimed at a separate electorate in any shape or form for the depressed classes.

"As soon as that threat is removed action and for all my fast will end. I should exhibit my agreement on the basis of a joint electorate, which may be arrived at by common leaders of the caste Hindus and of the depressed classes, provided it is accepted by mass meetings of all Hindus."

Mass Suicide Pact is Broken Up by Police but 2 of Crowd Make Plunge

Bodies Recovered From Canal Shortly After Attempt

6 IN CUSTODY

Believed to be Finale of a Long Drinking Brawl

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—(By the Canadian Press)—Two men are dead, suicides and six others, all unemployed ex-servicemen, in police custody finale to a drinking brawl and what authorities believe to have been a planned mass suicide attempt.

Daniel McLean, 36, who served overseas with a Canadian Battalion and who was a member of the Black Watch, Imperials, were the victims. Both were drowned in the Rideau Canal, near Parliament Hill, when they plunged 30 feet into 10-feet of water last night.

Police staged a terrific battle to prevent bribers of the alleged suicide party from hurling themselves into the murky waters of the canal, and it was not until heavy reinforcements arrived that the men were subdued and taken into custody.

Gathering on the banks of the canal during the evening, the men had been well supplied with liquor. All were intoxicated, police state, and it is believed they had entered into the plan of mass suicide, before leaving the way by plunging into the canal, followed as rescuers, approached, by Clark.

Canal Locks Drained

Before the bodies could be recovered, the canal locks had to be drained and firemen brought from a central station made their way by the locks on foot to the dead.

It was Constable Fred Syms, of the city police department and two Montrealers, F. W. Maingay and M. H. Houldcut, visiting the capital, who prevented a heavier death toll. Attracted by cries of help from the locks, coming from McLean, Officer Syms and the visitors were first on the scene. As Syms crossed the lock gate, Clark plunged to his death and a third man was preparing to make a fatal dive, when the battled away from the banks by the constable. With these, Syms said, he would shoot, Syms and his aides held off the other men until police reinforcements arrived.

Today, the six, taken into custody will be arraigned in police court on charges of drunkenness and vagrancy. They are: David Williams 32, who claims to be the holder of a distinguished conduct medal and military medal for services overseas; John Walker 34, Arthur Place, John Dale, J. McDonald and another man whose identity had not been established early today.

Unaware of Incident.

Despite the fact that the scene of the double drowning and battle between police and unemployed was only a stone's throw from the centre of the city, Hundreds crossed the canal locks on the Queen side of Wellington Street unaware of the dramatic happenings being enacted nearby.

When the firemen arrived at the scene, the water was being drained from the canal. A ladder was lowered, and the firemen made their way down and waded waist-deep across the 75' shaped bottom of the lock, and found McLean's body just where it had plunged in. It was hauled up the ladder and placed on a stretcher. There appeared to be a spark of life and the body was rushed to hospital. Police officers accompanied the body to the hospital, and an ronte applied artificial respiration, but all their efforts proved to no avail.

A further search of the lock bottom lead to the discovery of Cleetary Clark. Close by the lower gate, where it apparently had been carried by the water being drained through the open locks, his body was brought up to the top of the lock by the firemen.

FINANCIALLY UNDER HEEL

Hon. H. H. Stevens Speaks for Candidate in By-election

Sudbury, Sept. 21 (CP)— The policy of the Mackenzie King administration has placed Canada financially under the heel of the United States," Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, told a meeting held here last night in the interests of the Conservative candidate in the forthcoming Federal by-election in South Nipissing. Mr. Stevens declared an adverse balance of trade within the United States and borrowing of some four billion dollars in that country, the Canadian Government and Canadians had been practically turned over to the United States bankers, he declared.

He told of the refusal of United States financial houses to continue this lending. The answer had been an appeal to the people of Canada and the success of Canada's internal loans had been a testimonial to the faith of the people in their country and its administration Mr. Stevens declared.

Mr. Stevens had been diverted to discussion of financial matters by pamphlets, distributed at the doorways to the hall in which the meeting was held, describing the drop in commodity prices in the last six years the increase in the nations' debt under various Conservative administrations, and blaming the present administration for much of the country's difficulties.

The Minister prophesied early ratification of the Imperial Conference agreements and expressed confidence that the people of this agricultural riding would feel the benefit of them.

The next big meeting in support of Mr. Bradley will be held in Clinton, September 30 with Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, the chief speaker.

International Labor Seeks 40 Hour Week to End Idleness

Geneva, Sept. 21 (AP) — A special session of the governing body of the International Labor Office was convened here today to consider a proposal for a special meeting of the International Labor Conference to discuss a reduction of working hours in industry.

Today's extraordinary meeting, summoned at the request of Italy, is a move to reduce unemployment by "spreading out" available employment among the greater number of workers. Italy suggests that working hours be reduced by international agreement to a maximum of forty hours a week.

The United States government, the American Federation of Labor, and authoritative spokesmen of American capital recently endorsed a move to reduce the working week to five days.

The proposal which the governing body is considering is that a special International Labor Conference be held "in the next few months" before the crisis becomes worse and before the World Economic Conference has proceeded to draw up proposals which could be put into immediate operation as regards hours of work.

The five-day week has been adopted in the United States by a number of firms. The Italian government suggests the proposed reduction of working hours be permanent.

Anglican Bishop of London Calls for Reunited World Church

One Whole Catholic Church, Should be Aim of All

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—A call for a reunited world church, taking in all Christendom, was sounded last night by the Anglican Bishop of London, speaking at a gathering of thousands of Methodist representatives who earlier in the day had effected the union of the three branches of their church in Great Britain.

"I hope I shall live to see another great gathering in Albert Hall (where the meeting took place) when, without any reabsorption of one with the other, a great reunited church, with the fire of the Wesleys, is combined with the faith and order of the historic church, shall advance with new power and conviction to convert the world," said the Bishop of London, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram.

"And why confine this reunited church to Wesleyans and the Church of England, why should not the Baptists, Presbyterians, Greeks, old Catholics and so last a reformed Roman Catholic Church, all join with the molten glory of one whole Catholic church throughout the world?"

LIBERALS MAY LEAVE GOV'T OVER THE TAX

Expect Discussion When Pact Comes to be Ratified

MAKE CLEAR STAND

Taxation of Staple Foods Always Opposed by Liberals

North Cardigan, Wales, Sept. 21—(CP Cable)—Liberal free trade members of the Government are apparently going to attack wholeheartedly the pending legislation to implement the agreements reached at the Imperial Economic Conference.

"The Ottawa proposals", declared Isaac Foot, Liberal minister of mines, in a speech in the by-election campaign here, Tuesday evening, "represent a partisan—not a national—policy. In our opinion they are contrary to the permanent interests of the nation and thus we are bound to oppose them. Mr. Foot said that "at the right time" Sir Herbert Samuel, Home Secretary and leader of the Liberals in the National Government, would make a decision.

"We are anxious to secure national unity," Mr. Foot continued. "Our sternest opposal, however, would not expect us to acquiesce in what we believe to be wrong. We came to the Government Liberal free-traders, and Liberal free traders we remain."

The Liberal manifesto at the time of the last election, Mr. Foot said, made the position of the Liberals clear. "We said we felt bound to declare our view that the emergency measures might be found necessary to deal with the then existing situation, freedom of trade is the only permanent basis for our economic prosperity and the power of the Empire, and the world.

Taxation Always Opposed

"Taxation of staple foods has always been opposed by the Liberal party. Abandonment of the free-trade policy by Great Britain permanently would aggravate the division between nations. We were never committed to complete and permanent reversal of the fiscal system.

"If the Ottawa proposals become law they would relegate from the powers of Parliament and deprive us of our budgetary independence. This is the end of free economic conference," Mr. Foot concluded. "Liberal free traders demand the right to the only permanent basis for our economic prosperity and the power of the Empire, and the world.

LABRASH NINE ARE DEFEATED

Airmen Just Striking Stride When Season Closes

TRENTON, Sept. 21.—(Special)—The Labrash team went down to their first defeat at the hands of the Air force here last night, by a score of 17 to two. The airmen have improved a great deal since the beginning of the season, due to the fact, that they have secured several new players from the air bases in the west. Gibb was in the box for the flyers and was the star of the game having the Labrash men swinging wildly. The game started off by being a real contest. The score in the fourth being two all. Coming up in the fifth the airmen started to score and were not stopped until they had secured 13 runs off Veale who was on the mound for the Labrash team. Lough Reeves and Broadbent all getting homers. The entire Service Station Nine were away off their usual game and the airmen were right on the job in the fifth inning on the fact Veale pitching for the Service Station team failed to have anything starting and was out all over the lot by the airmen. Geo. Labrash in getting his team together failed to take into consideration, that he might need an extra pitcher in time of a pinch. Geo. is now lamenting the fact, that he sold his Pet Coyote to finance his ball team and then before them drop a game by such a large score. Rumor has it that he will have another Pet Moreal, where he will attempt to deal the team for the Coyote.

Lineup:—

WORKED ALL DAY WITH BROKEN ANKLE

Trenton, Sept. 21 (Special)—Mr. Nick Shoniker of the Canada Crescent staff, who broke his right ankle last week, is recovering as well as possible to date. Mr. Shoniker has been employed as a machine operator, manufacturing the cable from a train when he slipped and fell catching his foot in the slot at the top of the train, breaking his right ankle. He was unaware of the fact at the time other than that the ankle pained considerably and worked on through the day, the leg by night was swollen from the knee down. On going to Dr. Johnston for treatment it was discovered that the ankle was broken, Dr. Johnston said that he had never known of a case where a man had a broken leg and continued to work on it. Due to the fact that the leg was the set at once the break will be much more painful in mending.

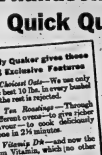
His total for the two weeks was 90, ranging from 18 inches in length and a weight of three pounds to eight inches.

NOTED HANGMAN CUTS HIS THROAT

John Ellis Morose And Brooding Ends His Life



London, Sept. 21—(AP)—John Ellis, the world's most notorious hangman, ended eight years of brooding retirement yesterday. He was found dead, his throat slashed and a razor by his side.

On Jan. 8, 1923, after 23 years at his sinister task, Ellis bore the humiliation of being the hangman who has sent more condemned murderers to their deaths than any executioner in history. On the same day he put to death the notorious Mrs. Edith Thompson, and young Frederick Bywaters, was condemned to death for the murder of the woman's husband.

Years before Ellis had ostracized himself from society. His worry increased as his reputation became public. The hanging of Mrs. Thompson, who had to be dragged to the scaffold, was too much for him.

His retired as public hangman in the following year and attempted to commit suicide but recovered. But the horror remained as the years went on and the end was yesterday.

THE WORM TURNS

The monotony of existence which follows a prolonged fight against poverty is depicted in striking words by the Boston Transcript. "Most of us have drawn up our belts another hole and cut our lunch allowance in two for a spell of weeks, but there comes a time when, if we are blessed with a spark of imagination, we crack under the strain of monotonous existence. A brainstorm sweeps away all our good resolutions, the self-denying ordinance is overborne we are almost, ready to play ducks and drakes with our insurance premiums and payments to the co-operative bank, and like Pippa, give ourselves a holiday. It is worth all it costs, sometimes, to waste the price of a plain nourishing meal on a red necktie or the price of a much-coveted book on a dinner on a boiled lobster with all the fixings."

What the Transcript says seems to be proven by the signs of moderate recovery which are beginning to appear. The psychological side of the depression is wearing itself out. What is true of war is true of depression. There was a time when a comedy on the war was out of place, the people would not endure it because the thought was too painful. But there is now no more a day when the caricatures and war comedies have been delighting the thousands of moving picture enthusiasts. So with depression. Depression has its sad side and seems a thing about which one cannot laugh or even smile knowing as one does that it has had a disastrous effect upon the minds and bodies of many folk. And yet there are signs that this seemingly impossible thing is taking place. In a vaudeville program at a Toronto theatre on Friday nights a sop-one of the most popular of the artists cracked jokes about the depression and the large crowd smiled, even laughed aloud. That is evidence that the cloud is lifting from the minds of people. When a vaudeville artist can gain a laugh at the expense of depression, depression has undoubtedly become outworn. The worm turns, it has turned.

Banking officials state that there are signs of improving sentiment, which also proves what the vaudeville artist has been proving—that the turn is at hand.

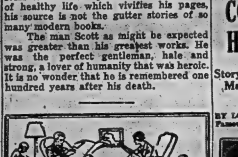
MAN UNPREPARERED

Sir Alfred Ewing, noted British Scientist, states that man was obliged unprepared for so great a bounty as he has received from physical science. "In the slow evolution of morals he is still unfit for the tremendous responsibility it entails. The command of nature has been put into his hands before he knows how to command himself." Supposing there was a fair adjustment of labor and of the fruits, employment and wages, how he asks would man spend the leisure he has won by handing over mental and bodily drudgery to untiring mechanical slave. "Dare he hope for such spiritual betterment as will qualify him to use it well? God grant it may not be for that end and attain it. It is only by seeking he will find." Such words should make men think for themselves and others.

THE CONSPICUOUS SIGN

St. Paul Pioneer Press makes a determined attack on the billboard on two counts, its marring of the landscape and destruction of the natural beauty of roadside scenery, and the distraction of the driver of an automobile by reason of the billboard's garishness which may lead to accidents. Traffic signs are lost in a welter of commercial signs. In the interest of safety says the Pioneer Press the most conspicuous signs should be those used by the highway department to direct traffic.

SIR WALTER



One hundred years ago today Sir Walter Scott, Wizard of the North, died. The story of his heroic fight against debt with his voluminous output of the greatest romances ever written, his broken health which sent him abroad and his return to die in the Scotland he loved, has become a saga which Scottish and other lovers of the novelist bard will never permit to be forgotten.

Scotland has been peculiarly blessed in producing two of the greatest creative figures the world has known, Scott and Burns. All that is noble in the Scottish character is enshrined in the works of these two men born within a short time of one another. Burns being the elder by a few years. Scott was the heir of all the ages of Scottish history as the long train of romances which he wrote reveal to the most casual reader. A glorious company of characters walk the stage which he set forth—rich human beings the study of whom makes life more interesting for us even today. Burns portrayed a side of life which with that of Scott gives a fine picture of Scottish character with its value to the rest of the world.

The importance of nationalism is shown in these men. It is worth while to have created such lights of humanity as Burns and Scott.

Scott is the best antidote to the sex stuff in fiction today. It is the broad sweep of healthy life which vivifies his pages, his source is not the gutter stories of so many modern books.

The man Scott as might be expected was greater than his greatest works. He was the perfect gentleman, hale and strong, a lover of humanity that was heroic. It is no wonder that he is remembered one hundred years after his death.

A TORONTO BUSINESS WOMAN saw an opportunity and grasped it — and no very long ago. She was one of the first to see the opportunity for face beautifiers, lotions and creams and sich like, a business which has in a few years been refined an amazing volume measured in millions of dollars, giving employment to many thousands of people and dividends to many shareholders. This Toronto Big Business Girl, saw a vision of great possibilities for face creams and such like, and started to market some from her own recipes. Success was instant in Canada and it was not long until she invaded New York City and dared the great Business Octupus there to down her. She won out on the Big Time just as she did in the sticks and now has a business which is world wide. The following excerpts from a letter sent out from the Toronto office of her company is interesting, and illuminative of the growth of her business, besides being optimistic and prophetic of better business coming. Here Tis:

"We feel very cheerful this month and cannot help but tell our good friends all over the country about it. During the last sixty days our business in Canada increased 8 per cent, in England 12 per cent, and South America with an increase of 5 per cent, considering conditions, has been exceptionally good. Our friends in Mexico did a little more. In the Far East in China and Japan we broke even, while india showed a 12 per cent increase.

"In France, as you may say, we showed a decrease of about 10 per cent, as conditions there — owing to no one travelling, are very bad. Strange to say — in Germany where they were in for more trouble than any one spot in the world, they showed a 2 per cent increase. In the United States we always show a large increase, but this was principally due to anticipated orders and until September we cannot exactly determine how the figures will work out, but we have every reasonances it looks like a nice increase for this summer over last summer.

"While these increases coming in from all over the world and the optimistic letters we receive from our thousands of correspondents, we have commenced to believe that the world is really taking a change for the better, and that we are now on the threshold of another period of prosperity.

Last week I had luncheon with one of the prominent bankers of this city and he told me that in a few years there would be many millionaires, this writer would not be the same ones who existed before. These new ones will be the men who have courage and are strong enough to face the facts, and have faith in the real future of this great country."

KIWANIS KARNIVAL again ushers in the fall fashions with its style shows at which fall and winter gowns, coats, hats, furs and costume jewelry are displayed and young ladies who are "perfect 36's" or whatever it is that makes clothes look like a million dollars on them, Kiwanis always give a good show, a bit of excitement, a thrill or two, and the opportunity of meeting in good fellowship friends from far and near have made glad as the result of Kiwanis philanthropy. Basically is this true of boys who have not had a fair start in life, the breaks have been against them, perhaps a father who has been on the wrong side of the law—in any event they are badly in need of a Big Brother—Kiwanis steps in and gives that boy a chance, a fair start, and most of them make good. That is typical glimpse of Kiwanis philanthropy, there are other phases, all worth while. Hence no supposedly intelligent person in Canada can be no thought of extravagance for the money spent there will help some boy to a better start in life, some girl to avoid pitfalls, some down but not out father to take heart again and resume the battle of life, or bring cheer to some sick person—any of the many ways in which Kiwanis works to make laughs wipe away all tears and hate be buried under a mountain of friendship. Let's all go, early and often.

YELLOW FEVER CONQUEST IS HEROIC SAGA

Story Has Been Told Many Times But Bears Repeating

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

The story of Yellow Fever has been told many times, but like a fairy story it bears repeating. It remains one of the most dramatic tales of heroism in the history of medicine. It also remains a glorious page in the history of high scientific achievement.

The credit belongs to the United States army and specifically the Yellow Fever Commission, which set out to prove that many old notions about the disease were false, especially the one which claimed that yellow fever is transmitted from one person to the other by means of infected clothing.

On this hypothesis Fever Commission were Dr. Walter Reed, Dr. Carroll, Dr. James Lazear and Sergeant. That famous hospital in Washington, D.C., Walter Reed, which has done and is still doing so much by way of rehabilitation for ex-soldiers of the World War, is named after the gentleman who headed the commission.

What these men set out to do in 1900 was to establish in a house in the Panama Canal Zone and they built it in such a way that fresh air and sunshine were not excluded, but the entrance to the house was made impossible. In this experimental house they placed bodies and clothes of these patients, blankets and the like which had previously been in direct contact with patients suffering from yellow fever.

It must be added here that, up to this time, all port authorities in all countries had always taken the greatest pains to fumigate all clothing coming to their ports from areas where this great disease occurs existed. The commission held, however, that yellow fever was not transmitted in any such manner.

Now then, after the experimental house had been built and the beds with alleged "infected" materials installed, Dr. R. P. Cook and two private soldiers entered the building and remained there for a period of twenty days, day and night. Not only did they not leave the building at all during that time but each night of the twenty they unpacked the bags, opened the sheets and blankets, handled them as much as possible, left them about the room, and when on the morning they packed them all back in the bags again.

Surely this was a severe test and theoretically, any of them should have had about yellow fever. But they believed the theory was all wrong and in fact, at the end both of the three brave men who lived in the building did not become contracted the disease!

Later on the yellow commission—after suggestions in 1881 by Finlay of Havana, and the work of Ross on malaria—found a definite cause and proved beyond doubt that the way yellow fever is transmitted is not by mere "fomites" or infected clothing but through the mosquito!

Not all mosquitoes possess this ability—if such it should be called. The variety that is culprit is called "stegomyia fasciata". When this insect bites a patient with his disease the germs develop inside the body of the mosquito and, after twelve days, should it bite a healthy person it will transmit the disease to him.

It has been claimed and with justice, that but for the fundamental the Yellow Fever Commission the Panama Canal could never have been built. Furthermore, Major Gorgas later on applied the sanitary measures in Havana, based on the discovery of the American Commission, and thus effectively stamped out yellow fever from that region.

Incidentally, it may be added that the mosquito which transmits the malaria parasite is not of the same species as the yellow fever mosquito. The former is of the genus "anopheles". Ordinary house mosquitoes belong to the species "culex".

RESPIRATION SAVES LIFE OF VICTIM

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)— Morris Quinan, 22, was recovering from effects of infantile paralysis which deprived him of the power of breathing.

His chest muscles paralyzed, doctors placed him in a metal respirator. The machine forced him to breath by alternately compressing his chest by compressed air and expanding it by vacuum. He said he felt pretty well yesterday.

Letters to the Editor

INDIAN TRADITIONS
Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

Your reporter to Mr. Wallace Robb's most beautiful letter, re the advisability of Belleville and the Bay of Quinte district obtaining a competent writer of the beautiful Indian traditions of this district to advertise to tourists the wonderful historical grandeur of it in pamphlet form to hand to them should at once stir us to action.

When we lost Mr. Robb through his appointment to Ottawa's safety in this and other respects and his value as a citizen we lost more than we ever realized. We have also lost him because we had not the eminence and high ideals to understand him. We need him right now and need him badly to give class and distinction to the most wonderful Bay of Quinte district with its incomparable historic Indian legends. Now he gives us the true meaning of the former Indian name of our beautiful river with its high, rocky banks, the waters of which meeting the waves of our beautiful bay caused the Indian to call it the Sago-baska River.

Throughout the summer, and breadth of our bay we have what the noble red man bequeathed us in beautiful Indian names and legends. Starting at Trenton in the Iroquois (Six-guay) trail leading north. Here the Sago-baska River, then three miles further down Massassaga Point, then behind it a group of islands, Mohawk Chasbe and Grave island where the Indians buried their dead. West, Deseronto, the seat of the Mohawk tribe. Do you remember their great chief Oronokota and his beautiful daughter, tall and lithe and willowy and graceful and dignified, fit to grace a King's court? A real queen because made so by nature coupled by education, a real Princess, her name so beautiful so wonderful, her love story up the reach we come to Glenora Lake and Bay, never heard of the sad story could be written about it. If not its name, according to legend, from the fact that an English officer betrayed a beautiful Indian maiden there and when he realized the result of his betrayal he returned to England promising her a quick return, but he never returned and the heart of poor Indian maiden realized this and threw herself over the same rocky cliff into the deep ravine to end her suffering. The officer had grown fond of the beautiful Indian girl Inish name of Nora, hence the name of Queen's Avenue, and so on.

Maybe but Mr. Robb could write all this up and do it justice, let us ask him to do it for us, also let us ask him to write a description of him as a citizen by inviting him to speak to the boys in city from which he has so long been a citizen. I know that the boys must long at times for his native heath; such is only natural, therefore I for one say Wallace come back! We need you and need you badly and we acknowledge our ingratitude and loss when we let you go.

His article in the Ontario Intelligencer of August 30th is certainly a classic of the first water, but alas, I fear only few read it—because on the same page in heavy type as a heading was one about Belleville girls in the Olympics and that is what would, no doubt, catch most of the rising generation and also I fear the majority of the older generation, in this age of materialistic age we are looking for the lighter reading instead of articles like Mr. Robb's which help to develop and strengthen our spiritual body and by so doing also increase our temporal prosperity.

He suggests that a brass plate be put on either end of the bridge with its name. I would suggest a beautiful electric sign across the middle of the bridge with the name Kanakaska Bridge in large letters illuminated to be seen and read at quite a distance. This may cost a hundred or two perhaps three, but it would be worth many thousands to Belleville and the bay district. To say the least its advertising value would be estimated from a purely monetary standpoint but even from that it would be small.

Oh, if we citizens of Belleville, and Belleville would only only wake to the fact that right here we have been gifted by old mother nature with natural advantages, including a mineral spring second to none that if handled by us in even a half-hearted way would soon increase our town by thousands and give us one of the finest summer resorts on the continent on our island with a beautiful Indian name attached to it and the grand old historic county of Prince Edward, with its history and Hastings County to the north with its wonderful scenery and wonderful bay shore, indeed would the whole bay district be away up in the clouds and a mecca not only for tourists but for thousands of summer visitors. I would like to continue longer, Mr. Editor, enlarging on the wonders of this district but that would not receive a single line of the paper. Let us ask Mr. Robb to give us a write-up for distribution by pamphlet or otherwise and let us extend to him a pressing invitation to come back to the land of his nativity, assuring him of our heartiest appreciation of what he has already so ably done for us in the past, that he may be as my J. as a citizen from birth, feel that we have not done one darned thing to take advantage of what nature bountifully has endowed us with and we have not had sufficient sentiment or sense or foresight to build on her rock foundation a super-structure of monumental and majestic grandeur second to none in the twilight have done.

Let us soon do so.

Jack Dempsy punch like real redblooded Canadians.

Yours,

Cuyler's Triple in Seventh Wins Pennant for Cubs in National

Base Loaded at Time And Score Was Tied

Chicago, Sept. 22—One sweep of Kiki Cuyler's lusty war club clinched the National League pennant for Chicago's pushing Cubs today and made his old Pittsburgh mates also rana.

"At bat in the seventh inning of a torrid game, the bases loaded and one out, Kiki erased what little remained of the championship hopes of the club that once held him down the river," by smashing out a long triple to accept the winning margin 8 to 2. The blow, crashing off one of Steve Swetonic's slants, tumbled the Pirates out of the championship race definitely.

Cuyler's "average ace" was as dramatic to a rooting capacity crowd of 49,000 as his timely hit. The score was tied two all when the big Cub seventh opened with a single by Bill Jurges.

Guy Bush, one of the Buccaneers over the route with eight hits, held down a perfect scoreless burst and was safe as Suhr popped wildly to catch Jurges at second. Billy Herman drove out both runners with another perfect bunt and the Pirate ended in a huddle. It was decided to walk English to load the bases and make the opportunity for a set up double play.

Swetonic put everything behind his every pitch, and the ex-Cub recruit got three balls and two strikes. With a mighty heave, Swetonic fired. Cuyler met it squarely and the ball sizzled in a line drive over third base to the extreme left corner of left field. The blow cleared the bases and it was all over with Bush holding the Runs to a harmless single by Traynor in the eighth with one out.

A Happy Crowd

It was a dazed and happy crowd of Cubs that frolicked about the field after the game had prized pennant and a world series chance against the New York Yankees in their pockets.

Billy Herman won the race to the club house but nothing much was said until Manager Grimm guided his head through the door. He was pounced on immediately by his happy mates.

"Orvay, orvay, you boys," he choked with tears in his eyes. That's all he could say.

President William Veeck joined the crowd, shaking hands with each player and then turned to Grimm: "Thanks, manager. But we knew we could do it."

Nol, a word was mentioned about the world series or the Yankees. Grimm dismissed most of his tired regulars for the second game of the double header and there was a big rush toward the ice cream stand.

"I'm glad that job's over," Grimm reflected as he took his shower. "We're played pretty hard and can stand some rest."

First to Score

The Cubs were first to score in yesterday's deciding game that Kiki Cuyler swiped.

Herman slammed the first pitched ball for a single to start the battle, stole second and scored on Stephenson's single. Another run was added in the third. With one out, Cuyler doubled to left centre, advanced to third on a hit and run play as Bartle rolled to Suhr and scored on a passed ball by Catcher Earl Grace. Pittsburgh tied it up in the fourth with singles by Suhr, Vaughan and Grace and a walk to Peel. Vaughan drove in Suhr with a short fly to right. Piet scoring on Grace's hit. Jans, close plays and spectacular fielding plays featured the game until Mr. Cuyler stepped into the picture and it was all over.

Presenting a patched up battle front, the new National League champions were given a 6 to 5 beating in the second game, most of which was played in the rain. Heinie Meine held the Cubs to three hits. The crowd, however, stuck to the finish.

ADVANCE SALE IS NOT HEAVY

Still Counting on a Sell Out For The Series

New York, Sept. 21 — The New York Yankees are preparing to welcome the Chicago Cubs in the opening game of the World Series next Wednesday with a barrage of base hits and perhaps the greatest crowd in the 29-year-old history of baseball's fall classic.

They may fall of both their objectives but they'll be in there trying. Advance sales have been lighter so far than in many previous years but the Yankee management is counting upon a capacity turn-out for the opening game. Should every one of the 69,000-odd seats be filled, a new high record for attendance at a single game automatically would be shattered.

Should the series go the full limit of seven games, all records for attendance and receipts almost are certainly would go by the boards. With the Yankee Stadium seating almost 70,000 and Wrigley Field accommodating more than 50,000, an aggregate of close to 400,000 would not be out of reach. Far beyond the record of 329,051 established by the Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals in 1926, and receipts, under those circumstances should be materially greater than the record $1,27,864 the Yankees and Cardinals drew the same year.

Knocks and Boosts

All Canada is still paying homage to Rene "Silent Sandy" Somerville of London who annexed the United States amateur golf championship at Five Farms, Md., last Saturday. Somerville accomplished what was almost thought an impossibility—treating the amateur golf title of United States from them. It has been 11 long years since that feat was previously accomplished and outside golfers had almost come to the time when they took it for granted that the title would stay in Yankee-land. Somerville has long had his eye on the American amateur title and twice finished when he met and played his American rival, Goodman, throughout.

When Mickey Walker climbs through the ropes to do battle with Max Schmeling, ex-heavyweight champion, he will be spoiling his German opponent over 22 pounds. It is a matter of fact about the only thing that Walker has over the German is experience and maybe a little ring generalship. On the other hand will those two assets overbalance youth, clean living and hard, straight punching? According to information handed from Walk-r's training camp the "Toy Bulldog" will contain his attack on the German's mid-section. Schmeling has taken the long count twice in his varied boxing career, once after a sock in the jaw and the other time when he "retired" under a series of punishing head punches. He has always stood up under body punishment in the past, however, all in all we seem to think that Maxie is still the king of the heavyweights and will come out on the long end of Monday night's battle.

Bobby Samson just called into the editorial room to tell us that the Masked Marvel had posted $250.00 with Corcoran Samson offering his appearance in Belleville next Wedne-day evening. His opponent has not been announced as but, we might add here and now—"the marvel and his opponent are sure glutton for punishment." Especially following their recent appearance in Belleville. In all probability Fergi the Italian bedman, will be included on the next card here. Personally we hope, that Steve McDougal, the silent Scotchman, is the Marvel's opponent as Steve MacDougall already has a draw to his credit against the Marvel and Referee Jack Reid at the Belleville Fair he asked for a return bout as as to settle the question once and for all. Now that Red Lat Rouge has moved to Kingston for a few weeks maybe the Marvel and his manager feet safe in returning to Belleville. (?)

Tuesday evening the annual Kiwanis Karnival opened with a bang at the Armouries. This fall classic of amusement has become one of Belleville's much-looked for annual week of fun and frivolity. Its cause is an excellent one and the Kiwanians always give the patrons more entertainment for its than one<s> Tuesday night when Don Copeland, "Mr. Cheerio," officially opened the Karnival big kiddie took possession of the entire Armouries. A "Miss" Progress, that master-of-ceremonies par excellence is back in town again and has complete charge of all the stage performances at the Armouries this week. "Slim" can always pull the much needed "gag" at the opp-rtune time and thereby sometimes save the show. Plenty of high class vaudeville has been booked for the remainder of the week while some other Canadian celebrities will be here later in the week.

The following O.S.A.A. bulletin was announced from their headquarters yesterday. Intermediate B. North Bay-Sturgeon Falls game at Hunterville, Wednesday Sept. 21st, 3 p.m. Neutral umpires to be appointed by the O.R.A.A.

Milton at Scarborough, Wednesday Sept. 21st at 3 p.m. Umpires to be appointed by Mr. E. Irving of Queen Sound.

The O.R.A.A. bulletin published announced that the Belleville Victorias would meet the winner of North Bay and Barrie series here in Belleville on Saturday afternoon next. Of course if the Vics can be fortunate enough to squeeze out a bye for the next round they will naturally fall right into the Intermediate O.R.A.A. finals. (That would not be so hard to take either). In the meantime, however, the seventh local team is not helping the cause of Vics to any great extent although they are having perfectual workouts under the watchful eyes of Coach Chummy Grove and Manager B A. Fanning. In all probability Archie Campbell will be promoted to help the Victorias on the Vics play at home in either the semi-finals or finals.

What price speed? the world may ask, and "Gar." Wood would probably be in the best position to reply. Previous to the winning of the Harmsworth Trophy races early this month it was an open secret in Detroit that Wood's America X was much faster than Miss England III. and would turn back Kaye Don's challenge, but when Miss England met with mishaps in both races Wood was satisfied to take the verdicts without seeking more records.

It was different yesterday, when the grey fox of the Algonac semi hit his best racing over the St. Clair River waters in the fastest time the world has ever known, 124.91 statute miles an hour. Previously Miss England III. had held the record of over 119 miles an hour.

"Friends like that are worth keeping"

Helen and Tom were looking at the snapshots of their summer vacation.

"Here's a good one of the Wilsons," Helen said. "They are certainly a nice couple. It seems a shame to drift away from such good friends."

"Yes," Tom agreed, "friends like that are worth keeping. Why don't you and Jean Wilson call each other on Long Distance now and then?

It's an easy way to keep in touch and it really costs very little."

And so, at intervals during the winter, Helen and Jean will have their visits by telephone — keeping alive the pleasant companionship of the summer until another holiday brings them together again. Long Distance is quick, simple, inexpensive — a ready aid to friendship.

For 30 cents you can telephone about 100 miles by calling "station-to-station" after 8.30 p.m. local time. See list of rates in front of directory. (Evening rates begin at 7 p.m.)

GUY BUSH TO HURL 1ST GAME

Grimm Announces Selection for First Game of Series

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 21 — Chicago's Cubs today were "in", with title in the way of serious business to worry them until a week from today when they oppose the New York Yankees in the opening game of the World Series—and they intended to get a little fun out of their baseball.

As soon as Kiki Cuyler smashed one of Steve Swetonic's curves for a triple with the bases loaded in the seventh inning of the final game of yesterday's "crucial" doubleheader, the veteran regulars had earned a rest. They started taking it in the second game, and they don't have to go back to work until they have rested. Neither do they have to rest if they don't want to.

Manager Charlie Grimm almost went right back to work in the second game yesterday, although he had long planned to give Marvin Gudat a chance as soon as the National League title was won.

"Now that this battle is over," he said, "I could get a lot of fun out of this game. I won't rest long."

He has definitely announced only one item of his World Series plans —that Guy Bush will pitch the opening game in New York. There has been common gossip ever since it looked as though the Cubs would win the championship. His other pitching plans depended on the outcome of that first game.

Styles Prettier Than Ever is Opinion of Modes Displayed At Opening Fashion Show

Styles More Demure and Color Tones Much Duller

SIX MANNEQUINS

Show off Gowns, Furs, Millinery and Jewelery to Advantage

Disclosing for the quite evident delight of a large audience last evening a whole bag full of new tricks with feminine styles, Fashion in all its phases was presented at the Kiwanis Carnival and Style Revue, which featured garments by Wottlens, Limited, furs and hats by Woodrow and jewelry by Mc-Fee. As the multi-colored curtain made its first parade last evening the first fall models appeared on mannequins of charming and diverse in the display of the creations as the most practised professional models. And once again feminine Belleville was in the midst of the whirl of fashion fancy, that each year is the leading attraction at the Kiwanis entertainments.

In the stunning costumes presented by Wottens Limited, there was ample evidence of the new trends in the mode for fall, and although one says it every season, one could not help but remark: "Aren't the styles pretty this year?" Certainly they are more demure, if not actually modest, for afternoon, while the longer skirts played long sleeved and ultra-high necklines, while the lowest evening gown covered its decolletage with a dashing jacket. The importance of the silhouette it is in the upper part of the costume. Widened shoulder lines with wide manifold artifices to catch the eye are the highlights.

Duller Tones.

Fabrics for frocks, one noted, have adopted for variety duller tones. Rough crepes have made their appearance but the place of supremacy in winter materials for wool, in soft weaves and delightful shades, wool frocks have a prominent place in the limelight. Jersey and Wottan's showed some clever little adaptations of this new style.

Evening dresses follow similar lines in those of last year but gain new glory through cunning jackets and the use of metal trimmings to say nothing of the lavishness of white furnishings.

The popularity of knitted suits was evident and for evening wear the coats for this season have a new air of luxuriousness. Capes also of velvet or frocks attention is concentrated on the upper part. However one wraps had the most capricious as those of the dresses and the fur trimmings were gradually noteworthy.

The first model to appear was Miss Madeline Bell, who wore a fetching frock of black crepe with the neckline outlined over with simulated collar of pale green organdie, the bloused sleeves of which widened. Miss Bell also introduced a wool two piece dress with the new high neck with turtle collar of white pleated crepe. The wide shoulder line is cut in the long sleeves. Two interesting evening dresses were shown by Miss Bell. The first was of heavy black crepe with deep decolletage over which was worn a red cape of quilted velvet. The other was in pale green satin the back "harness" effect back being outlined in sequins of red gold.

New Burgundy.

Mrs. Chas. Mott wore a lovely gown in the new burgundy shade with double pointed satin skirt, fashioned in the becoming high neckline style. A much worn rough crepe frock was made distinctive with touches of wool embroidery at the pockets and neck. Over this was worn a brown coat with stand-up collar and deep lapels of muskrat. Mrs. Mott's evening gown was a fascinating affair of black crepe with matching crepe finished with feathers.

Miss Audrey Burgess wore a girlish sport frock of navy blue. This was a three piece affair of knitted wool. Its accompanying pullover sweater of red white and blue, striking a smart as well as a patriotic note. A pretty coat showed the popularity of the wine tones, this one being in Malaga shade with full collar of beige wool. The evening gown shown by Miss Burgess was of white crepe. Its deep jacket cape being banded with white fur.

Miss Marjorie Calnan was very smart in a gown of black satin and crepe cleverly combined. Its high neck emphasized by a row of buttons. A swanky red coat was worn with this dress and its trimmings of Hudson seal were unusual. The seal formed a high stand-up collar and was cleverly arranged in panel effect from the elbow sleeve. Miss Calnan wore the most appealing evening gown of the revue a quaint Victorian model of Nyscinth blue net and satin with a shawl of the net caught with a brilliant at the front.

Mrs. Marvin Brook showed distinguished gowns for matrons. A Brandtex suit of brown and brown wool was most effective, worn with a brown coat, lavishly trimmed with Kolinsky. Mrs. Brooks modelled a lovely dinner gown of nigger brown georgette, with wing sleeves, that showed Patou's long skirt line causing as much controversy this season. Mrs. Brooks also showed a beige and brown net dinner gown with draped neckline and bolero jacket.

Knitted Suits.

Miss Gladys Emerson exhibited the newer trend in knitted suits, the suit with the longer coat. This in wine material and had a contrasting sweater blouse to complete the costume. A regal gown of black georgette worn by Miss Emerson had a full skirt finished with fifteen inches of Irish Crochet lace, and sleeve ending in puff sleeve. Her evening gown was of white moire on fitted lines its straight skirt had a deep band trimmed with feathers.

The evening gown shown by the models and the furs were from Woodrow's. The jewelery, evening bags and leather purses were shown by Angus McPhee.

At the close the girls appeared in evening dresses with fur wraps by Woodrow's. Miss Ruby in a slim fitted model of black kid, Mrs. Mott's black net with silver fox collar and Miss Burgess' beige American broadtail trimmed with fox. Miss Emerson also showed a beige broadtail wrap with fox collar, Miss Calnan a striking cape of muskrat the skins arranged in diagonal lines and Mrs. Brooks' wrap was of Hudson seal.

No fuss now in getting children to eat breakfast!

MOTHERS everywhere welcome Crackels . . . the first really all-new cereal in years . . . because it wins young "finger strikers" and makes their appetites keen and zestful. Serve Crackels if you have a boy or girl who won't eat a good breakfast.

Crackels is unlike any other cereal you have ever seen or tasted. Tiny pillows of golden brown, so light they float on top of your milk or cream. So crisp they stay crisp to the very last spoonful in the bowl.

Nourishing, too. For Crackels is a blend of the choicest energy parts of different grains.

Give the family a new taste thrill with Crackels. Start with tomorrow's breakfast. See how fast faces brighten up . . . little bowls come back for more and more. Children never tire of Crackels. They've a good chat time each meal and between meals . . . in handfuls right from the box.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Pollett)

Reducing and other pleasant methods of reforming a feminine figure that has taken on bumps and bulges, curves, lost contact with youth and suppleness. There are, for instance, electric horses that canter and gallop, shake off dust. Rowing machines aren't recommended favorably by the lazy quit, but they work wonders in the way of deleting waist measurements, tightening up thigh-spread. Dancing, fashioned exercise isn't enough if headway is to be made in the battle against plump forms; the diet must be fairly free of fat foods, starches and sweets, though a certain amount of each of these is necessary to form a balanced fare.

To sport the chic coiffure, ears must be out in the open. It would seem now as if ears were designed for the purpose of holding back side locks. Since they are performing a duty, they must be properly powdered, Mrs. G. Hamm, Odessa, last, week.

touched with rouge, dabbed with a drop or two of perfume. If they are surrounded by fastidious proportions, they can be partially draped over with hirsute lamberquins.

Atmospheric dust sticks and hangs to an oily skin. Sometimes soap and water, figuratively applied, won't make a thorough cleansing job. So get out the old cold cream and see what's in the contents for the purpose of removing make-up before the water rubbing takes place. Eau de cologne can be used after the cleansing for oily and from the pores. Pour into a rough fabric, scour the skin perfectly lightly. Results will prove that the treatment is effective.

White spots on the finger nails are supposed to be air bubbles, caused by bruising the matrix at the nail bed. This condition is cured about through the use of metal instruments. Quibble about the nails should be soaked in warm soapsuds lifted gently with the orange wood stick. At the base it must never be cut since nature will start repairs. So too good a job and a thick heavy skin will be the beauty penalty.

When gum pale, are inclined to bleed, dip a soft toothbrush in orange juice, tablesalt, go over the gums gently.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Mary Faith stood up and held out her hand. "That's fine, thirty-seven a week," she murmured, "that's more than I expected. It's much more than what I used to earn. Thanks very much, Mr. Nesbit. And good-bye."

He took her hand but without any pressure. She was all business now, as he had been always during the first three or four years she had worked for him. Well, that was as it should be.

But according to Kim's mother there was nothing right about the whole affair.

She returned from Florida two weeks after Mary Faith had gone back to work, and she came straight to Kim. Puckett's where Mary Faith was established with the baby.

It was late on Saturday afternoon and the old house was filled with the warm and comfortable odor of baked apple pies. Besides that Mary Puckett always had for dinner on Saturday night.

There was a wood fire burning in the parlor and Mary Faith sat on the rug in front of it, showing little Kim a box of wooden animals when the bell rang.

She heard Mrs. Puckett go lumbering to the front hall to answer it, and then the sould of her full round voice and another, another Mother Farrell's. The two of them loud and high. Kim trying to shout down the others.

"Came to see the dear baby—" Bright in here in front of the fire—"

"Just got back from Florida today. Couldn't say long. Doctor's orders, you know. Wife's let him have even a honeymoon in peace!"

Kim's mother's voice had won the contest. Loud and high and strong it seemed to reach ahead of her into the old parlor like a bullet announcing a coming of a big party.

"Where's my baby? Where's Nana's baby?" She came swiftly and almost heavily into the room, dressed from head to foot in white as if she wanted to let people know that she had been in Florida—as Mrs. Puckett remarked later to Mary Faith.

In one of her hands she carried a small basket of oranges which she gave to little Kim.

"Darling baby! Did he miss his Nana?" she wanted to know, holding his small writhing body close in her own large one. "There was a faint of tears in here eyes when she let him go and stood up. Mary Faith knew how easily she could shed them and how little they meant; as any time.

"Poor little child!" she said brokenly to Mrs. Puckett who was moving slowly toward the doorway, evidently very reluctant to go. "It's always the child that suffers when a woman loses her husband."

It was on the tip of Mary Faith's tongue to say that she had lost her husband but that he had left her; when Mrs. Puckett spoke up sharply.

"You ought to know Mrs. Farrell," she said with a quick up-and-down movement of her head. "You left your husband too, didn't you?" And in spite of her she flatly whisked through the ruby velvet curtains that hung in the doorway.

"I thought you'd have everything packed up ready for me to move, Mary Faith." Kim's mother said when she was gone. "I certainly was surprised when I unlocked the flat a few minutes ago and found that you'd taken nothing but your rags and walked out of it!" She set her lips.

I left everyting in pretty good order, I think." Mary Faith defended herself, "I didn't have any money to have your things packed up, Mother Farrell. Kim left me practically penniless —and he had to be wouldn't send me a cent until I filed suit to divorce him. I had to go to work just as soon as I'd nursed the baby."

"You're working!" Mrs. Farrell raised her eyebrows. "Where are you working, for pity's sake?"

"I went back to Nesbits'. Jean Bartlett—you remember Jean Bartlett—well she got married and that left my old job open. So I took it."

Mother Farrell's big pink mouth snapped open and she shook her head in a series of little jerks.

"I don't understand your doing that, Mary Faith—I can't imagine what Kimberley thinks of it. You know how jealous he has always been of Mr. Nesbit. I don't know quite what to think about you, myself. Going back to work, as a married woman, with that man—I always thought it was funny if Kimberley was jealous of him unless there was some reason for his being jealous."

Mary Faith got to her feet, her blue eyes blazing suddenly like flame.

"Don't you dare say a thing like that to me." She spoke evenly and quietly as very quiet people often do when they are angry. "You know that Kim never had any reason to be jealous of Mark Nesbit or any other man that I knew. I wouldn't be working for Mark Nesbit now if Kim hadn't left me without a cent —I'd be here taking care of my baby, all day; as I ought to be."

Kim's mother stood her ground. "You may have to work but you don't have to work for Nesbit," she said firmly. "And if that's what you insist on doing I don't blame Kimberley for wanting a divorce."

It was useless to argue with her—to try to explain things to her. Kim was going to believe what she wanted to believe about Kim and everybody had and she always would. Mary Faith knew that.

"All right," Mother Farrell; if that's what you want to think," she said. "But if either you or Kim can find a place where I can earn thirty seven dollars a week from the start I'll give up my place at Nesbit's. Heaven knows I'll be glad to. I've no joy to me to be there, with all my old friends pitying me, let me tell you."

Kim's mother had no answer to that. She stood still, looking as she was going. She had oilly dropped in for a minute to bring the baby his basket of oranges, and perhaps when she and doctor were settled in doctor's home Mary Faith would bring the baby to visit them.

Perhaps Mary Faith was vague on that point. But she tried to be pleasant and smiling as she said good-bye to her mother-in-law and watched her march slowly and heavily into Dr. Thatcher's automobile and drive away.

She would pretend to think that I enjoy working at Nesbit's," she said half-aloud as she watched the car move down River street.

The days in the office seemed never-ending. There was not a secret in the day, when the thought of the baby was not at the back of her mind. She worried about his comfort steadily and herself in her own little room or sat taking dictation with one ear cocked for the sound of his voice. Suppose he got away from Kim and Mrs. Farrell and Mrs. Puckett? Was he getting his nap on time? She always remembered to have his spinach and give him his orange juice and milk at ten o'clock in the morning. He was sick and she stayed at home with him for three days. She thought of the draughts on the floor room at Mrs. Puckett's. Once she caught a cold herself because were set out on the table in the corner. And in another corner was the baby's little white iron bed.

He lay there for two days, burning with fever and calls to sleep stupor. Heat and an upset stomach," said Dr. Nevin, who lived just across the street and took care of most of the people in Mrs. Puckett's house. "He'll be all right in a day or two."

But Mary Faith was terrified and she telephoned Kim's office and asked for him. He was out of town on his vacation, the telephone girl at McGinnes's said, and she could not be back until the end of the month."

At the end of the second day the baby was better, and on the following afternoon Mary Faith took him downstairs to the cool coolness of the parlor. The top-floor room was always hot in the afternoon.

The bay windows were open, the lace curtains billowing out from them like hoopskirts. And in the alcove Mr. McClintock sat smoking a cigar and reading the afternoon newspaper.

He laid down the paper and offered Mary Faith a chair. "Sit here, sit here! Ha the coolest place in the whole house, and how's the young fellar?" He took out his old-fashioned gold watch and dangled it before the baby's eyes. "Too bad you have to go away every day and leave that youngster, Mary Faith. Can't you make his father provide for you? Seems to me he ought to be willing to do something."

Mary Faith thought that over. Perhaps she herself ought to write to Kim and tell him that she would get a divorce and ask him to provide for herself and the baby. Perhaps she ought to give up her position at Nesbit's and take care of the baby herself for the next few years—while he was so little.

It's hard sometimes to know what to do, Mr. McClintock," she said slowly. "Did you ever hear this—Do nothing and all will be done?" She frowned. I think that's the best sort of advice for a woman in my position—in my position—"

She repeated the last three words of the sentence automatically and then her voice died away into silence. She had caught sight of a familiar name on the folded page of Mr. McClintock's paper. Claire Makkom's name. It was contained in a legal notice tucked away among other legal notices like it in the divorce news of the day. Not tiny as it was, it stood out like scarlet ink among black headlines to Mary Faith.

So Claire actually was divorcing Jack at last. That probably meant that she intended to be married again. Claire wasn't the sort of person who would give up one good monkey-wrench husband unless she had another one within sight. She was that sort of woman who would n't the sort of woman who would throw herself away for love and love alone. There were too many other things that meant a great deal to her, as Mary Faith knew very well, for unconsidered impulses, smart clothes, a fast car, fast friends and plenty of ready money for the entertaining of them.

If she married Kim she'd want him to give her all the things that him to give her all the things that Jack gave her," Mary Faith went on thinking, her face somber with her inward concern and dismay. "And after a while, when they were a little tired of each other, she'd probably want him the way she tired of Jack a sit he wears sort of tiresome servant—guardian and upper servant.

In the middle of the night, when everything always seems distorted and dreadful somehow, she woke up an day staring at the gray dawn lamps of the window and thinking about Kim until dawn....Suppose he tried to use her for—divorce. Suppose his mother persuaded him that Mary Faith had gone back to Nesbit's because she was in love with Mark Nesbit. Suppose he left her up and left town and she never saw him again. Suppose he went away with Claire.

Well with the pearly morning light she became sane and calm once more and felt sure that none of these things would happen.

The distant clatter of dishes in the kitchen, the rich sound of Mrs. Puckett's laugh from the floor below, the clang and rumble of the street cars going by, the cheery street cars going by, the early day—made her feel secure and cheerful once more.

Everything was going to be all right.... Hadn't Kim left her before and hadn't she always come back? And wasn't the baby better after these last three days of illness and fever? Didn't she herself have a very good position that had come to her, like a miracle, just when she needed it most?

Surely somehow somewhere must be looking after me," thought Mary Faith, who was still old-fashioned enough to believe in a God who took care of His people as well as He did of the small sparrows that fell in the walls of Jericho fell down."

And so after that one night she did not worry very much as the days went by without a word from Kim. Autumn came with its first cold days, its big bursts of wind and rain—and she wondered if Kim had taken his heavy overcoat with him. The rainbow trunk where she had packed it. She wondered if he had found his silk and wool socks in the bottom of the steamer trunk, and once or twice she was on the verge of calling him up to tell him where they were. But she decided not to. If he was still in the mood he had been in last spring he would probably think she was doing it just for effect.

The days of settling rain went on and Mary Faith at work in her office could hear the drumming of the drops on her window all day long, beneath the tap-tap of her typewriter. The green-shaded lights were turned on in the middle of the afternoon, and it was dark by five o'clock when she left the office.

One night Mark Nesbit's car was just starting away from the curb as she stepped out of the front door of the building. It stopped, and his voice came to her through the wet and windy darkness.

"Take you home, Miss Penton?"

He never called her anything but Miss Penton.

"No thanks, Mr. Nesbit," she called back to him, and his car went on down the street. By the time she caught a street car she was soaked to the skin and she sat shivering and wondering if she had not been a fool to refuse his offer of a ride home. She hoped that Mr. Nesbit would not think that she had acted in a coy and kittenish way about it, and she half-wished that she had hopped into the car and ridden home with him. That would have been the natural and sensible thing to do..... It was hard to figure out what was the natural and sensible thing to do when you were married to one man and working in another man's office.

MR AND MRS — IN THE INTERESTS OF CIVILIZATION

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR —No. 36

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Tarzan grasped his kill and dragged it into the bush where he proceeded to satisfy his hunger. Attracted by the shrill screams of the zebras, a pair of hyenas slunk presently into view. They trotted to a point a few yards from the gorging ape-man, and halted. Tarzan looked up, bared his fighting fangs and growled. The hyenas returned the compliment, and withdrew a couple of paces. They made no move to attack and continued to sit until Tarzan had finished his meal.

Then he walked slowly in the direction of the river, to quench his thirst. His way lay directly toward the pit of buffalo startled by his approach fled from their feeding. At the river Tarzan drank his fill and bathed. During the heat of the day he lay under a tree's shade near the ruins of his burned barns. Lying at full length along a swaying branch he stretched his giant limbs, luxuriating in the blessed peace. Recalling only dimly any other existence, the ape-man was happy. Lord Greystoke had ceased to exist.

Through the reeds went Tarzan in the river. A herd of buffalo startled by his approach fled from their feeding. At the river Tarzan drank his fill and bathed. During the heat of the day he lay under a tree's shade near the ruins of his burned barns. Lying at full length along a swaying branch he stretched his giant limbs, luxuriating in the blessed peace. Recalling only dimly any other existence, the ape-man was happy. Lord Greystoke had ceased to exist.

Several hours Tarzan lolled upon his leaf couch. Thirst again suggested an excursion. Dropping to the ground he moved slowly along the game trail worn to a deep, narrow trench by ages of use. Impenetrable thicket and dense tree growth topped the walls. When he reached the end upon the river bank he saw his way blocked by a family of Bull Tarzan counted seven, a male and two females full grown, and four young lions as formidable as their parents. Tarzan halted.

MACHRAY IS SENTENCED TO SEVEN YEARS

Bursar of University Given Concurrent Term Of Seven Years in Prison

Electa Summer Trial and Pleads Guilty on Two Counts

MACHRAY ILL

Physician States He Must Have Constant Treatment

Winnipeg, Sept. 22 (by Frank Pitcairn, Canadian Press staff writer) —Seven years in the penitentiary was the sentence handed out today to John A. Machray, K.C., aged lawyer, churchman and for thirty years a custodian of endowment funds.

The little old man, enfeebled by long illness appeared in the provincial police court today and pleaded guilty to two charges of theft. One was of stealing $15,375 from the University of Manitoba and the other of stealing $80,000 from a former partner.

On each charge he was sentenced to seven years but sentences will run concurrently. Proceedings on a third charge, also against the chief, were lodged against him, were included in the larger one.

Judge's Voice Husky

Magistrate R. M. Noble spoke with a husky voice as he addressed the accused after counsel for the Crown, and defence had made their statements. He had known the accused for more than a quarter of a century, he said, and his position was difficult—but he had to say to himself his duty to the court and to society. He had no alternative but to lay aside all sentiment of friendship, prejudice or anger which might be inclined to sway his decision.

Machray showed little sign of emotion when he heard the sentence pronounced. Only when a friend pronounced sentence upon him. He appeared tired and ill-at-ease throughout the hearing as he sat at the end of the council table there and when he stood to hear the charge read and to hear sentence pronounced leaned heavily with his hands pressed on the table.

His two daughters accompanied him to court as well as two doctors. After proceedings were over he was taken into the magistrate's office and overcome with a weak spell. He remained there for 20 minutes while his daughters and physicians aided him.

Not Ordinary Theft

When he recovered he was taken, at once to the Provincial jail at Headingley after saying goodbye to the two girls. After thirty days in jail during which time he can make an appeal from sentence, he will be taken to the penitentiary at Stoney Mountain.

Court proceedings were brief. The Machray case was the first on the list. After the election of summary trial and plea of guilty, E. Dudley Hull, K.C., made a brief statement on behalf of Machray.

In pleading guilty Machray did not admit theft in the ordinary sense of the word which connected taking something from another and putting it in one's own pocket, said the law, however, regarded a person who received a benefit from another person for a particular purpose and used it for another purpose as guilty of theft.

It was in this sense that Machray admitted the charge, the counsel were fought. It would take many days and perhaps weeks, if the battle raw was not well and did not wish to put the province to great expense or the court to great trouble.

As circumstances to be taken into consideration Mr. Hoskins said in his dealings Machray was not once motivated by personal interest or private gain. For many years he had not been entitled to practice law. He had devoted practically his whole time to the service of his church and his university.

BRITISHERS IN BANDIT HANDS

Note Says Cutting Off of Ears And Execution Planned

Newchang, Manchuria, Sept. 22 (AP)—Another poignant appeal for the release of Dr. Clifford Manby-Colegrave and Miss Cockren, another British subject who was seized by Chinese bandits more than a week ago, was received today from Mrs. Pawley, who said the bandits planned to shoot them in a week, after cutting off their ears.

The note was received by Mrs. Pawley's father tonight from another secretarial demand for ransom. The letter was brought by a servant of the family who carried the father's message to the brigands' camp.

"Let us out as soon as possible," the note said. "They are going to cut off our ears and I rather want to keep them. For God's sake be quick. We have a week to live, before we are shot.

"These fellows are really serious. I am filthy and long for a bath. The food is awful.

"This was a letter from Cockren."

Tinko (Mrs. Pawley) is wonderfully brave and cheery but she can't stand this sort of thing forever. We've done nothing but eat and sleep for a week. We are filthy and bored stiff, but we're both fit and well treated."

TOLERANT SPIRIT

Four Running Trades to Discuss Finding by Royal Probe

LIGHTER SETS SUIT ON FIRE

Boy Cleans Pants With Gasoline Without Taking Them Off

Serious burns suffered when his gasoline saturated trousers burst into flames after he had lighted a cigarette lighter open, were suffered by 13 year old Ernest Frank, of Glenbrae Street, who was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital early this afternoon. The youth was under the care of Dr. J. A. Faulkner, who reported his condition serious. His father, Mr. Wes Evans, who was responsible for setting the clothing promptly into action by wrapping an old coast around him after the flames had been put out, is also being treated for minor burns on the hands and face. Mr. Charles J. Symons, of this city, a neighbor, rushed both to the hospital for treatment.

According to the police story the boy was cleaning his trousers with gasoline without the formality of taking them off. Through the operation of cleaning them, he walked into the kitchen of his home and snapped a cigaret lighter open, with the result that gasoline soaked the trousers and in a flash the garments were ablaze. His father standing nearby, without a moment's hesitation, promptly threw an old coat over the boy and rolled him on the floor, extinguishing the fire.

Final Settlement With Gandhi is Expected by Caste, Depressed Hindus

"Now or Never" Says Head of Committee Seeking Compromise

GANDHI WEAKER

Indian Leader Drinking Great Deal of Water

Poona, India, Sept. 22 (AP) — Prospects for a speedy settlement of Indian electorate issues which would end Mahatma Gandhi's hunger strike were reported this evening by members of a special committee of caste Hindus and representatives of the depressed classes.

The entire committee visited the Mahatma in his cell and talked with him for two hours.

"We had a long, satisfactory, heart-to-heart talk with Mr. Gandhi," said one of them as they left. "We look for a speedy ignorance with a final settlement."

Poona, India, Sept. 22 (AP) — Mahatma Gandhi, already weakening after the first day of his fast," faced a crisis today.

"It's today or never," said G. D. Birla of the Hindu Emergency Committee which has been trying to bring about a compromise over the problem of the electoral rights of the depressed classes, over which the Mahatma entered upon his starvation fast Tuesday.

Condemned to Die

Gandhi, the "condemned" cell at Yerwada jail, to which Gandhi was moved yesterday because it offered more ventilation and quarters for the many visitors who came to see him, the Mahatma's emaciated Mahatma continued to squat crosslegged on a wicker cot, but his voice was growing weaker when the last of his callers left him last night.

The committee was putting forth every effort today to bring about a compromise agreement which would satisfy Gandhi. The members were courted by the belief that whatever plan must be done quickly if the Mahatma's life is to be saved.

Whatever agreement is reached must then be submitted to Prime Minister MacDonald for the approval of the government.

Limit Visitors.

The government indicated it was ready to limit the number of the Mahatma's visitors in the future because of the strain which the conversations of those who came to see him yesterday had put on the aged leader. Gandhi's most famous woman, and once his chief lieutenant, who is a prisoner in the Yerwada jail with Gandhi continued today to drink a great deal of water. He also kept up with his usual routine as well as saying his regular morning and evening prayers.

Mrs. Gandhi wife of the Mahatma, was transferred today from Yerwada jail at her husband's request. She arrived under escort and will be given an opportunity to see her husband.

The government informed the Mahatma he might have his own spiritual adviser with him if he wishes a further measure of comfort.

Word of a direct result of Gandhi's appeal two Hindu temples were opened to untouchables here today.

Reclining at ease on his cot, beneath a fluffy mosquito netting, he addressed for two hours to leaders of the leaders of the depressed classes which favor a joint electorate.

Drinks Often

The Mahatma did most of the talking occasionally he paused to drink a few sips of water from which he poured from a bottle on a stand at his side, adding a pinch of soda. As the day grew warmer, he increased the frequency of his drinks. On another table were his favorite books including one on astronomy.

ARM IS AMPUTATED THROUGH ACCIDENT

The car in which Heron had been driving was found by police hours later, and had obviously been in an accident. The young man was unable, however, to explain what had led to his injuries.

DROWNED IN SWILL BARREL

Sidney Farmer Meets Death in Peculiar Manner

Falling head-first into a swill-barrel, Colin Chisholm, 62, Concession of Sidney was drowned in his own pig pen some time previous to 9.30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Mr. Chisholm was last seen by his family at 7.30 a.m. when he left the house to feed the stock of his farm. Later when he did not return, his wife went to the barn, failing to locate her husband. Later she noticed two legs projecting out from the top of the swill barrel in the pig pen. Upon investigating the scene, Mrs. Chisholm found her husband head down in the swill barrel. The barrel was about one half giving enough room to wet Mr. Chisholm's watch and it stopped at exactly 8.30 a.m.

Dr. Mullen of Frankford, was summoned and upon his arrival pronounced the man dead from drowning. In Dr. Mullen's opinion the deceased man must have stumbled into the barrel as there was no evidence of violence and the unfortunate man falling into the barrel.

No reason could be arrived at for Mr. Chisholm's accident as he was apparently in very good health.

The provincial police investigated the case and after consulting Dr. Mullen decided that an inquest was necessary in the case.

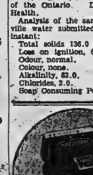
Phone Tests Clear Belleville Water for Use in Batteries

May Be Able to do Without Distilled Water in Batteries

ANALYSIS REPORT

Clear, sparkling water from the taps of the Belleville water supply system received further official recognition and approval from the laboratory of the Provincial Department of Health, in a test report which was received in the city Thursday morning. Below, in full, is a complete report as sent by Mr. A. R. Bonham, Provincial Chemist of the Ontario Department of Health.



Analysis of the sample of Belleville water submitted in the 15th instant:

Total solids 136.0 parts.
Loss on ignition, 63.6.
Odour, normal.
Colour, none.
Alkalinity, 62.0.
Chlorides, 2.0.
Soap Consuming Power, none.

Nitrogen as: — Free Ammonia, none. Albuminiod Ammonia, 0.006. Nitrites, none. Nitrates, 0.04. Oxygen consumed 8.6.

Extreme clarity of the water in the city during the past few months has led chemists of the Bell Telephone Company at their head office in Toronto to experiment with samples submitted with it, with a view to finding out the possibility of substituting such water in battery and electrical work in this district for the more costly distilled water formerly necessary. Careful analysis proved the possibility of such substitution and workers of this district have been advised that the change in the water may be used for battery work in this district.

Officials of the Bell Telephone Company verified this when called today.

MORE PLUMS ARE SHIPPED

Fourth Car Load From Prince Edward Finds British Market

Closely following three other carloads of Damson plums from Prince Edward County, which have been shipped from this district during the past week to the British Isles, where a new market has been found by George F. Catron, local produce dealer, for the surplus crop. One more carload of the same variety of fruit left the city Wednesday afternoon for the port of Liverpool to which the last consignment has been shipped. The shipment, of 600 baskets which left Wednesday, will be the last of this season's order to be shipped. Negotiations are pending however, for a continuance of shipping of other varieties of fruit and vegetables, among which apples will be the chief crop, to the same market, as fortunately found. Optimism over the fact that the government has had its vestigeand the advantages of settling up a large cold storage plant for this district, to help fully in the produce dealers who have done much to draw the matter to the attention of the Dominion representatives.

VAUDEVILLE ACTS MUCH APPRECIATED

Vaudeville at the Kiwanis Karnival last evening was of a very high standard and certainly made a great appeal to the audience. Miss Lillian Marsh, a clever dancer of outstanding ability and a popular favorite with local audiences on numbers, Miss Marsh's act the evening previous had been hampered by the fact, that there was no mat on the stage but this was provided last evening and her vivacious dances were worthy of highest praise. Miss Marsh has had successful appearances in Montreal and Toronto and her performance is finished and graceful.

"Slim" Burgess was again Master of Ceremonies and with Miss Lauretta Richardson gave an act that had the audience in an uproar. Slim burlesqued a grand opera number given by Miss Richardson and his sketch was original and amusing. Miss Richardson also gave a vocal selection in a charming manner. The final number was a very clever acrobatic act by two young men and the feats of strength were very unusual.

After the vaudeville there was dancing with the Commodores providing sweppy music. The dance was very successful.

NEW AUXILIARY HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

On Tuesday afternoon of this week, Mrs. George A. Reid, accompanied by a number of the members of the Kingston Presbyterial of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, motored to Camden East where an auxiliary of the W.M.S. was organized by Mrs. Reid in her office as president of the presbyterial. This makes the second organization this year as Glenvale organized an auxiliary society in June.

HOME GROWN PEACHES COMPETE IN QUALITY

Belleville-grown peaches, as far as quality is concerned, this season can compete and be well up with the prize winners in any shown from anywhere, not alone in Ontario but from wherever the luscious fruit is grown. In size, flavour and colouring peaches which have been grown here this year have been par excellence. True, the quantity has not been great, but what peach trees there are in the city, how, from reports, borne abundantly.

Wednesday afternoon three of the finest peaches a lodge would wish to pass on were brought to this office from a tree grown from a pit, planted by Miss Anna Ash, eight years ago in the yard of Mr. Robt. Thomas, 147 George Street. Five baskets of beautiful fruit from this tree of the free-stone variety, were picked from this tree and that after the depredations of the boyhood of the neighborood.

Two peach trees in rear of Miss Charlotte Jones's residence, Victoria Ave., have produced even more abundantly, from one tree over two bushels were picked, while the other yielded nearly half that amount. Both peaches were those of the free-stone variety, fine in flavour, lusciousness, colouring and size.

Other trees about the city have been noted and a number of families in Belleville have not had to depend on importation of Niagara peaches for their seasonal use or preservation for winter months.

It is estimated that more than 1,500 languages are spoken in the Americas.

Stirling Fair Success Exhibitors and Crowds Are Keenly Interested

Weather Conditions Favor Great Annual Fall Exhibition

FINE RACING CARD

Judges Praise Standard of Exhibits in Close Contests

Stirling Fair Society of 1933 made history on Wednesday when under the most favourable weather conditions many hundreds of people from the countryside and villages found their way into the grounds for the annual exhibition. There were 82 exhibitors, the entries were very large particularly in horses and in dairy cattle as well as in sheep and swine. Poultry exhibits were up to the standard of past years, while within the building there was the finest showing one could desire to gaze upon. Here was the work of scholars contesting from the school fairs held and valued prizes obtained in this final contest. Not far away was the manual training and household science division, indicating the fine character of the work done in Stirling public schools.

One of the notable exhibitions was that in cheese and butter, the cheese entered totalling twenty-three. A. R. Hollands of Edgarly showed the process of the making of honey and the bees in action. The Horticultural Society of Stirling had an excellent exhibition in the centre of the hall. Ladies' work was no mean portion of the fair, every phase of woman's work on the farm being indicated herein as well as in the domestic science section which with arts and preserves and all classes of cooking drew attendance. The boulad pres serves was one of the classes noted by the patrons of the fair.

The arts are not neglected and the society does well to foster this branch of the life of the community. Handicraft was not neglected.

Farm Boys' Club.

Those who inspected the exhibits were drawn to the farm boys' club table, gt saw winning the prize of $25 put up by the Department and the Society.

The vegetable exhibit was large, one of the largest of the exhibition, a sign of the fertility of the soil and the labor of the agriculturist.

The gate receipts were very encouraging and the patronage extended to the midway with its ferris wheel and other attractions.

Never had Stirling Fair so many horses in the speed trials and one of the events was divided to make two on account of the number of contestants. There were 40 entered horses. Mayor G. G. Tice of Belleville the starter, stated at the close of the races that they were the best lot of horses he had seen in a quarter of a century. Those who lined the track had plenty of thrills with the result filled out the time made one of the best ever made in Eastern Ontario. The results of the speed trials:::

DECLARED LAW FIRM BANKRUPT

Government Agent Had Approved Books in March

Winnipeg, Sept. 22. — (By the Canadian Press)—With the scene shifting from bankruptcy Court to Police Court the curtain rose today on another act in the drama of the downfall of the great investment and legal business of John A. Machray, K.C., until recently Bursar and Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Manitoba and Chancellor of the Church of England Diocese of Rupert's Land.

Yesterday Chief Justice D. A. Macdonald declared the investment firm of Machray and Sharpe bankrupt. Today Machray makes his third appearance in court on the charges of theft, one of $903,175.30 from the University and one of $80,000 from Heber Archibald, a former law partner. An earlier theft of $47,261 from the University is merged in the larger charge.

In the course of taking evidence at the bankruptcy proceedings yesterday it developed that an official of the Manitoba Government Comptroller-General's office, R. J. Major, had examined, and had marked approved at late as March 1932, books covering some of the University Trusts for the alleged theft of which J. A. Machray is now facing trial.

James Kerr, accountant for Machray and Sharpe and Major on a salary from the Comptroller-General's Department, and $100 a month from Machray and Sharpe.

The bankruptcy order was issued over the protest of F. J. Sharpe, junior partner in the firm, who claimed he knew nothing of the condition of the University Funds. Mr. Sharpe has not yet indicated whether he will appeal. Machray offered no objection to the proceedings.

Miss Betty Ann Steele has died in Kesdy, Ireland, aged 108.

RAILWAY SOLUTION

Under the recommendation of the Royal High Commission which investigated the transportation problems of Canada an arbitral tribunal will be set up to prevent wasteful competition of the two Canadian lines, the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway. Though there has been a feeling held by the public generally that physical amalgamation of the railways was not to be thought of, there is a sense of relief in knowing that the commission does not recommend such a union, because of the results it would have on private and public enterprise and on the credit of the Dominion.

The railways will preserve their identity in property and personnel and will have the advantage of the wisdom of the chief Commissioner, Mr. Justice Fullerton, present head of the Dominion Railway Commission. The Canadian National is to be controlled by three trustees instead of the present directors and they will meet from time to time to confer with an equal number of directors of the C.P.R. to eliminate unprofitable competition. Provision for deficits is to be made directly by Parliament hereafter. The C.N.R. budgets are to be placed under the control of the trustees after being submitted to the Treasury Board and presented to Parliament. There is an effort to "preserve the identity of both systems, and emancipate the C.N.R. from political interference and community pressure." It is recommended that the decisions of the tribunal be final, even overriding those of the Railway Commission in the event of conflict.

Such measures have been proposed to preserve the very stability of the nation's finances and the financial credit of the C.P.R.

The royal commission has made it clear that the present railway situation is due to over-development of the railways beyond present needs to the aggressive and uncontrollable competition between the two railways, to competition from other forms of transportation, chiefly road transport, and to the depression which has been world wide. The Canadian National situation is blamed on the assumption through government action of insolvent railways systems for reasons of national credit, on large capital expenditures for improvement and on alleged political and community pressure on the management arising out of governmental control.

It is felt that resolute action is essential to remedy the situation. Toronto Globe says that the chief anxiety of the people will be to see the problem of solution and elimination the business which is the people's get the worst of it. "An even break all round" is asked. It will be demanded, for the Canadian National must be permitted to prove itself under wise and careful guidance. It must not contribute more than is just due to the slowing up program. Time will tell."

No mention is made of competition from bus and truck and the remedy must lie within the province. In some quarters it is held that the present regulations applying to trucks and busses are not properly enforced, otherwise their speeds would be cut down as it is felt that present speeds are not only a menace to safety but to the very maintenance of the highways. Even a recent editorial in the Montreal Gazette claims, eliminate much of the competition from this source, while as the same time protecting the taxpayers against the destruction of highways by overweight and speed. It is believed the full report of the Royal Commission will deal with the problem of highway competition.

The report is to be dealt with at the coming session of Parliament.

COMMENTS

Canadians are becoming greater meat-eaters, as the Ottawa Bureau of Statistics shows with an average annual per capita consumption of 148.46 pounds in 1931 compared with 145.64 pounds in 1930. This is a good standard to reach and shows that Canadians are willing to help their own livestock industry. They have yet to become greater cheese eaters.

It is not necessary to wear plus fours to play golf. Sandy Somerville won his crown playing with his ordinary blue trousers. How can the non-golfer who wears plus fours or the dub explain this? Is there no final court in golf to make champions dress properly?

Speed boat news of late has been surprising—first the slump in the opposition to Gar Wood when something went wrong with the British machine and then the new record hung up by Gar Wood. Nothing is stationary it seems as far as records are concerned. Wood has just put up a new record for some one to beat.

CITY NIGHT
By Aline Michaelis

Below me the city's clamor
Of traffic that throbs and beats,
The din and honking and rattle,
The echoing roar of the streets.

I look from my lofty window
Down into the thoroughfare,
Just glimpsing the restless currents
Of life that are flowing there.

And I think of the pulsing passion
In eager hearts that go,
Each one intent on its problems
Down there in the streets below.

Below me the ceaseless clamor
Of a life that beats at the bars,
But over my head through the darkness
The glory and glow of the stars!

Sound dwindles and shrinks to silence
At sight of that sapphire arch!
How peace comes back to my spirit
With the stars in their endless march!

WHAT A WONDERFUL THING a newspaper is nowadays. Not only does it bring news and views of the day to the home but it brings valuable information on many other matters. For instance the medical information given each day in this newspaper by Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Sc.D., in the issue of Thursday, September 15, an article on diabetics and diets, very informative. Every day there is a valuable article by Dr. Bisch for the readers of this newspaper without charge. And your daily newspaper can find you where to get the best goods at the least money, whether it is groceries, meats, clothing or other necessities. Try to do without your daily newspaper for one week, and retain your sanity, if you can.

RASPBERRIES RIPE IN SEPTEMBER in Belleville—actually sold in Belleville on September 21, 1932, and purchased by a Front Street business man. California and Florida have absolutely nothing on the climate of the Bay of Quinte district. Folks who have lived here and in the hot countries referred to, say that all year round climate and conditions in Ontario have no equal in the world—here we have had a summer with hardly a mosquito and are never burdened with annoying insects like countries touted as ideal health resorts—and a variety of fruit and a longer greater variety of weather than right here in good old Ontario.

That is Victory

When you are forgotten, or neglected or purposely set at naught, and you smile, and your heart at rest, that is victory. When your good is spoken of, you wishes crossed, your taste is offended, your advice ridiculed, and you take it all in patient loving silence, that is victory. When you are content with what remains, plain food, any climate, any solitude, any interruption—that is victory.

One word won't tell folks who you are

You've got to keep 'em going.

"Oh, what a funny looking cow?" said the chic young thing from New York. "Why hasn't it any horns?"

"There are several reasons," answered the farmer, "why a cow does not have horns. Some are born without horns and do not have any until the latter years of their life. Others are dehorned, while still other breeds are not supposed to have horns at all. There are many reasons why a cow sometimes does not have horns. But the chief reason that this cow does not have any horns, is that this isn't a cow at all. It's a horse."

LAUGHTER AND TEARS ALLIED VERY CLOSELY

Relief of Pent-up Emotion Brings Pleasure to Humans

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

No doubt you have observed more than once the facial expression of a person when laughing heartily, and no doubt you have been struck by the fact that this expression does not differ essentially from that when the same person cries. Indeed, in cases of an hysterical emotional display it is often quite impossible to tell whether the individual in question is actually laughing or crying.

Yet joy and sorrow are not as far apart after all. It is not incorrect to say, in fact, that laughter and tears are but the opposite extremes of a single emotion. One can readily turn into the other, and furthermore, in witnessing a play, for example, a scene may be depicted that arouses such strange feelings in the onlooker that he may not be able to decide, really, whether he should pass it off with a laugh or give way to tears.

In real, sensible humor, we find excellent illustration of the identical nature of joy and sorrow. True humor, although it tickles your risibilities at the same time, sometimes brings a lump in your throat. Any humor has an element of pathos behind it while in all pathos there is an indistinguishable suggestion of the ludicrous.

If a man slips and falls on a banana peel it always brings a laugh. Yet the circumstance is pathetic, especially if a result is injury. If a child with a smashed doll should conduct a mock funeral ceremony over her toy the scene would be pathetic, nevertheless it usually forces a smile.

The relief of pent-up emotion gives a feeling of pleasure. It is largely the pleasure of escape, of letting loose something bottled up inside. Indeed, much of our humor—jokes, etc.—arises from repressions of various sorts which we dare not, or do not care to, face comedicously, especially in public.

The sex joke illustrates this point best of all. We laugh at a story with a double meaning and thereby let loose repressed emotion. We would not like to confess that we know so much, however. This would run counter to our social and supposed moral standards. But in laughing, we cover it all up and "save our faces", so to speak. We respond to the sex stimulus and if we don't.

To try and keep emotions stifled and bottled up for long periods is harmful to many individuals. To let them out, to talk, to cry, to shout with joy or even to scream, is like letting off steam from an over-heated boiler through the safety valve constructed for the purpose.

Probably one reason why joy and sorrow are so often blended, or to produce contrast and "double" heighten the value of each.

If we were always happy we would undoubtedly soon get bored with it. Occasional sorrows and sad periods much more enjoyable. We appreciate the joy immediately experienced adds zest. It's much like the weather. If we were to have not enjoy sunshine so much if we had only it all the time and never any cloudy skies or rain.

We should cut our emotions or exercise them, for the sake—but, of course, we should never abuse them. What I mean is that we have an actual wearing out of emotions and their final elimination rather than a diminution of the richness and pleasure-giving qualities that it originally contains.

And there are those, especially women, who are "touchy" about emotions. They go into ecstacies of joy at the slightest provocation and into the very depths of sorrow at the slightest provocation. Such behavior is not impressing feeling but merely playing with it. And such behavior is a mighty good way of extracting the essence from feeling and leaving it a shallow, unsatisfying and non-gratifying display of pyrotechnics.

Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., Deceased
A Tribute By George Allen Kingston

Hearken, Quinte Sons and Daughters:
Comes a sound from out the distance,
Midst the busy life of London—
Sound of death bells, tolling, tolling.
News despatch soon tells the story;
Hear we this with pain and sorrow
Tis Sir Gilbert Parker's passing.

Who is this Sir Gilbert Parker,
That so much is said about him;
Come back these seven years and twelve since
To a home in Camden Township
In the Bay of Quinte District;
Here amidst obscure surroundings,
Was born to the Parker parents
Boy they named, "Horatio Gilbert"—
Destined in the years to follow,
Make the name of Parker famous,
Where folks speak the English language.

Early boyhood, spent in Belleville;
Here his primary education done;
Gave good promises for the future;
Spends a year or two at teaching;
It was then his budding talents
First gave vent to strong expression,
And before the age of twenty,
While still teaching school at Marsh Hill
On the Tyendinaga Shore-line,
Comes his first known published verses,
Rich in thought and noble purpose.

Then to Trinity in Toronto
To consolidate his education
And prepare for "Holy Orders"?
To which service he was destined;
But a year or two as Curate
In the Hills Toronto-ward,
Found his boundless strong ambition
Circumscribed in too small compass.

Keen as well for high adventure,
And to get a wider vision,
At the age of five and twenty
Travels out to far Australia,
Where his literary talent
Soon finds place for expression.
This gave him the chance he wanted,
Travel in far distant regions,—
Through Australia, New Australia,
The Dominion of New Zealand,
And the Island of the South Sea;
What a wealth of information
Gathered he on all these journeys.

Next we find him back in London
In the very heart of the Empire—
Still a young man in his thirties
And a keen prolific writer.
In the three decades that follow,
Comes terse, pithy, virile fiction
From this literary genius.
Question, who is Gilbert Parker?
Millions will read his stories
Could rise up and give the answer.

But his genius was not confined
Here in Boston, Toronto,
When just at the age of forty,
Sent by the Electors
Of Gravenhurst, Muskoka District,
To the British House of Commons;
Here for eighteen years continuously
Served he thus his King and Country,
And was honored by his Sovereign
With the noble rank of Baronet;
Also was he made a member
Of the King's own Privy Council.

Now he's dead, Sir Gilbert Parker!
Yet, not dead, his spirit's with us,
And his fame will live for ages
On its last long earthly journey,
For eulogies are in the making,
On the Shore of Bay of Quinte,
Near the scene of early boyhood,
By the side of Lady Parker,
Thirty years his life companion.

Shall we roll his memory cherish,
This dear noble boy of Belleville?
Whose whole life meant high achievement;
And for whom we're coming after,—
Inspiration and example,
Here, our tribute of affection
Pay we him, now passed beyond us.

Toronto, 15 September, 1932.

Mine Manager Held Prisoner is Granted Freedom

AMOS, Que., Sept. 22.—(By the Canadian Press)—The critical situation which developed when mine workers at Le Roy Mines, Limited, were trapped underground and food ran short, was to some extent relieved today, Arthur Malkman, mine manager, who was held prisoner for several days by the angry men, reached here last night with word, that food had arrived.

There were threats of violence, when wages were cut off, and it was only after long negotiating with the men, that he managed to regain his freedom. He was then escorted back to the mine with money to pay transportation for the miners to Amos. It became necessary, however to expend the money in buying supplies. The mob have determined to remain at the property.

As for the interests of the shareholders, the 36-year-old mining engineer said he had felt it his duty to pull the pumps and allow the workings to flood.

H. E. Malkman of Montreal, president of the Le Roy Gold Mines Ltd., owner of the Mine Manager, is in New York trying to raise money. At the same time, it is understood, that a Toronto Syndicate, is considering purchase of the property.

Determination of the 30 miners to remain as the property is understood to be partly due to the fact that they have invested $300 in the company's stock.

FIRST VISIT to SWEDEN

London, Sept. 22 (By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press staff correspondent)—The Prince of Wales arrives by air in Copenhagen today. He left the morning in the imperial Airways machine after flying in his own machine from his Sandringham home at Sandringham to Croydon. Stopping at Amsterdam and Hamburg he should arrive at Copenhagen about 5.40 p.m.

The Prince will pay a private visit to the King of Denmark, whose birthday falls on September 26th, and he expects to spend a week in Denmark about a week. During his visit the Prince will be the guest with the Crown Prince of Denmark at the opening of the British Exhibition, of which the two Princes are joint patrons.

In order to present arrangements, the Prince will leave Copenhagen on the afternoon of September 30th for a private visit to King Gustaf of Sweden. He is to see various points of interest, industrial establishments, and on the return a stay of approximately ten days in Sweden.

The Prince will, it is understood, fly back to England, but he will travel from Copenhagen to Stockholm by train. It is emphasized that both the visits are in the nature of private family visits rather than official and public visits of country, and it will be the first time the Prince has ever been in Sweden.

Exhibits Reach High Standard and Make Judging Difficult

(By Staff Reporter)

For the past few years the Championship School Fair for Hastings County has been held on the second day of Stirling Agricultural Fair. It is needless to state that this event is of especial interest to the pupils of various schools, for the exhibits and parents are equally interested. Yesterday upon the spacious grounds of fair park children from a number of schools with their teachers assembled and they certainly made a fine appearance.

In a corner of the main building a space was reserved for the display of products by the young farmer and farmerettes. Grain, fruit, vegetables, flowers, cooking, sewing, needle art, collection of weeds, and native wood were to be seen and admired in the vicinity of an exhibit that would have done credit to any agricultural society. Arranged in an artistic manner it was the admiration of many spectators at the fair. It is held under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture with the energetic and affable district representative, Mr. Joseph A. Wilson, of Stirling, in charge. The children who were exhibitors in the various classes have every reason to be proud of their efforts and those securing awards were justly entitled to same. Successful competitors were as follows:

14 MILE STRETCH OF WATER MAY BE GRAVE

Moscone, Ont., Sept. 22—(CP)—Dorr and Robert Ralph, thought to hail from California are the object today of search made by Indians along the shores of James Bay between Moscone and Rupert's Landing. Little is known of the two men, who three weeks ago started out in a canoe to cover the 14-mile stretch of rough water between their port and Rupert's Landing. When warned against attempting this feat, they are said to have replied they travelled much water in California and James Bay was "pie" for them.

BOND COUPONS RECASHED AND CLERK TAKEN

Arrested After Being Shadowed for More Than Week

CHARGE PREFERRED

Audit May Reveal a Greater Loss Than Supposed

Toronto, Sept. 23—(CP)—Following Mr. Hanna's investigation H. L. Austin, Toronto, senior clerk in the bond department of the Province of Ontario Treasury department appeared in court today charged with theft of $5,000. Austin was arrested yesterday on a charge preferred by H. C. Pratt, his chief superior. Hon. E. A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer had ordered an audit, and when Mr. Hanna did it a few of the defalcations may reach five figures.

Austin, it is alleged, manipulated redeemed bond coupons, which he was supposed to perforate with a cancellation-stamp, in such a manner he was able to exchange them for cash.

Information regarding the full extent of the alleged defalcations in the department was refused last evening pending the completion of the examination of the books of the bond department by the auditors now at work.

Suspicion that there was a "leak" in the department and that the provincial treasury was paying twice on coupons payments on provincial government bonds, was aroused at the beginning of this week resulting in the investigation now carried on by the arrest of Austin.

Certain bond coupons were traced yesterday through the records of a city bank, and were discovered to have been cashed by a man now said to have been Austin, but who had a bank account in another name.

S. A. RAFUSE IS CONVICTED

Jury Deliberates Only Two Hours—Sentence on Saturday

Windsor, N.S., Sept. 22 (By The Canadian Press)—Stanley A. Rafuse, convicted on two charges of conspiring and attempting to rob the Royal Bank of Dorchesterdale, will hear sentence pronounced by Mr. Justice Hall, Saturday morning, Saturday.

Climaxing one of the strangest stories told the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, a Hants county jury yesterday brought in a verdict of guilty after on hour's deliberation. Now for the first time since he stood over glasses of beer in a wood lot on the Rafuse farm at Rawdon, Gerald Freckleton had been killed and Edson Boutilier wounded, when they entered the bank on January 23—that part of the story had been told fully.

But at Rafuse's trial Boutilier appeared as crown witness. After hearing the plan discussed, he had gone straight to the police. He had been appointed a provincial officer and given instructions in regard to the meeting.

Police Lead Car.

In order to catch the raiders red-handed, the police had assisted in setting the stage. They had supplied the car in which Boutilier and Freckleton had driven to the bank. They had given Boutilier a gun and $5, to see him through.

As far as he knew he had been wounded accidentally.

In developments at least three men besides Boutilier had been asked by Rafuse and Freckleton to join the raiding party. The price was to be about $5,000 in cash and any bearer bonds found in the vault.

Former manager of the Royal Bank at Louisburg, Rafuse was described by Crown Chief Pugsley as a good idea to take a ledger or two so, that if they were caught the bank would be in such a position, that it would offer their freedom for the return of the books.

In accordance with the plan Rafuse posed as the "blind", entering the bank first and engaging the manager W. F. Robertson in a discussion about insurance. He was followed ten minutes later by Freckleton and Boutilier, who, masked with handkerchiefs, ordered the staff to throw up their hands.

MOTHER, SON IN HOSPITAL

Vermont Woman Attempts Murder and Suicide in Hotel

Toronto, Sept. 22—(CP)—Mrs. Kitty Whalon of East Dorset, Vt., and her four-year-old son are in hospital here critically ill from the effects of poison. Mrs. Whalon arrived here yesterday and registered at a hotel. Shortly afterward she and her son were discovered in the room with an empty poison bottle beside them. Police said the woman had given her child the poison first and then taken it herself.

Motives for the mother's action may be found in farewell notes which the young woman left neatly piled on a table, but Toronto police refused to divulge the contents of the missives.

One of the seven notes was addressed to police, asking them to notify her husband, Mark Whalon.

"There is enough property of mine to look after expenses," this note read. "I want to be buried with my boy."

ANOTHER LARGE CROWD PRESENT

S. R. O. Sign Hung Out For Second Night of Karnival

The crowds continue to pour into the Armouries each night for the 1932 Kiwanis Karnival — last night every available seat was occupied early and it was a case of standing room only for the late comers. This far the stage production is of an unusually high calibre, the vaudeville acts last evening being of Big Circuit order—and they promise an equally good if not better programme tonight. You'll not see the same thing twice as there is a complete change of programme every night. An attractive change this year is the dancing arrangement on the main floor of the auditorium, this supplies a snappy programme for the onlookers as well as the dancers and helps to keep up interest in the evening's events.

The fashion show tonight will be staged by the T. Eaton Ladies' Wear Shop and while this is a comparatively new shop in Belleville they promise an array of fashions that will be second to none. The furs tonight will be by Delaney's with jewellery by Moyer's. The acrobatic delight as usual 15c, with childrens price reduced to 10c.

Authentic Trends for Fall in Varying Shades and Modes are Seen, as Mannequins Parade

J. A. McNabb Ltd. Display Gowns on Second Night

BEAUTIFUL FURS

Many New Shades With Wines and Burgundies Predominating

Fashions that were glamorous in beauty and appeal were revealed last evening when the J. A. McNabb Co. sponsored the second Style Revue of the Kiwanis Karnival. All the authentic trends of the fall mode were caught in the many lovely garments that were brought to life for the delight of the audience. Back to the fashion picture have designers gone in their search for inspiration for the fall mode with results that are surprisingly effective and 1932-ish. Coats and frocks display by of motion pictures, wide shoulders and all kinds of frills associated in the mind with the dignified Victorian days. Some of the evening wraps had a medieval air about them, beautiful but unmistakable.

Richness of fabric and fur trimming distinguished the cloth coats in the smart collection and attention was drawn to the top of these garments by the important collar and sleeve treatment. Knitted and wool suits and coats predominated, and frocks showed the trend towards warmer dressing for the year.

As in the coats, the upper part of afternoon dresses claim the spotlight and achieve their role of importance by fastening close to the throat, displaying puffed sleeves of varying lengths, adopting the open let'er to enhance the shoulder line and using touches of white as the trimming in many cases, no matter what shade the frock.

Rich Wine Garnet

And speaking of shades, the Mohawk frocks and coats ran the whole gamut of autumn tones, beginning with wine in its many shades, the colour chart featured brown, green, black with white and deep blue. For evening, the flesh pink, pale blues, tomato red and the new green-ish gold hue were much in evidence.

Complementing the costumes, the furs and hats last night were again provided by Woodley's and the sumptuousness of the fur garments was breath-taking. Scarves used the two and-three skin style, one that the Parisian has taken to her heart for even on the warmest summer days this past season, the smart woman appeared on the Paris boulevards wearing silver fox scarves of two or more, frequently three skin lengths.

Woodley's provided the modish hats, whose vagaries showed how indulgent Dame Fashion is this season where millinery is concerned. Hats of many shapes are equally fashionable. The trend is toward shallowness in crown and the tilt over the right eye. Brimmed and brimless, dignified and brief shapes predominated in the chic little creations in the Woodley showing, were delightful.

Jewelry Provided

Costume and evening jewelry which lent a note of distinction to the handsome garments were supplied by Angus McPee and were in the very latest styles. Very beautiful diamond rings, dinner rings and necklaces were worn by the mannequins. The leather hand bags and evening bags were also from the McPee store and attracted much admiration.

To pick out the most outstanding costumes of the evening would be a matter of choosing among those, which seemed to have the most appeal to the audience were the following: Miss Bell introduced a clever little black afternoon frock, that showed the use of crisp material for trimming in contrast to the soft black fabric of which the dress itself was fashioned. Panels of organdy in the bodice skirt cuffs and a red patent belt touched up this gown. Among the coats shown by Miss Bell was the coat in shade with muff cuffs, a one of the season's most varied accessories. Queen Anne collar and muff cuffs of the same fabric as the front of the coat to the waist of black seal. Miss Bell also showed a brilliant evening frock of lacquer red velvet in simple, fitted style with detachable cape bordered with grey fur.

Miss Audrey Burgess wore some very clever models. A fetching flute frock of tete de negre brown displayed the new nun's collar and huge puff sleeves. The collar proved to be detachable and when it was removed the dress had a high neck line accentuated by a jewelled clip. A smart coat was in the same fashionable shade of brown with front cape, stand-up collar and cuffs of mouskrat. The cape was also removable and revealed the slim fitted lines of the coat, which was closely wrapped about the figure. A striking dress worn by Miss Burgess had a black velvet skirt and a metallic blouse with cape sleeves and draped neckline. With a fetching evening gown, Miss Burgess showed a lovely evening wrap of black velvet with wide collar of white fur.

Miss Penne, of Montreal, was an additional mannequin at McNabb's Style Show and showed some exclusive models. After several sports models and lovely afternoon gowns, Miss Penne showed a number of evening frocks, which were warmly received by the audience. Several were of black velvet combined with metallic metallic cloth. One model of black crepe featured a huge cape of green ruffled georgette which was, of course, detachable. Miss Penne also appeared in a dinner gown of black velvet with shimmering cape of metallic material, the frock fashioned on fitted slender lines with deep decolletage. Climaxing the collection of garments the showed Miss Penne's final model was a regal black velvet evening wrap, dress length, with beautiful Elizabethan collar of white fur.

Miss Gladys Simmons introduced a charming crepe afternoon dress in tomato green with full sleeves and Talisman roses at the neck. A green coat had a deep mushroom collar and little cuffs, that looked as though they had slipped up from the wrist for they nestled at the elbow. Flesh pink crepe with satin fashioned a delightful evening gown over which was worn a bell-hop evening jacket of black velvet, very surprisingly, long sleeves of white fur.

Smart Frocks

Mrs. Charles Mott were with a smart brown coat, a mocha brown crepe dress with the new high neck and a suggestion of the high waistline in the wide colourful girdle. A shining black and white dinner gown had sleeves in the modish three-quarter length. Over a white satin evening dress, cleverly fitted, Mrs. Mott wore a handsome evening wrap of black velvet with white fur collar.

Mrs. M. Brooks modelled a beautiful dressee for the more mature women, which are featured at the McNabb store. A Burgundy afternoon gown with draped neck was introduced and a black coat with Persian Lamb high collar and elbow cuffs showed Fashion's admonition to be "dull" when possible in the matter of clothes. Mrs. Brooks' made a charming appearance in an evening gown of a rich fuschia shade velvet that won instant applause.

With the dresses the fur necklaces exhibited by Woodley's included a silver fox, a double scarf of silver fox and natural white Arctic, a double red fox, double brown fox and single scarves of brown, white Arctic and silver fox. The stunning fur coats included an American broadtail in Rosemarie shade with blue fox collar worn by Miss Bell; a black caracul wrap trimmed with white shown by Miss Burgess; a Hudson seal wrap with the new pointed shoulder and back collar effect and gauntlet cuff; Mrs. Mott wore a lawn jaguar coat, full length, with deep flowing collar and Directoire cuff; Miss Penne a Hudson seal with silver fox, while Mrs. Brooks introduced a mink coat, full length, with skins arranged in striped narrow design. The mink pelisse also a Hudson seal with deep self collar and cuffs. All coats were handsomely lined with beautiful materials.

"GEMS"

There is a story behind the tiny monthly booklet called "Gems". The Rev. Father Powell, an Empire Editor, some years ago, was a curate under the late Canon Bagshaw at St. Thomas' in Belleville, entered the Cowley Brotherhood, established at Oxford, and was subsequently made head of the order for this continent, the mother house being set up in Boston. In the course of his work among the poor of that city, Father Powell, who delights in childhood, found it impossible to get twin Italian babies, whose mother was down with some infectious disease, into any institution, and as he tramped the intellectual streets, with a twin under each arm, he decided that he'd establish an orphanage where he could bank stray babies. No grass grew under the clerical feet and soon the orphanage was an accomplished fact, and the initials of the first four babies garnered in to its motherly care spelt G—E—M—S. The little paper was established to help support the orphanage, and ever since the first number has sparkled with the fun and nonsense of as mischief-loving a mortal as ever donned clerical collar. "Gems" is a unique expression, of its unique, and spiritually-minded clerical editor. Father Powell numbers friends in Canada are many. —Bride Brodeur, Mail and Empire.

Argentina's 1932 petroleum production is expected to be equal to or greater than that of 1931.

Among the 18,069 persons holding pilot licences in the U.S. there were 9,221 of the transport grade, 1,276 limited commercial, 35 industrial and 9,537 private.

SALES VOLUME MUCH HIGHER

Base Metals Failed to Retain Early Gains

Toronto, Sept. 22—Though leaders among the Base Metal shares failed to retain all their early gains, prices were generally firm in general among price changes on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market at noon today. Sales volume was up 204,000 shares changing in the last two hours.

Nickel was unchanged at $31.50 bid; Noranda and Hudson Bay gained 1% each to $21.50 and $4.40 respectively, and Amulet was up a cent at $1.30. The Lindsley group Ventures added another 3 to recent gains to sell at 15. Dome and Sherritt Gordon was up one at 65.

Among higher-priced golds Lake Shore was up 1 at $20.50, Consol. Mic 1-2, Oils and Utilities were unchanged to 1-8 lower, Imperial Oil to 26, Big Missouri a couple to 17 and Stocco a point to 3. MART WAVERS THEN SETTLES

New York Sees Decline About Midday After Hectic Rise

New York, Sept. 22.—After prices had shuttled back and forth erratically, Mixed stocks started ahead a firmer tone in the late trading today. Many rails were also in a hole and the Industrials and Utilities showed more than half of their earlier losses of 1 to 3 points. New York Central, Advance and Du Pont's ran around 4 points or more. American Telephone, U.S. Steel, American Can and Westinghouse each a point lower. Sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

New York, Sept. 22—The stock market wavered irregularly between chills and fevers in animated trading today, early nervous fluctuations giving way first to a rally and then to decline which carried the list to the lowest levels of the day.

The rails, after their leadership in yesterday's spectacular advance, swung forward briskly with Santa Fe, Union Pacific and New York Central gaining 1 to more than a point. Soon, however, the latter cancelled. Selling dried up however, and by early afternoon the market had again lapsed into irregularity.

Public Utility stocks appeared to have minimal importance at the opening, to the rapidly shifting direction of prices for speculative shares, but later yielded with American Telephone, American Water Works, Consol. Gas, and Consolidated Gas off a point or so at the worst. U. S. Steel, after early irregularity, lost 2 points before it reached a strong-up resistance level, and this same pattern was woven by Bethlehem, Allied Chemical, United Aircraft, American Smelting, Case, Harvester, General Motors and Montgomery Ward.

Following, these into the church came the vested choir and the Rector, Rev. P. Oakley Reynolds in the surplice of the Communion hymn, "Praise the Lord! Ye Heavens Adore Him."

Following the usual service of Evensong the rector, Rev. Mr. Reynolds welcomed the members of the order once again to the church and hoped that it might be spared to witness many times in these services. Then taking as his text, the passage first of the Good Samaritan, he spoke particularly from the words: "Master what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Plane Photographers Cause Annoyance

LONDON, Sept.— By the Canadian Press)—The Press photographer who takes his pictures from an aeroplane has got himself into bad odour in several parts of the country. A special Sunday service was held in the ruins of Tintern Abbey, in Yorkshire in commemoration of the 800th anniversary of the founding of the Abbey. The service was attended by the Duke and Duchess of York. It was a perfect day for a celebration held in such wonderful surroundings. Yet the words of the Bishop of Ripon were almost drowned by the roaring of an aeroplane conveying Press photographers, which persisted in swooping down over the ruins.

Something very similar happened during the Pontifical High Mass in Phoenix Park, Dublin, at the Eucharistic Congress. An aeroplane intruded at the most solemn moment.

FAREWELL PARTY HONORS MRS. LOCKE

Rawdon—On Saturday evening, September 17th, the members of Mount Pleasant church gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey and said farewell to their daughter Vida (Mrs. L. C. Locke), who with her husband and daughter, Betty, are returning to their former home in Yellowgrass, Sask. During Mrs. Locke's stay in Rawdon she has proven herself willing to lend her voice to any church and community event and her solos will be much missed.

Mr. Clifford Holmes assumed the duties of chairman and a piano duet was given by Misses Frances McKeown and Edna Thrasher. Miss Marguerite White read "The Girl Who Smiled," and Mrs. Bruce McKeown contributed a solo. The junior boys' quartette rendered a pleasing selection. Sand conducted community singing and several solos were rendered. Rev. Roy Thrasher read the following address and Miss Allan Bailey presented Mrs. Locke with a lovely necklace and ear-rings to match:

Dear Vida:

We, the members of Mount Pleasant church, have met here one night to try and show you in some small measure how highly we do appreciate your kind help in our work during the past months. Not only have you cheerfully acted as directress of our choir, but from time to time you have taken a prominent part as well as the congregation with your rare voice.

We ask you to accept this little gift with our love and as you go back to your little home in the west may you carry with you happy memories of your many Rawdon friends.

Signed on behalf of the Mount Pleasant choir,

Mrs. Locke feelingly replied, thanking her friends for their kindness. During the evening a delightful hour consisting of sandwiches, cake, pie, tarts, candy, apples and coffee was served to the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Bell, R. R. Paterson, Mrs. Wanda Sine and daughter, and Nurse Moore of Consecon.

Wellman's United Church on the Rawdon circuit enjoyed large crowds on Sunday, it being their sixty-second anniversary. Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, B.A., of the Trenton Methodist Church, Belleville, gave two forceful addresses, his morning theme was in keeping with the present time and his remarks contained much food for thought. The altar was banked with foliage, gladioli, dahlias, and other flowers and potted setting. The choir under the direction of Mrs. Carl Clancy rendered appropriate music. In the morning the Misses Nina and Loretta Dracup delighted with a lovely duet.

Piles Go Quick

No Salves—No Cutting

Thousands who have tickling, bleeding or protruding piles have not yet learned that quick and lasting relief can only be accomplished by an internal medicine. Neither salves nor suppositories reach the cause.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The hemorrhoidal veins are flabby, the blood pools and small parts almost dead. To get rid of Piles a medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation, drive out the thick impure blood, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, after years of study, found a real internal Piles remedy. He called his discovery HEMROID and advertised it for 1000 patients with success in every case. 2-2 then decided every Pile sufferer, no matter how afflicted from their case, might try his prescription with a money back guarantee.

HEM-ROID tablets have such a wonderful record of success in this city that J. S. McKeown and all good druggists invite you to try HEM-ROID and guarantee money refunded if it does not end your Pile misery.

TARS CELEBRATE AT 'SNUG HARBOR'

NEW YORK, Sept.—(By the Canadian Press)—It was a great day for farming when "Snug Harbor" celebrated its 101st birthday anniversary.

Now a retreat for some 800 retired mariners, Snug Harbor is a valuable piece of real estate, lying within ferry ride of the towers of Manhattan.

They started building Snug Harbor in 1831, when Captain Richard Randall bequeathed 20 acres of farming land in the heart of the city of New York, the income from which was to be spent on the retired tars.

Captain Randall probably never dreamed what would happen this property, about $4,500 at the outset, is now worth $1,000,000 annually as it has gone in recent years.

So Snug Harbor is well equipped. On its 80 acres 200 employees are maintained. There are 30 buildings in the beautiful grounds, including a church, recreation hall, theatre, music hall and dormitories. Snug Harbor has its own farm, boasting the best of farm produce.

But with all these diversions it is easily understood the old sailor who have come to spend their declining years within sound of the world traffic entering New York Harbor find their chief enjoyment in tales of the seas and ships they have known.

Snug Harbor in fact has become a treasure trove for fiction writers who can obtain the material for $1,000 stories. Many a tale of a ferry and street car ride and a few hours in the friendly old harbor.

One of the favorite stories of Snug Harbor concerns the bronze ands, is that of Capt. Fred Southland, who for years and balls orginally from Maine. He was awakened from an afternoon nap on the Pacific Ocean in the early months of the Great War by the notorious German raider, Emden, Lucknow.

Hastily transferred to the German cruiser, Southland left his teeth in a wash bowl in his cabin. But von Lucknow sent a boat back to rescue the teeth before the guns of the British fleet up Southland's ship, the Manilla.

"MARY FAITH"

By Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"Why don't you get an out-and-out divorce, Mary Faith?" Mrs. Puckett asked her every few weeks. This day Mary Faith had just had a hard word-to-word hearing. Mother was a married woman for a long time—Mrs. Mary Faith Puckett as the house and Miss Fenton at the office, and neither with not another really.

Until that rainy October night when Mark Nesbitt climbed in over her home Mary Faith's position in the office had not bothered her. She had gone back to Nesbitt's just as simply as she had gone to Mrs. Puckett's—and it had seemed to be the place to go, probably because it was so easy to return to. She was no adventurer into places, and the thought of the families of office had been like the thought of a safe old harbor to her.

Everything came in order then October and just as rainy. It could not go on like this daily airing, and Hale reported every night that he had been there and called all day long.

"If he were at home he could have the run of five or six rooms instead of being tied up to one room almost all day."

She had come to hate the tenement room with its windows that looked out towards the bare treetops of Mallory Park. She had come to fear the Wilson Street fat, every hour of the day. She knew the color of the furniture had been moved out of it, and in all probability someone else was living in it now, and yet she felt that it might still be there when Hale Stevens blooming on the window sills and its rubber plant standing in the corner of the bay. Her young son and Kim's cost hanging on the golden coat-tree in the hall.

The first snow came early that year, on the first Friday in November. It began to fall early in the afternoon and by four o'clock Mary Faith's Little room was filled with cold white snow-light. She seemed to seem a different place altogether from the one it had been that morning.

She was standing at the window, looking down into the transformed courtyard below, when the door of Mark Nesbitt's office opened and he came and stood beside her.

"Almost three years since you and I were out in a snowstorm like this, isn't it?" he asked. "Remember?"

She did remember. It had been the night he asked her to marry him. She remember it because it had been the night Kim came back to her—after his long desertion of her. They had sat in his little car outside Mrs. Puckett's house and planned their future then and she had been so happy. Had it had seemed as though all the stars fell down and showered in flower petals that night.

"Of course, I remember it, Mr. Nesbitt," she said, and then she added quickly, nervously:

"I do from the kind of day, don't you? It seems so absolutely clean, doesn't it? Clearer even than the new days when the sun comes out after a hard rain."

"Do you remember that I asked you to marry me that night?"

"Of course, I did." Her lips had stiffened suddenly so that she could hardly speak and she felt cold a flush going over her face.

"It was a long time ago, wasn't it, Mary Faith?" One of his hands slid along the window sill and covered one of hers.

"Three years, you said." She drew her hand from under his and began to back away from the window. She wished, just as she had wished it three years before, that Mark Nesbitt would stay in his lofty place as president of the Nesbitt Mercantile Company and forget that she was his secretary. She regretted that he had forgotten it. Three years months he had been so business-like, so matter-of-fact with her at all times that sometimes she wondered if he had ever been really in love with her.

"Do you remember what I told you that night three years ago?" he was asking her now in a quiet, heavy voice. She had sunk down on the chair behind her desk and he was leaning over her.

She shook her head. All she remembered clearly of their conversation that night was that he had asked her to marry him and she had asked him. And through it all her confidence reflected that if it were Kim asking her the question then she could hold him every word he had said. She never forgot a syllable of Kim.

"No, I don't remember, Mr. Nesbitt. It's so long ago, isn't it?" She threw out her hands, that were usually so capable and sure, in a helpless unnerved movement.

"Well, I told you I'd probably feel about it all the rest of my life as I felt then," he said, "and I do. I know it all the time you were away from this place—and, as soon as I heard from Miss Barnett that you had left your husband, I made up my mind to let you know how all things were and—" He spoke in that same stilled heavy way as if he had thought out what he wanted to say and was trying to remember just how he had planned to put it.

"If you hadn't come down here to work, I had made up my mind to find you and tell you all this. Not just at first, of course. I thought I'd wait for a few months and those few months have passed. When you left here, I'm glad you did, you again if you'll marry me."

He stopped and seemed to be waiting for her to make some kind of an answer. But Mary Faith only stared at him, her eyes wide and dark in her face that had gone deathly white.

"And I think I ought to add," he went on, "that I'd be glad to adopt your boy and help you bring him up. I've had thought of every thing, evidently.

"I should never have let this happen," said Mary Faith to herself. It should have seen it coming—and gone away long ago.

She looked at him as if he were back to Nesbitt's at all. She saw that now. Well, she'd have to go at once so she could. It would be impossible to face him after this. And this afternoon. That was certain.

It was hard enough to let him now that she stood up. She felt her eyes level with his dark ones.

"I'll be dreamed all you were still thinking about me like this, Mr. Nesbitt. I'm sorry—but I can't come back here. But it all seemed so business-like and ordinary at that time.

Jean Bartlett was leaving and you needed someone to take her place—and I needed the place and the salary so badly—Did you think I was getting a divorce?"

She stopped abruptly as one telephone on her desk rang.

CHAPTER XLIV

"Just a minute, Mr. Nesbitt," she said and lifted the receiver to her ear. Mr. Nesbitt's secretary spoke first.

"Mary Faith! This you?" it said. "Mrs. Puckett here. I'm sorry to disturb you, but I thought you'd like to know that Kim's mother has been in several months.

"Yes, Mrs. Farrell." She forgot, in her surprise, that Kim's mother was no longer Mrs. Thatcher as she called herself.

"Yes?" and I wondered whether you could not stop in here when you leave your office tonight," she was saying. "We wanted to talk to you about Kimberley. He's been in several months.

"He's been very ill, you know."

"Yes, I didn't know it." Mary Faith sat down in her chair. "What's been wrong with him?"

"Pneumonia."

"Pneumonia! And they had never let her know!

"He's much better now, of course," the smooth soft voice at the other end of the wire ran on, and Mary Faith seemed to be listening to it with every fiber of her body. "Much better. And Doctor and I don't like to bother you at this time, but certain things have come up in the last day or two, and we feel that we can't settle them without your help."

Oh, what did the woman mean? Why didn't she say plainly and clearly what was wrong instead of talking about certain things that had come up...Mary Faith could—sick reaction what Mark Nesbitt could be.

"I'll be right out," she said and turning up the receiver for a second. Then she took it to her ear again and began to jot the hook up and down to attract Miss Gilday's attention in the outer office.

"Will you please call a taxi for me right away, Miss Gilday?" she asked when Miss Kelly answered her.

Then she looked up at Mark Nesbitt once more.

"My husband has been sick—terribly sick—with pneumonia," she said to him in a voice that was a wailing cry. "And they've never let me know—for a period! Not until just now."

She began to put the papers and pencils on her desk into a drawer and to pull the dust cover over her typewriter. Then Mark Nesbitt stood and watched her, his hands stuck in his pockets and his head turned up as if he were trying to whistle..

"I'm going out to him. Do you mind?" she asked, slamming the drawer and turning the key in it back.

"Of course not. I'll go downstairs with you and wait until the cab comes." Mark Nesbitt said quietly. He held the door open while she took down her wraps from the costume in the corner and put them on.

The people in the outer office looked up curiously as the two of them came out of the little room and started down the stairs that led to the first floor.

Mary Faith barely saw them. No one truly existed for her at that moment but Kim. Her thoughts flew ahead of her to Dr. Thatcher's tall old-fashioned house in Bleeker street, where Kim lay ill.

"I could have driven you out in my car," she heard Mark Nesbitt say to her, but it was a minute or two before his words carried any message to her brain.

"The fast's all right," she said then, and as the people she had left in the office before the building and heard the scream of the brakes as the demand them on. "But thanks—you're very good."

At the door of the station she spoke to him again. "You don't have to come with me. I am sure—sure that you're the kindest person for that you're the kindest person I've known. Only, you see—"

"I see, Mary Faith," he said to her and helped her into the cab. Through the frosty glass of the window she saw him smile and nod his head as the car rolled past him. And when it turned the corner a minute later he was still standing on the snowy curb looking after it.

Kim lay in a big carved walnut bed in a big high-ceilinged bedroom in Dr. Thatcher's house. His fingers were locked across the top of his coverlet sheet, and his head, with his sunken but brilliant as always, went down Mary Faith's heart as she slide his bed to his mother who stood at the foot of it.

"Kim, Dr." Thatcher in a housedress made of elephant's breath and with her gray hair most of the morning. She had spent twenty minutes telling Mary Faith how she had been taking care of Kim for the last three months, and now she was trying to frighten off the other. Neither wished to turn and give way or to start a fuss.

"She's taken awfully good care of me, but she seems to be dangerous nervous!" he said irritably. "You know—she's all over the place at once. And she drops things and makes some noise than a mule on a tin roof."

"Kim, she's your mother and she loves the very air you breathe," said Mary Faith. "You shouldn't talk about her. She can't help making noise. She's a large person and she's as sure as young as she once was."

His wizened his shoulders impatiently against the pillows. "Nobody loves the very air I breathe. Nobody but you," he said drily. "Even poker I'm getting out in the world again, and you'll have to have one for a little while. We thought perhaps you could think of something to do out there—something to earn a little money."

She gazed at Mary Faith quizzingly and then remarked, "I'd go with him, but I don't see how I can leave Doctor for so many months. Kim said she'd go but you know she hasn't any money.... We can scrape together—" She paused and looked at Mary Faith. "Or you'll have to have one for a little while. We thought perhaps you could think of

Hastings, Prince Edward Reg't. Held Field Day, Sport Program

Regiment Inspected by Col. W. B. Anderson of Kingston

Trenton, Sept. 22 (Special)—The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment held their annual inspection and field day at the Fleming's Park Wednesday. The regiment was drawn up in the park for inspection and passed in close column of platoons before Col. W. B. Anderson, C.B.O., D.S.O., of Kingston, who conducted the inspection. Col. Anderson was accompanied by Major R. G. Gill, M.C., and Major Fenlong. The military manoeuvres were carried out by the regiment, and by the companies independently. After the inspection each man was given 10 rounds of blank ammunition and the regiment left the park and marched out the Carrying Place road, where a sham battle was held.

The skeleton force was supposed to have a farm house, and various bridges in the vicinity, which were the key points to the surrounding country. The men proceeded along the road and were given assistance by the R.O.A.F. who had been loaned for the week, and dropped notes to the ground troops as to the position of the enemy. The assistance that they were able to lend to the troops in the air and the ease with which it was done went to show how much the air force is an integral part of all military movements of the present day. The regiment was able to take their objective and proceeded on taking the bridge and became as "Doug Hill." The regiment then returned to town where dinner was served at the Academy Hall for the men while the officers messed at Fitzurse.

Sport Programme

In the afternoon a varied sports program was carried out at Fireman's Park. Suitable prizes were given to the winners of the events. Several athletic events of a programme at one time, the winners playing off for the championship of the regiment. A company, which is located at Trenton met the signallers who are also composed of men who come from Trenton and the victualling and supply under command of Capt. T. Howard Jarrett.

Due to the fact that a large sports program had to be carried out it was necessary to shorten the game to two halves instead of three as set by the score, of one to nothing. Bruce Burk, who was on the lookout for the flag-men, was his own game being the first man up and hitting a homer which was the only run scored. On the tenth inning Burk he struck out the six men who faced him, winning the championship for the signalling corps.

A half-mile race followed which was twice around the park. Several good runners appeared and fast time was made, Private Edward of B. Company winning, Private Root, also of B. Company getting second, while Corp. Hood of the Signalling Corps, took third.

In the hundred yard dash Bruce Burk took the first price; second Sergt. Nichol and, third, Pte. of the Signallers.

In the tug-of-war Trenton was given a treat, when the rope broke letting both teams down rather suddenly. C. Company, their opponents, after the rope was fixed, proved too much for the local men. In the finals B. and D Companies pulled the best two out of three, which was won by B. Company.

A relay race was next run off, each company entering a team of eight men, a message was given to the starting man and the message was to be delivered to each runner and the first team in and delivering the message correctly was declared the winner. A Company won in this event by a large margin. The relay race closed the events of the day and after a few words spoken to the men by the new commander of the regiment, Lieut.-Col. Yates, the men were dismissed and left for their supper which was again served them at Canterbury Hall. It was hoped to have another bigger and better field day again next year after the keen interest shown by the men and the interest with which they took part in all the events.

SILENT SCREEN IS FAVORED BY CHAPLIN

What/ Star of "City Lights" Thinks About "Talkies"

(By Charles Chaplin)

"Because the silent or non-dialogue picture has been temporarily pushed aside in the hysteria accompanying the introduction of speech by no means indicates that it is extinct or that the motion picture screen has seen the last of it. "City Lights" is evidence of this. It is a non-dialogue but synchronized film. In every way did I endeavor to make the dialogue films? The silent picture, first of all, is a universal means of expression. Talking pictures necessarily have a limited field, they are held down to the particular tongues of particular races.

"I am confident that the future will see a return of interest in non-talking productions because there is a constant demand for a medium that is universal in its utility. It is axiomatic that the drama must be universal in its appeal—the word element might be better—and I believe the medium of presentation should also be a universal rather than a restricted one.

"Understand, I consider the talking picture a valuable addition to the dramatic art, regardless of its limitations; but I regard it only as an addition, not as a substitute. Certainly it could not be a substitute for the motion picture that has advanced as a pantomimic art form to notable proportions in the brief twenty years of story-telling. After all, pantomime of some sort has been the universal means of communication. It existed as the universal tool long before language was born. Pantomime serves well where languages are in the conflict of a common ignorance. Primitive folk used the sign language before they were able to form an intelligible word.

"I get a considerable kick I know that pantomime is more important in comedy than it is in drama. Because it is in comedy that make love. It may be even more effective in farce than in straight comedy. These two differ in that the former implies the attainment of humor without logical action—in fact, rather the reverse; and the latter achieves this attainment as the outcome of sheer legitimate motivation. Silent comedy is more satisfactory entertainment, for the reason than talking comedy because most comedy depends on swiftness of action, and an event can happen or laughter be evoked as can be told in words. Of course, pantomime is invisible in drama, too because it serves to affect the gradual transition from farce to pathos or from comedy to tragedy much more smoothly and with less shock than speech ever do.

"I base this statement on recent observations of the sudden arrival of dialogue in motion pictures is causing many of our actors to forget the elements of the art of acting. Pantomime, I have always believed and still believe, is the prime qualification of a successful screen player. A truly capable actor must possess a thorough grounding in pantomime. Consider the Talmas, Gueline, Bernhardts, Duses, Mansfields and Booths, and you will find at the root of their art, pantomime.

"My screen character remains speechless from choice. "City Lights" is a pantomime and certain sound effects are part of this comedy but is in a non-dialogue picture because I preferred that it be that, for the reasons I have given."

"City Lights" has been recalled to the Capitol by public demand and will appear Friday and Saturday double-billed with Buck Jones in "Branded." Two complete performances will commence daily at 2.45, 7.15 and 9.30.

GEORGE ARLISS OPENED TODAY AT THE BELLE

The latest in the succession of Warner Bros. hits, "A Successful Calamity," starring George Arliss, opens at the Belle Theatre today with the celebrated star in the role of an American financier of international reputation, who finds his millions keeping his family away from him because of the many things they permit his wife and children to do with their time.

Mary Astor, one of the screen's loveliest heroines, appears as the young wife of Mr. Arliss, whose "scads of money" permits her to indulge in such luxuries as befriending and subsidizing young composers, redecorating the more comfortable mansion in modernistic fashion and giving mustache fox dressers and debutantes. The children in "A Successful Calamity" are portrayed by Evelyn Knapp and William Janney. Both of them are so occupied with his pleasures that their father is almost a stranger to them.

Mr. Arliss contributes another of his faultless performances to "A Successful Calamity" his role of millionaire, who tells his family that he has lost his fortune in order to bring them closer to him again, allowing him a certain range of action. The star reveals his ability as dramatic hero and comedian in this picture of modern life among the millionaires, where only leaders are those who are truly faithful to the head of the house.

"The supporting cast of "A Successful Calamity" includes such stags and screen favorites as Grant Mitchell, Portunio Bonanova, David Torrence, Hardie Albright, Hale Hamilton, Oscar Apfel and Randolph Scott.

The many Belleville admirers of Charlie Chase, the screen's most versatile comedian, will be pleased to hear that he is appearing on the same program with the above feature offering in his latest laugh-packed comedy, "First in War," which consists of the studies in Hollywood and its famous screen stars are revealed in "Magic Glass" which will be exhibited with an interesting Pathamount Pictorial.

The four Marx Brothers, Groucho, Chico, Harpo, Zeppo, go collegiate in their latest and funniest comedy, "Horse Feathers," opening at the Belle Saturday, for three days. To accommodate the crowd on Saturday afternoon a continuous performance will be prescribed, commencing at 1 p.m. and running to 5 p.m. "Horse Feathers" will be exhibited at 1.30 p.m. and 3.50 p.m.

Paul Waner Clouts 58th Double to Nearly Tie Record

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Among the lingering heroes of the closing baseball season is Manager Lew Fonseca of the Chicago White Sox, who have not turned as well as their illustrious neighbors from the other side of town.

Fonseca, in his first full season as pilot of a big league club, not only has been forced to struggle along with a chronic loser, but probably has had the biggest turnover of talent since the game began. Unlike he used a card index system, he must have experienced many a difficult moment trying to remember what players were on a list at any given time.

Of youthful glove, the records disclose, a total of 25 have graced the Sox line-up since the season opened. The total is one for the ledger books in the two major leagues was around 13 fingers, first and last, giving aggies of Fonseca's problems. The figures prove, however, that the Sox owners have been going out and getting them in an effort to build up their forces.

White Sox Win Twice

Two veterans of the Sox staff, Milt Gaston and Hal Gregory, returned in expecting work yesterday in beating Detroit (twice, 11-3 and 9-1). "Red" Kress was the hitting star of the double victory, cracking a home run, four doubles and a pair of singles.

Babe Ruth returned to the Yankee line-up, still slightly wobbly from his illness, but the league champions were given an 8 to 4 drubbing by the ex-champion Athletics. "Red" Ruffing, regarded as the logical choice to face the Cubs in the first game of the World Series, was pounded for ten hits, including Jimmie Foxx's 54th home run. The Babe got a single in four trips.

Washington took both ends of a double header from the Boston Red Sox, 1 to 0 and 3 to 2, the latter going ten innings. The double win clinched third place in the American League for the Senators, as Cleveland was dropping a 4 to 3 decision to Walter Stewart of the St. Louis Browns.

National League

The New York Giants continued their great stretch drive in the National League by shading the Boston Braves 2 to 1 in a ten inning duel between Carl Hubbell and Tom Zachary. Zachary passed Oz Bottomley on a base on balls to force across the winning run in the tenth.

Pittsburgh sewed up second place by defeating the champion Cubs, 6 to 5. Paul Waner clouting his 58th double and coming within one of the League record. Dizzy Dean pitched his 17th victory as the Cardinals shut out the Reds, 5 to 0. The rookie yielded only five hits. Brooklyn and the Phillies were idle.

SWAM DISTANCE IN RECORD TIME

Tommy Pedder Went to Massasaga Park And Return

Seemingly in excellent condition Tommy Pedder pulled himself out of the cold waters of the bay of Quinte at 3.20 on Wednesday afternoon exactly 3 hours and 55 minutes after he had plunged in to attempt swimming to Massassaga Point and back. Pedder covered the course, some seven miles in all, in the above mentioned remarkable time.

Pedder was accompanied by Tex Harris and Joe Hogan, two friends of Pedder's, who followed the youthful swimmer during the entire course in a row boat. Pedder started off from the local Government Dock and immediately crossed the bay in general direction of Peach Point striking the current of the south channel before he turned in the direction of Hudson. Using a one-two overhand stroke Pedder made exceedingly fast time on the first leg of his journey, when he arrived at Massassaga Point about one hour and forty minutes after he had left the center of the dock. Pedder then reverses the boat's direction and Point swimming up the north shore until he arrived opposite the fish hatchery. Striking out for swimming with a steady strong stroke and changed his course a bit when eventually took him out into the middle of the bay. Pedder came straight up the centre of the bay just missing a couple channel current by a few feet.

Pedder finished in fine condition experiencing no distress during the entire trip down the bay, and return. When asked how he felt after he had pulled himself up on the government dock, Pedder replied "Never felt better." He seemed to bear out his words of the ordeal as he took a slight rub-down and returned home.

Pedder was the only person seven miles in all, on a personal bet with a friend of his, who was red that Pedder could not swim to Massassya Point and back in seven hours.

VICS MEET NORTH BAY

Play First Game in Northern Town on Saturday

North Bay intermediates will be the opponents of the Belleville Victorias in the next round of the Intermediate B Provincial playdown due to their win in last night's death fixture with Barrie on Wednesday afternoon at Muniscing. A score of 17-5 North Bay simply ran wild in the fifth frame and tossed eleven runs to sail the victory. Newton Thompson connector of the O.B.A.A. for this district notified the Ontario Intelligencer today that the Vics would travel to North Bay on Saturday with the return game in Belleville on Wednesday next. The game at North Bay will be called at three o'clock standard time with neutral umpires from that district in charge of the game and arrangements when the return game is played here.

The Victorias have had a long layoff since their last round with Orono but "Chummy" Gerow their boss pilot had the team out for several practices and they have benefitted by the rest that their schedule previously had been on the heavy side. The Boys are confident they can enter the final round by knocking the North Bay team but too much confidence has often spoiling a good team. The pitching situation of the Vics will be made until game time but it is more than likely that Eric Bonnell will receive the call to start the game on Saturday. In any case there is a chance for a win, Campaigns will be thrown in. Archie is quite hot at present and will open with the start he makes in the series. The final game of the series Vics to come through and a large crowd will see them. Both of the teams, when they line up for the game on Wednesday next should be at the fair grounds. The Vics leave by train for Friday evening.

HAD RHEUMATISM FOR 20 YEARS

But None Since 1930

This man must have something like a record for suffering. He says: "From 1910 to 1930—that is 20 years—I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism. I am pleased to say that since then up to date I have been free from that dreadful pain, simply by taking Sloan's Liniment." And nothing else, I must say that 20 years is a long time to have that awful rheumatic pain about you.—W.N.U.

Your rheumatism is just like his and everyone else's. It is caused by sharp-edged uric acid crystals getting into your joints. Kruschen will dissolve those crystals away. Furthermore—if you keep up the "little daily dose" ever afterwards, it will never be possible for them to form again. Rheumatism will be gone for good.

CONACHER RETURNS TO WRESTLING GAME

Lionel Conacher, wrestler, hockey player and all round athlete, will soon return to the wrestling wars—plus a special protector for the slippery mat, he announced today.

Out of action for several weeks on account of an injury to his elbow

CURRENT SPORT
Knocks and Boosts

By Ed. Farmer

Harry Dorsa, late of the St. Michael's Juniors and Toronto Civic Service hockey teams, was a visitor in town recently. Harry looks to be in the pink of condition and told us that his brother "Red" is thinking of jumping to the New York Americans this winter. Red was the star shifter backing the West Toronto juniors, Arena Gardens and later in the Toronto City League and should make a valuable addition to any team as he was always of the rough and ready type.

Following Saturday night's wrestling bouts in Picton the "grunt and groan" artists will return to Belleville to start their fortnightly go. Our wish came true. Scotty Mc-Dougall has been matched to meet the Masked Marvel at the arena in order to add a little spice to the show. Red La Rocque has accepted Scotty's invitation to coach the "mystery wrestler." There was some little controversy over Red La Rocque's coaching as it was thought that this would be included on the next card to be presented in town.

We hear that the "risers" made a successful trip to Gananoque to Kingston on Tuesday night. Following the finish of the evening, when Alec Kazaboski beat Thomas Boyle, the fans got so excited they literally tore the ring down. Boyle is somewhat of a showman and the Limestoners took the ball, book, line and sinker. Those Kingstonians always failed to fall for something that was "in the bag." Here's some more good news for the "rassling" fans—Leonard referee will be sent to Belleville next week. (It's about time).

According to the latest sport dispatches Jack Sharkey still wants to defend his heavyweight title once more and then he intends to retire. We'll wager all the tea in China that if he only defends his title once more it won't be with Max Schmeling. It looks as though Sharkey wants to retire as champion. Well, why not? They're all doing it, so why not the Boston pedlar. Schmeling gave Sharkey all the chances in the world for a return bout but it looks as though the German will get the proverbial run around from Jack. If Maxie can again annex the heavyweight title he will be the first defeated world's champion ever to regain the crown.

In all probability Bay Bush of the Cubs and George Pipgras of the Yankees will oppose each other in the first game of the world's series next Wednesday. Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs announced that Bush would pitch as which has an area of 31,810 square miles.

Unless Ruth is Improved Yanks Will Not Have Edge in Outfield

Riggs Stephenson And Kiki Cuyler to be Reckoned With

(By Allan Gould) Associated Press Sports Editor.)

New York Sept. 22—Unless the leading exponent of the strategic value of the home run, Babe Ruth, is in much improved health a week hence the Yankees likely will not show any advantage over the Chicago Cubs insofar as the cleanup blows of their outfielders are concerned in the forthcoming battle for the baseball championship of the world.

It is true the Yankees, on paper, show a heavier punch but this is offset by the fact, Ruth has to contend with a bigger "rummy ache than all the rest of the outfielders combined. If the Babe is not in there best with his slugging besides routing his defiance to the enemy, he wobbly gait the Cubs may pluck up sufficient courage forthwith to chase the Yankees well over Colonel Ruppert's expensive premises in the Bronx, to say nothing of what may happen when the Bruins have their home-town cheers to spur them on.

The only real difference between the two outfield groups is represented by the batting averages of Ruth and Kiki Cuyler, who patrols right field for the Cubs. The unofficial figures are .348 for Ruth and only .326 for Cuyler, but that doesn't tell the real story.

Kiki Roaring Along.

Where Ruth has been laid up and lost considerable of his much-needed strength, Cuyler has come down the home stretch like a forest fire fanned by a gale. The fleet Kiki has been producing the big cleanup wallop where the Bruins needed it. He has such a poor start over the first two or three months of the season that his present average does not do him justice for his hitting well over .300 for the last six weeks.

Taking these facts into consideration, plus Cuyler's far superior defensive skill and base running ability, the Cubs figure to concede little or nothing to their American League rivals in the outfield.

The veteran Riggs Stephenson is a much more dangerous, consistent hitter than Ben Chapman, the Yankees' left fielder, who will menace the opposition most when he can do his speed stuff on the bases. The Kentucky Colonel, Earle Combs, has the hitting edge on his youthful centre field rival. John Francis Moore of the Bruins has been again speed and defensive strength in center field for the younger player.

Each club thus has two world series veterans and one newcomer who will see considerable action. In reserve, the Yankees have Myril Hoag and Sam Byrd and Myril Hoag. The Cubs boast of Footsie Taylor, a useful portside hitter and Frank Demaree, recently brought up late this season from Sacramento.

FRUIT GIRLS WIN EASILY

Defeat Colborne 18-3 in Loosely Played Contest

In a rather one sided exhibition softball game, the local Belleville Fruit ladies defeated the Colborne girls by the score of 18 to 3 at the armouries lawn Wednesday evening.

The visiting girls from the village in the west were absolutely no match for the fast Fruit girls after the locals had taken a substantial lead they literally played with the visitors and made the game somewhat uninteresting to the few spectators present. Molly Gray started on the mound for the home team and stood the Colborne batters on their ear. Later she was replaced by Babe Lewis, who finished the game by tossing them over to the visitors. Hilda McMichael and Doris Bland were the big hitters for the winners, while Nellie McMichael played stellar ball while on the receiving end of the combined efforts of Gray and Lewis A. Young was the best sweatsmith for the visitors.

instead of just a few more miles to Valley Stream and Farmer's Inn. Her mood of pleasure and excitement was suddenly shattered.

"I'm leaving the Castilian the first of the month, Blahy." The the bombshell Morgan dropped. "Going over to Blower Brothers to head up publicity for all their houses."

"That's just fine, Mr. Morgan. Congratulations." Miriam was sure she got that off convincingly, did not show any of the consternation she felt. What would become of her? Would the new man at the Castilian keep her on? Would he be some hatchet-in-the-neck.

You seem pretty well pleased about getting rid of me," Morgan grinned a little and his eyes left the road a moment to look at her. "I guess I am kind of a tough boss to work for, but I'm not one. Too much to do. No time to be polite".

Miriam was thankful that they were turning into the Valley Stream drive, but she could think of nothing to say that did not seem silly. Arrival there and a light laugh would cover the lack of a direct reply.

Inside, Al Meyers spotted them and led the way to a table near the door.

"How's it going, Al? The gal's knockin' 'em dead?" Morgan asked their host.

"Swell, up to a couple of minutes ago. One of the chorus dames took a dive off the top step and busted her ankle. Like to bust the show for us. That's about everything from now for the party. Do you want to go?"

A solo date with "Blah" Morgan who was careful never to take out one woman alone...who was famous for dragging a gang around with him! The darkish feminine thrill gave way in Miriam to pique when she told herself, that he could quickly explain this way as using another girl for business reasons.

"But my clothes!" She shrugged her shoulders and threw out her arms expressively in mock horror at the idea of going to an opening in an office dress.

"Well, beat it home and change. Meet me back here at eight and we'll eat at Mardi's". He turned back to his table, his manner no different from that of having just dictated a letter. Into the coldness, Miriam jammed her hat on her head, grabbed her pocketbook and whirled out of the office with.

"Certainly, Mr. Morgan."

Dinner at Mardi's had been nice, Miriam thought, and this moon that shone down on Southern Parkway, on the car, on "Blah" Morgan and herself was even nicer. She wished this were a long ride instead of just a few more miles to Valley Stream and Farmer's Inn. Her mood of pleasure and excitement was suddenly shattered.

"Certainly, Mr. Morgan."

Dinner at Mardi's had been nice, Miriam thought, and this moon that shone down on Southern Parkway, on the car, on "Blah" Morgan and herself was even nicer. She wished this were a long ride herself. She heard Meyers speaking.

"Hi, you say she's a dancer, 'Blah' she is. I can use her, because the front line is unbalanced without the tall who busses her ankle. If Miss Haley will just come with me, we'll see about contracts. That one dame's ought to be about right."

"Blah" nodded, the stony expression still on his face, and sat down at the table as Miriam left to follow Meyer.

Through the finding of clothes and difficulty with shoes, through the quite practice of the routine with the line, backstage, and through the wings and out on the floor, Miriam's mind, her whole mind in a base, except that part of it trained to function automatically in the guidance of hands and feet. While taking down one of "Blah's" press stories, she told herself. She must spur herself to the highest possible performance under almost impossible conditions.

Once on the floor and finding things going all right, she relaxed and looked for "Blah". She found him and Meyer finally. Meyer was staring at her and talking. "Blah's" expression was blank. Miriam went through three numbers, an encore and the finale without breaking up the line's routine and felt a glow of pride at her accomplishment. She smiled and thanked the girls and Texas for their congratulations as she dressed. Slipping out of the dressing room, she tried to find her way back to the table. For a moment she was lost until she smelled food in the kitchen. From there she made her way into the dining room. "Blah" saw as she approached and said;

"Come on. Let's go."

Miriam hesitated and looked at the table. "Hard labor makes me hungry."

"The food not-so-good. I know a place where the sandwiches from here, if you can wait—"

"Certainly, Mr. Morgan."

Once alone in the car, she turned to look at "Blah" staring straight ahead at the lights depending on seeing one spot on the windshield. Finally he spoke.

"Just what I always said—the girls are all crazy about me."

"You don't, up, 'Blah' Morgan.

I'm one frail who's not!"

"What do you mean you're not? I give you the chance of your lifetime and you jump at it. Oh, you did, sugar! I'm not sore about it a year from now? Are you going to be getting the kick out of it you did tonight?"

"A year from now!Don't be silly. ...what are you talking about?"

"Didn't Meyer tell you to be back there tomorrow?"

"I didn't see Meyer; I got lost in the kitchen."

"I didn't see Meyer's Morgan explained. That meaklike expression came back over his features. "Then it's my pleasure to tell you you're hired at the rate of Gals at thirty-five per and I suppose you'll be mighty glad to get thirty-five instead of working for some bum like me. Miriam was a modern girl, versed in the knowledge that she was good enough for professional work. Then belplessly she turned to Morgan.

"But, 'Blah' please, I don't want to work in a chorus. I want to go along with you to Elinor Brothers. You need a good secretary all the time." The thought of leaving "Blah", his leaving her, filled her with painful consternation.

"Are you crazy, Miriam, uh....I mean, Haley. There's a thousand girls in Broadway jump at the chance I made for you tonight. Are you good or not, rather work for me?"

Miriam nodded. She felt as if she said anything she'd give all her feelings away completely.

"Well, you're not. You can't. They got a secretary for me over in the new office and she's related to the Hoovers."

Without going to work at Farmer's Inn after all began to parade through Miriam's mind and she belatedly realized that "Blah" was saying something more and the car was slowing to a stop.

"...But, Miriam, if you want to stick around with a boss like me, maybe, well—I need a wife worse than I do a secretary."

Until Miriam felt his arms drawing her closer, she refused to credit the sweet happiness in her heart. Then she leaned close to him and whispered...

"Certainly, Mr....Oh,oh, 'Blah!'

A Night in the Chorus and with 'Blah'

By Jane Brice

"Heavy date tonight, Haley?" Miriam was so startled that she missed the pad of paper to the Castilian theatre and came down with the floor mamp on the back of her left hand. This was the first time her boss had ever paused a personal remark or shown any interest in her outside of office routine. Furthermore, a girl did not accept personalities from "Blah" (Blah) Morgan, press agent without peer by Lillian—Publicity Director of the Castilian. All Broadway knew "Blah" Morgan's philosophy. "They'll do anything to get into theatres or on the stages. The great Blah!"

Miriam looked over at Morgan who was staring at a telegram just delivered. He repeated: "Any date tonight, Haley?"

"Why—why, no Mr. Morgan," she answered and the great "Blah" continued irrevsently;

"What's the idea—going over to Nick's for night leaems of late?" His question was more than a little scornful. Miriam knew that he was aware she went to Nick's Studio almost every evening during her lunch hour and Saturday afternoons, and supposed that he classed her with the rest of the stage-door girls. She always told herself she was not exactly that way, but she was after the money that a good dancer could earn.

"No night lessons, Mr. Morgan. I'm not doing anything tonight. Want a date?" She frightened her self with that last query. It dizzied a letter. Not to be seldone, Miriam jammed her hat on her head, grabbed her pocketbook and whirled out of the office with.

He stared at her without smiling for a moment and then frowned.

"As a matter of fact that's what I do want, I guess." He waved the telegram and explained. "Al Meyer's opening Farmer's Inn at Valley Stream tonight with Texas Tommie and her Gay Girls in the floor show. This is a follow up of his invitation to Morgan and party. I forgot all about it. Meet me now for the party. Do you want to go?"

BODY OF BOY STRIKE VICTIM BORNE MILES

South River, M.J., Sept. 22—The body of 8-year-old Waller Rojek, killed by a bullet Monday in a riot that marked the opening of the needleworkers' strike, was carried two miles through the streets of South River today in a funeral procession of nearly 3,000 persons.

Oscar Pavlowich, 29, of East Brunswick, arrested today on a charge of malicious mischief, was the 34th man taken into custody as a result of the riot, although police did not connect him directly with the battle. They charged him with having taken part in the attack on the Rojeks Plant.

4 YEAR TERM TO S. RAFUSE

Former Bank Manager Has 15 Days to File Appeal

WINDSOR, N.S., Sept. 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—Sydney A. Rafuse, convicted Wednesday on charges of theft, forgery and uttering, was sentenced by Mr. Justice Chisholm to four years in Dorchester Penitentiary on the first count and two years on the second count, the sentences to run concurrently. Fifteen days are allowed to file an appeal, but counsel previously intimated his action would not be taken.

STRIKE PACT UPON WAGES

Reinstatement of Lancashire Workmen is Discussed

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 22—(AP)—Cotton owners and union representatives began to-day the cotton strike in the Lancashire district, reached an agreement today on wages and began considering reinstatement of men on strike.

The wage agreement is a compromise which will mean a reduction of about 8 1-3 per cent in pay for the men. The problem of reinstatement also is delicate although it concerns principally not more than 2,000 of the men on strike, on the reinstatement of this comparatively small number two conferences already have split.

ROUND TABLE PARLEY MAY BE OUTCOME

Bus and Truck Transportation Solely in Hands of Provinces

BEST IN DOMINION

Competition Would Then be on More Equitable Basis

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—A round table conference to settle the future of motor bus and truck transportation over the Dominion's highways is a probability. At the conference representatives of the provinces would attend. Dominion authorities to map out a program to relieve the railways of the heavy loss of revenue now suffered from this means of transport.

Such a round-table gathering which is likely to be called by Federal authorities, is suggested in the report of Hon. Lyman P. Duff on the Royal Commission investigation of transportation problems.

The provinces hold the key to the situation. They alone can regulate the business of the motor bus and truck transportation lines in solely provincial matter. They have exclusive jurisdiction. This might be all changed at the meeting. The Duff Commission, it is understood, unanimously favored the placing of this traffic under Dominion control, and the main purpose of such a conference would be to get the provincial governments to surrender the present exclusive jurisdiction to the Federal authorities.

A standard set of regulations governing the privately operated truck lines might result, with the Board of Railway Commissioners the body believed appointed as their operation. Under such authority, it is believed, competition with the railways would be placed on a more equitable basis.

YOUTH ADMITS THEFT OF CAR

Arrested in Marmora When Purchasing Gasoline

While endeavoring to purchase gasoline at a Marmora service station a man giving the name, Leslie Jackson, of Belleville, was held for questioning by Provincial Constable Ellis of Madoc this morning. The officer became suspicious of the young man, the actions of the officer arrested Jackson on a nominal charge of vagrancy after questioning him at some length. The youth admitted stealing the car from which he was travelling in Scarboro, and was subsequently arrested.

The officer immediately informed the head office of the provincial police and Jackson's story will later be confirmed, when the police representative from Toronto arrives.

How the blaze, described as the most disastrous for the city since the burning of St. Michael's Academy in 1929, started, has not yet been definitely learned. Thick, rolling clouds of smoke which temporarily obscured nearby buildings on Front Street, hampered seriously firemen in their work. Smoke helmets which were donned proved almost useless in the thick haze, and several times members of the fire department were forced to retire to the open in the face of the overpowering heat. One fireman, James Macdonald, was temporarily overcome by the dense smoke and had to be assisted from the floor of the smoking shop to the street. For a time the flames threatened to crawl between partitions and wipe out the whole block. Only prompt action by the department saved the rest of the building.

How the fire started was graphically described by Mr. Shaw who was in the shop at the time.

Beginning in a rack of suspended clothing at about three-quarters of the distance of the store down, it was at first barely visible to him. An alarm was at once sent to the department by Mr. John Bego, employee of the store. By this time the firemen had arrived the whole back of the store was ablaze.

"It could have been extinguished with a few pails of water during the first few moments," declared Mr. Shaw.

On the arrival of the department it became necessary for the men to crawl on their hands and knees to the rear of the store where the greatest heat from the blaze was burning stock. Successfully extinguishing this they moved to the rear of the building and after considerable work managed to locate several fresh outbreaks in the store rooms. During the interval fresh alarms were turned in from bystanders. By one o'clock the last vestiges of fire were under control. Tenants upstairs got out in time with no damage.

The property was formerly owned by the late Col. Laiser.

Hope of Stockholders To Salvage Investments In Insull Trusts Lost

May Institute Bankruptcy Proceedings to Collect

INSOLVENT

Unable to Meet Expenses of an Inventory Being Made

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 23 — The last slender hope of stockholders that receivership proceedings might salvage part of their $300,000,000 investment in two of Samuel Insull's investment trusts have apparently been shattered.

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, who appointed receivers for the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and the Corporation Securities Company the deposed utility king's most ambitious projects, has decided the best course open was to institute bankruptcy proceedings against both concerns.

"It seems unlikely," Judge Lindley declared, "that the stockholders will receive anything on their investments. The best course of action is to institute bankruptcy proceedings, under which something may be saved for the creditors of the concern."

Receivers for the Corporation Securities Company filed their report in which they told that the investment trust was "hopelessly insolvent."

The assets of the once $140,000,000 concern were so meagre, the receiver reported, that they were unable to meet the expense of having an inventory made.

"There were bales and bales of worthless stock certificates in the treasury when we took possession April 14," they reported. "The only assets concealed into cash were $30,000 in tax anticipation warrants."

Through the maze of statistics contained in the report could be traced the last desperate efforts of Samuel Insull to save the tottering company. The statement of liabilities indicated he had obtained money from banks from affiliated companies, and from manufacturers who had supplied equipment he had seen. Then with other sources exhausted, and the market value of the company's securities steadily declining he had pledged his own credit in a last valiant attempt to stave off disaster.

Two Spiders Bind Snake In Five Inches of Web

Elgin, Ill., Sept. 23.—The latest news from the snake-spider war is that two spiders are picking on one eight-inch garter snake in the basement of the home of Roland Swanberg, a bank teller.

The fight is believed to have started as least a week ago because the spiders already have the snake wound up in about five inches of web. One of the spiders is a male and the other a female. Observers pointed out that even if the female follows the old spider custom of eating her mate she will still have one left to carry on a finish fight with the snake.

"This battle will go to a finish," Swanberg said. There will be no intervention.

Elgin is two miles from St. Charles, where Mr. and Mrs. Swanberg of 23 days between a snake and a spider, which was finally reminded by the Mayor, following protests from the Humane Society. The Mayor liberated the snake which is now getting fat on a diet of cream at St. Charles Hotel.

Brief Fire Causes Heavy Loss to Oak Hall Stock

Damage Only Partially Covered by Insurance Owner Says

RAPID SPREAD

A roaring conflagration which swept through the store and stock of the Oak Hall clothing store, on Front Street, just before noon Friday, gutted the interior of the shop and caused damage to stock and fittings tentatively valued in the neighborhood of $30,000. The loss according to Mr. J. D. Shaw is largely covered by insurance. It is reported by Mr. Shaw that operations of refitting the store will be commenced immediately.

How the blaze, described as the most disastrous fire in the city since the burning of St. Michael's Academy in 1929, started, has not yet been definitely learned. Thick, rolling clouds of smoke which temporarily obscured nearby buildings on Front Street, hampered seriously firemen in their work. DEATH FAST TO END SHORTLY

Mahatma Anxious Soon to Partake of Food Again

FACE DRAWN

Seventy Hours of Fast Showing no Thin Form of Gandhi

Poona, India, Sept. 23—(AP) — Mahatma Gandhi's death fast may be ended today.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, one of his former lieutenants who has been active in the conference of Indian leaders to reach a compromise over the last few days visited the Mahatma early this morning and said afterward he hoped an agreement would be reached before the day is over which would enable Gandhi to partake of food again.

The Mahatma himself slept well during the night, lying on a wide bed out under a somewhat shabby Mango tree in the yard in front of the jail. When he awoke he continued his morning prayers as usual.

Compromise Plan.

The compromise plan of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, presented before the his arbitrations of Indian troubles with the government, was the one which, it was understood, was partially accepted. It calls for joint electorates for the Hindus and the untouchables, with reservation for the latter. The point on which agreement has been reached concerns primary and final elections for untouchable representatives in the legislatures.

The chief difficulty, however, was over the insistence of Dr. Sir Mrar Bhimrao Ambedkar before the 60,000,000 untouchables, for appointments of untouchables in the government service, provision of funds for educational facilities and the right to appeal to the Viceroy. Gandhi's face was drawn and his eyes sunken after more than 70 hours of fasting but he still had energy enough to dictate many letters and to see a large number of visitors. Physicians warned him to talk as little as possible, however, in order to save his vocal chords for the strain of the conferences.

Appeal to People.

Gandhi issued an appeal to the people of India to refrain from fasting with him and insisting that instead of this they set about doing all in their power to wipe out the stigma of untouchability.

Mindful apparently that an optimistic over the outcome in a statement by the Associated Press this morning.

"His quite optimism regarding the situation," the statement said, "My optimism may be premature. But I cannot help myself. I do ask my reasons for it I would have God alone. I have a living faith in this fast as a God-ordained step and I have an equal faith in this cause.

"Although weakness must naturally come on during the day as compared with my previous fasts I think I am keeping up much more easily. I find myself also in perfect peace. By the mercy of God I have found no difficulty in carrying on prolonged sustained conversation with the questing and perplexing with the various deputations.

"Although I have required tremendous concentration I have not found any difficulty. I know, however, that I cannot carry on 1½ days more.

Bombay, Indian, Sept. 23—(AP) —A plan dealing with the electorate position of the depressed classes has been agreed to by Hindu and Untouchable leaders and accepted in this case by Mahatma Gandhi, private advices from Poona said today.

Leaders of both sides began discussion of many important points in the plan before holding a further interview with Gandhi at 4 p.m. today.

New Coupler Question Stirs Commissioner to Declare Board is Fair

PSITTACOSIS BLAMED UPON LOVE BIRDS

Washington, D.C., Sept. 23—(AP) —Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, whose 1929 campaign against Psittacosis resulted in clamping down a strict parrot import quarantine today warned that this methods can again be expected to check new appearances of "parrot fever".

He said cases now arising are being traced almost invariably to domestic love birds, believed by physicians the source of Mrs. Wilson Abrahm's illness.

Last night Dr. Cumming disclosed to Boise via airmail a packet of "parrot fever" circulars to serve as the treatment of the Idaho Senator's wife.

ACTION LAID OVER

Letter From R. M. Wolvin Rouses C. P. Fullerton to Statement

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—Featured by a strong statement from Chief Commissioner C. P. Fullerton, in defence of the Board of Railway Commissioners, hearing of an application by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in connection with the adoption of a new coupler or train pipe connector, was postponed indefinitely here today.

All six members of the Commission were on the bench when the application was made by A. D. Hoye, K.C., on behalf of the Brotherhood. It is a matter which has been before the Board for seven years in one form or another, but lately to prove the value of various connectors or couplers are not yet interchangeable by reason of these connectors that they would promote safety of railway employees inasmuch as they prevent a gap between cars and disconnect and connect cars, etc., when uncoupling and coupling trains.

Inconsistent Tests

The hearing today was as to what procedure should be adopted for further dealing with the matter. The Chief Commissioner said that in view of the inconclusiveness of tests so far carried out, and the need for further experiment and investigation, and also in view of railway conditions due to traffic and finance, the present was not an opportune time to consider the question.

In the course of his judgment he said he had received a letter from R. M. Wolvin representing the Dominion Government Canal with pipe line connectors saying "personally I feel that the Board of Railway Commissioners is open to criticism for permitting an improvident matter like this to lie dead for two years. I write as one who has invested a large amount of money in an effort to make a contribution to transportation, and I feel that the Board of Railway Commissioners is improvident and remiss if not due law should show some real interest in the matter. I am sure that they cannot carry out such law as exist."

Remarks Resented

"On behalf of the Board I resent any such remarks," declared the Chief Commissioner, speaking for the solidity false. I hope Mr. Wolvin is present, or that he will hear what I say about this matter, for the Board has not been remiss. I was not requested by the Board to deal with it here a year ago, I do not think Mr. Wolvin was here. Since then however we have tried to get together to arrive at some understanding in this matter. I have read the evidence, taken at the former hearings, in full, and I resent the suggestion that this Board has been derelict in its duty. It has done everything it could. It listened to the evidence for four or five days. Experiments and tests were then arranged for. The Brotherhood did not suggest any time nor too much sense—that an order should be made at that time."

LIBERALS MAY RESIGN POSTS ON SATURDAY

Feeling Runs High in London Political Circles

AWKWARD CRISIS

London, Sept. 23 (AP) — Excitement ran high in political circles today because of the belief that Liberal ministers will resign when the MacDonald cabinet meets tomorrow to consider the tariff agreements of the Ottawa Imperial Conference.

Appeal will be made by the proponents of free trade to remain in the government despite their antagonism toward the Ottawa measures.

The flurry centres around Sir Herbert Samuel, the Home Secretary. Sir Herbert informed the executive of the Liberal party this week that the Liberal ministers had agreed on the action they will take tomorrow. He did not say what this action would be.

If Sir Samuel leads the Liberals out of the National Government an awkward situation will face Prime Minister MacDonald. It is the general political opinion, however, that if Sir Herbert resigns his political policies he will not become actively opposed to the government but will continue to support general policies of the National regime, thus escalated the blow to the MacDonald prestige.

Other Liberals in the MacDonald cabinet are Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary; Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Scotland; Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade and Sir Donald MacLean, Minister of Education.

Descends 2,200 Feet Into Ocean And Describes His Experiences

Hamilton, Bermuda, Sept. 23 (AP) —Two men, protected against 4,800 tons pressure by a curious device known as the bathysphere, descended 2,200 feet into the Atlantic Ocean yesterday, and described what they saw to the world.

The descent was made by Dr. William Beebe, New York scientist, and the inventor of the bathysphere, and Otis Barton, and was several hundred feet farther down than Dr. Beebe had ever been before.

The experiment was made in the ocean seven miles off Nonsuch Island, Bermuda, from the ship "Present," which rode in glorious sunshine atop a heavy ocean swell.

Tried to Borrow Money to Talk to Boy Later Found Gassed With Note

New York, Sept. 23—(By the Canadian Press)—A week ago an obviously impoverished man entered Brooklyn police headquarters and tried to borrow $10 to telephone to California.

"My child is dying in Pasadena," he said, "maybe my voice might help him." He didn't get the money.

Today he was found gassed to death in a furnished room. A letter from his wife was on the top and he was facing a photograph of a woman and three children. The letter said in part:

"I have just returned from laying away our darling little Gay—you must know that he is now safe and happy."

The dead man was identified as a Virginian, 45, who had been employed in a Brooklyn Department store.

EDDIE FINALLY LANDS BIG ONE

There's a certain thrill experienced by even veteran fishermen attendant on eider bass fishing even when the specimens are only average size. But when the angler happens to hook and safely land one of record size, then the day's limit is about complete. Ed. Thomas, local tobacconist, can truly lay claim to the capture of the largest black bass yet reported this season. Caught in Weller's Bay, near Mr. Jones' cottage, Wednesday afternoon, the bass which finally surrendered after an hour's struggle, tipped the scales at 7 pounds and one quarter ounces. It was 21 inches long and 14 and three-quarter inches in girth. A live minnow was used for bait. At present the fine specimen is in the hands of a local taxidermist for mounting.

Thieves Clean Out Refrigerator Eat Pie and Berries in Rear Garden

While the family was temporarily absent from the house, unidentified thieves who entered the home of Mrs. W. H. Hart, 67 Dutton Street, early Thursday evening coolly stripped the locked refrigerator of several eatables, including a freshly made pie and a bowl of raspberries, made their way out of the house and proceeded, disturbing anything else, and proceeded to the rear garden of Mr. Albert Thompson, a neighbor, where they calmly disposed of both pie and berries. The empty dishes which were left behind were discovered and traced back to their owner on the following day by Mr. Thompson through enquiries he had made. This is the second occasion the house of Mrs. Hart has been entered by prowlers, that one year ago several small articles were taken from the house by persons who still remain unidentified.

Following the episode of the raspberries and pie, Mr. John F. Parks, 35 Charlotte Street, an adjoining avenue, was awakened by prowlers in the rear of his home. They were alarmed by the appearance of Mr. Parks and promptly fled on his approach.

HONOLULU VAGABONDS STOPPED THE KARNIVAL

Vaudeville Performance Best of Week so Far

Vaudeville offerings at the Kiwanis Karnival were enthusiastically received last night and included an interesting variety of items. Miss Lillian Marsh in her smart dance act once again won the hearts of the audience. The numbers were introduced by the nonchalant master of ceremonies, "Slim" Burgess who never seems to run out of good ones to spring on his hearers.

The Honolulu Vagabonds, frequently heard over Toronto stations, literally stopped the show, and these clever young men were brought back again and again by a delighted audience. Their novel yodelling, tap dancing were all part of their act, which was an instantaneous success. The Low sisters in a clever tap dance number were splendid but their acrobatic dancing was wonderful. How they ever finally disentangled themselves is still a mystery to most of the audience, but with grace and precision the tiny dancers presented figure after figure of the intricate dance.

Genuine Harris Tweeds Now in Regular Line

Genuine Harris tweeds — known the world over for their distinctive texture—have romance in their very origin. The rough-hewn hand-looms in the little homes of the crofters in the far off Isles of the Scottish Hebrides, this famous cloth is slowly spun by hand. The great mills of the world have tried, without success, to produce a cloth that, for sturdiness, fibre and feel, can compare with the product of the humblest hut in the western Isles.

Mr. D. G. MacKenzie, representing the crofters' tweed industry of the Outer Hebrides is personally demonstrated to visitors at the Canadian National Exhibition the primitive method of weaving Harris tweeds. Not only has he succeeded in arousing a very great amount of interest, but he secured from Tip Top Tailors Limited, a contract to supply them with genuine Harris tweeds of various patterns to be used in making suits and top coats for their famous line of made-to-measure clothes.

Never before have these wonderful tweeds been available at so low a price, and it is typical of the enterprise of Tip Top Tailors Limited that genuine Harris tweeds from the Hebrides can be bought at the regular "Tip Top Tailors' Price of Quality" of $22.50. In making this announcement material available to men throughout Canada at their regular prices, Tip Top Tailors Limited are rendering a service which Canadians will quickly recognize and appreciate.

Vegetables Thieves

Mrs. Carl Conley on Friday, had her garden raided and many beets in her garden and on Saturday morning a number of pails and tubs were missing. So someone has made away with a considerable quantity. It has been petty thieving going on for some time, and it is to be hoped that the culprits will be found out and to clean up the village of such depredations, which are annoying to all.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. Here's How to Stop It.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach disorders, such as indigestion, burning, gas, bloating, sourness, etc., are due to too much acid in the stomach, and not in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining must not be irritated by drugs or by food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. What is needed are those which will neutralize the acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining will then be free to heal. Most authorities agree that the best form of relief is that which is obtained from a mixture of pure bisurated Magnesia and pure powdered Lemon Juice (powder form preferred because it is more convenient to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is obtainable at any druggists. Take it after your meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Conference Record Kept in Films

OTTAWA, Sept.—(By the Canadian Press)—Beginning in full detail, in sight and in sound, the history of the Imperial Economic Conference, Canadian-made motion pictures, now in the Empire archives, Other prints have been made for the Dominions and will be delivered to them on the governments' nation. Particularly noteworthy, in the history of filmmaking in the Dominion, the entire job has been done by Canadians, directed, carried out, by Canadian cameramen, Canadians, using Canadian equipment.

Sequences of the closing ceremonies and the signing of agreements have already been shown in the Capitol Theatre. After days of work certainly indelible word came through that the complete record of the Conference would take place within a few hours. For the balance of the day and all night, crews worked in installing microphones, amplifiers, lighting equipment and all the myriad details necessary essential to the making of a sound picture.

The delegates assembled Saturday August 20, everything was in readiness. As the documents were signed the microphones recorded the sound and recorded for future generations, the cameras presented the scene. Before the leaders of Empire had left the floor of the House, the negative was on its way to Montreal. There, in the laboratories of Associated Screen News, a waiting crew had begun the processing order. An hour later, developed, fixed, washed and dried by remarkably automatic machines, handled by skilled technicians, the first piece of film was ready for the cutting room.

During the night, master prints were made and a waiting plane took those for the United Kingdom in the early morning to catch the Empire ports of Britain at Rimouski. The ship had sailed from Quebec at dawn. The completed sound film depicting the final ceremonies had travelled on the same ship as the delegates who had hurried by fast train to embark.

RAIL COMMENT IS FAVORABLE

Relief Financially Seen as Result of Report on Railways

Montreal, Sept. 23 (CP)— Captains of industry and utility heads commented favorably yesterday upon the recommendations of the Duff transportation committee as outlined in a summary issued from Ottawa.

Sir Charles C. Smith, President of Shawinigan Water and Power Company and President of the Montreal Tramways Company, said the elimination of unnecessary and wasteful competition between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways should ease impair the efficiency of either road, and would at the same time result in a considerable saving.

E. W. Tuller, President of the Canadian Car and Foundries and President of Canadian Steel Foundries, felt sure that the recommendations of the commission would if adopted, do much to solve the transportation difficulties of the Dominion.

Financial Relief

The Dominion Treasury would find considerable relief from the effects of the recommendations of the Duff commission, if it is carried out in the opinion of John S. Norris, Managing Director of Montreal Power Company.

Noah Timmins, President of Hollinger gold mines and a director of many companies said the Sir Lawrence corporation, appears satisfactory with the recommendations and urged that early action by the government on recommendations is essential to solution of Canada's railway problems.

The report of the commission should prove a stabilizing influence, now that it has been made public said Allan A. Mitchell, President and managing director of the Robert Mitchell Company.

VITAMIN B IN BRAN, RESEARCH REVEALS

Also Has "Bulk" to Further Assist Elimination, and Iron for Blood

One of the functions of Vitamin B is to help tone the intestinal tract, and promote elimination. Now, laboratory experiments show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains both of the vitamin.

In addition, ALL-BRAN brings a plentiful supply of "bulk"—which provides the "roughage" needed to exercise the intestines.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to the bran in whole wheat. And the body, it is different from the way you use it in the package. It absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of waste. Because this process makes ALL-BRAN fiber mildless, never irritates.

Another healthful element brought by ALL-BRAN is iron. Tests show this cereal is twice as much usable iron as the same weight of beef liver.

Check common constipation — with its headaches, loss of appetite and energy—by eating this delicious cereal. How much pleasanter than taking pills and drugs — so often habit-forming.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily — sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

SEEING IT THROUGH

Fall fairs in this part of the country are holding their own. This condition of stability in spite of the things which the country needs at this present moment, when confidence and determination are so much needed.

Shannonville, Stirling, Marmora and Belleville have all told the story of confidence in the future by showing grim determination at the present. Other fairs in this district will no doubt indicate in no uncertain manner how the agriculturists have faith in their industry.

Exhibits are up to standard, the livestock shows are much better than they used to be and the general air is one of faith and co-operation.

HANGMAN'S DEATH

Britain's hangman who sent many to eternity lost his reason and in a spell of remorse ended his life, not with the rope with which he had been so familiar but with a razor. This was his second attempt.

No doubt to his harassed mind the rope was too horrible to think of. This may lead sociologists to devise some other means of ending the lives of condemned murderers than by the horrible disgrace of the hemp.

John Ellis had ostracized himself from society for years by reason of his calling. While few would want his job society gave him the job and society not poor Ellis ought to have stood the nerve-strain and disgrace.

His end is sadder than the end of those who passed through his hand. They, society says, deserved to hang. Ellis chose a nasty business but did society's work. He died a martyr to an awful calling.

A suicide's grave is the awful pointer to the world today—a job the law made, made him the agent of execution.

What else can be done with murderers than execute them, no one seems to know, though there are advocates of abolition of capital determination of such cases who say that the rope does not prevent murder. Those who sadly admit the efficacy of capital punishment declare that more murders would take place were executions abolished from the statute books. Hanging is intentionally disgraceful. Probably the lethal chamber is a solution because there may not be so close a contact between the doomed person and the executioner.

A CHRISTIAN COUNTRY

Rev. Dr. R. B. Cochrane's declaration that Canada is not yet economically, socially or industrially a Christian country is one to stir discussion.

In the sense that there are elements in our present civilization which seem at war with the spirit of Christianity he is undoubtedly correct. Yet Christianity has moulded this country as it has moulded modern civilization from something quite different. What the western world would be today without Christianity no one can conceive. The church itself though countless shafts have been levelled at it, is attempting to do its duty for man, welfare organizations are doing noble work under the Christian inspiration; even though many people live as if pagans, they bears the marks of Christian influence.

On the other hand there is a danger in accepting the view that the Christian ideal is unattainable. Man must strive towards it, as nations must, though they fall short of realization.

Perhaps it should be recalled that the Founder of Christianity did not draw up any exact form of worship, any set of laws, or endorse any form of government but simplified the decalogue into two attitudes —one of responsibility towards God and the other of responsibility towards man. The Christian can live under any society though he be compelled by his principles to endeavor to mould it for the better.

No last word in society is possible. There is development and retrogression, it is always in a state of flux and is never set.

Perhaps Dr. Cochrane's statement could be modified to read—that Canada is not as Christian as it should be economically, socially or industrially. But it does bear the marks of Christianity.

However if Dr. Cochrane can by his statement make his hearers and readers improve conditions, his words will have good results.

PURE AS THE AIR

Fresh as the wind which blows over the heather are the works of Sir Walter Scott. It is one hundred years since his writing ceased, but his legacy to mankind has a perennial interest.

Scott in his day thrilled the whole of Europe, he launched the movement of romantic fiction which swept forward to great results on the continent, though no works were as sane as those of the good Sir Walter.

Though the present day may read little Scott and some sneerers may not even have read his deathless stories enshrining characters which stand next to Shakespeare's, his reputation will endure and his works are assured of a revival, because the world of its own nature must come back to the sane views of the knightly romancer.

THE FOUR WINDS
By Aline Michaelis

The four winds of heaven,
They shriek, they sing to me,
All whirling in a dervish dance,
A mood of drunken glee!

The north wind comes shouting
Of lands of ice and snow;
As cold as a forgotten love
His cruel breezes blow.

The east wind comes bearing
The scent of spice and musk,
With tales of avatars outgrown
And all of life a husk!

The west wind comes crooning
Of islands far and fair,
And lapped by blest oblivion,
With beauty dreaming there.

The south wind I love, dear,
It, only, brings to me
The story of your clinging arms,
Your lips of ecstacy!

The four winds of heaven
Go whirling past to-night;
But, dear, the south wind only
Can thrill me with delight!

CIVIC RELIEF IS GOING TO BE NEEDED this winter, although conditions should be materially better than last winter. It is suggested that the City Council deal with this matter early, and appoint an independent committee of citizens to take charge of the work, first making a survey to ascertain just what will be needed. With last winter's experience to go by a much better system and organization can be perfected for the work this winter, and there are a number of hardworking business men of Belleville who are willing to give of their time freely in the work of civic relief to the end that there be no suffering of child or adult.

Plane Forced Down by Rain, Welfare Minister Had to Wade to Shore

Three Attempts Made to Reach Moosonee From Sudbury

IN NO DANGER

Plane Was Left 50 Feet From Shore and Party Waded in

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — An aeroplane flight from Sault Ste. Marie to Moosonee was terminated today at Sudbury, and Hon. W. G. Martin, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare, the possessor of some new thrilling experiences.

Leaving the Sault Wednesday for a flight to Ontario's only seaport to join the party of Ontario legislators, who are inspecting the North Country, Mr. Martin and his companion, Captain Roy Maxwell, Director of the Ontario Provincial Air Service, were forced down three times. One of their landings was made at Bromley Lake, 50 feet from shore, and the minister and the party had to wade in to land, minus their shoes and stockings.

The pilot, piloted by Geo. Phillips, with Gus O'Reilly as mechanic left the lake early in the morning and almost immediately ran into heavy rain, continuing for two hours despite the poor visibility, they came down at Cwvad Lake in Gwvad Township, north of Foleyet on the Canadian National Railway. After an hour's respite the party took off again in a northeasterly direction, but storm necessitated another halt, which was made shortly after at Bromley Lake, where the wading episode was enacted.

"We could hardly get to shore," Mr. Martin said, relating his adventures after the "halt," and we had to leave the machine about 50 feet out.

"Did you have to wade yourself? asks did your shoes and stockings and all that?"

"Oh, yes," Mr. Martin replied. "But I don't see you can give me any better credit for seeing that we got there. He carried some of us."

The Ontario Forestry air base at Fleetwing on the Canadian Pacific Railway was the next stop after leaving Bromley Lake. A three hour stay there was ended when they again headed for Moosonee. Rain caused a fall heavier at this time, and another halt was called for at Sioux Lake, a forestry base near Kapuskasing, where, they left up for the night. The next afternoon the delegs continued and they decided to abandon their projected flight. They returned to Sudbury arriving there early yesterday morning.

NORTH LINES WILL OPERATE

No Injustice to Villages And Industries Along Them

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)— The government will not be in favor of scrapping railway lines to the extent of causing injustice and loss to villages and industries located along them, the conference came from official sources last night.

The suggestion has been made following the publication of the summing up of the report of the Royal Commission on Transportation that economy might be secured to the country, for example, of abandoning one of the three transcontinental lines from Montreal to Vancouver. This will not be done; in fact the comission does not recommend it.

"From a purely economic and railway point of view it might be advisable," said one in close touch with the report, "to abandon one of these lines, but what about the communities that have been built up on it, what about the pulp mills which are dependent on every link of it, such the situation will show that such a step cannot be taken and the people along these lines may be relieved of any anxiety in that regard."

Rumors Has it That Visit to Stockholm Has Significance

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—Europe's royal matchmakers revived their whisperings when the Prince of Wales departed by airplane for Copenhagen, but all reach Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 15.

For one thing, it was described as "a private family visit." Just before leaving Denmark for Stockholm, upon, it was announced tonight, to receive the findings to the governing body.

The organization to turn will recommendations to be the World Economic Conference to be held probably next spring.

METHODISTS AND BAPTISTS TALK UNION

Doctrinal and Property Difficulties in Old Country

WORK TOGETHER

Some Anglicans Think Abbey Might Have Been Used

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Celebrations in connection with the reunion of the three great branches of Methodism which will continue until Sunday have resulted in a number of enquiries as to whether a denominational progress is likely regarding union with the Episcopal denomination.

Methodists and Baptists in the County of Hertfordshire are jointly considering the situation which has been long and keenly debated, especially by the Junior members of both churches.

The vital question of doctrinal difficulties immediately presents itself whereas the union of the three Methodist branches was concerned solely with administrative problems. Added to this is the difficulty of retaining out of the ownership of the church buildings which are owned locally by the Baptists and not by the denomination as a whole.

In view of these difficulties the joint Methodist-Baptist Commission is continuing its work at the present time to a consideration by which the two bodies can work more closely together.

In Church of England circles there is the thought that a fine opportunity was missed in not offering Westminster Abbey for the consummation of reunion by the Methodists. It is not known whether the offer if presented, would have been accepted.

Today the final reunion of the Methodist bodies greetings were received from Premier R. B. Bennett, of Canada and the Earl of Willingdon, Viceroy of India, from the Australian Methodism a presbyterial chair, twelve tables and a fountain, were presente dfor use at future conferences.

MICHIGAN KID UP FOR TRIAL FOR MURDER

Witness State Admission of Crime Made After Arrest

TRIAL OCT. 11

Crown Witnesses Grilled in Cross Examination By Defense

Peterboro, Sept. 23— Following protracted hearing of the Crown's evidence in the trial of Henry Walter Reid, alias the "Michigan Kid" on a charge of murdering his "junk" companion, Harry Thomas, in a boathouse on Rice Lake, Reid was committing for trial Thursday in police court by Magistrate Langley.

Reid will stand trial at the assizes, before Chief Justice Hart of Ontario, which is slated to open here on October 11.

The little man, hunched in the prisoner's dock, seemed much contented with the day's proceedings yesterday, upon which Magistrate Langley committed him for trial before the higher court.

Detective Closely Questioned

Detective Sergeant Wm. Meagher was the main witness, he was subjected to a stiff cross-examination by J. A. O'Brien, defense counsel.

Meagher told of finding Harry Thomas's body in the boathouse, with the fatal stab in the left side, near the heart. Later, the blood-stained knife used in the slaying had been found, he said.

Relating details of Reid's arrest on the morning of Sept. 8 on the Dundas Road, Meagher told of Detective Townhall, the detective said to Reid, "Good morning, Jungle Gardner, who accompanied the officers, had identified Harry Farmland as the wanted man, Reid.

"What's this all about?" Reid had asked when the police first appeared at the barn, where he was working horses, Meagher revealed. Meagher said that he then warned the man that anything he might say would be taken down and might be used against him when he came to trial. No threats or promises were made to Reid, he declared.

Prisoner Interrogated

"What have you to say about the murder?" I asked him," Meagher told the court. "He said he was a victim of circumstances and the murder was committed. I told him it was not concerned with who was there, but what he had to say himself."

"I did the killing'," he replied. "You mean you stabbed him", I asked him. "Yes," Constable Reid answered. "You did it with the knife we found in the boathouse?" He answered yes.

Under cross-examination, Meagher stated that Reid had been held in custody three or four days at Belleville police office. A typed statement, said Meagher, which the prisoner signed, was read over to him, which Reid read himself and signed.

The statement was produced in court, but Meagher refused to let O'Brien told the Magistrate that the statement was entered as an exhibit.

Declines to Repeat

Meagher said that Reid had made no statement, but that it was made to Chief Newhall. Pressed for what Reid had said in the second statement, Meagher declined, that he was not sure what was said and would not repeat any of it.

"It wasn't made to me; it was made to the chief, and I'm not going to repeat any of it because I'm not positive of what was said," he declared, when pressed by Mr. O'Brien for details of the statement.

Later, the witness said that in the second statement, Reid said he killed the man, but that he had done it in self-defense.

"That's different," commented Reid's counsel. Meagher refused to say if Detective Sergeant Townhall in the second statement. He refused to say if Detective Townhall with the officers in the car Reid had made any statement regarding about the killing in self defense.

"Positive of that" asked Mr. O'Brien.

"Yes," replied the detective.

Seaforth, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — While the Conservative forces in Southern Huron continue today their quiet campaign among the electors, sharpening until Monday's nomination proceedings any public appeal, the Liberal organization were preparing for a meeting in Manley, McKillop township. F. G. Sanderson, M.P., for South Perth, will be the chief speaker, supported by the candidate, William H. Golding and by R. J. Deachman of Ottawa.

Last night Mitchell P. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader and member for Elgin in the House of Commons, appealed to an audience in Londesborough to keep the riding in the Liberal fold by electing Mr. Goldin to the seat vacated by the death last June of Thomas Mac-Millan.

Mr. Hepburn held out no hope for the people of this farming constituency from the results of economic conference, from a continuation of the present system of tariffs and from the fact of the time that where the Liberal administration has catered to the interests of the people, the government of Premier Henry was interested only in the manufacturers. While the Liberal government had lowered taxation, the Conservative administration had increased it, he charged.

Referring to gasoline prices, Mr. Hepburn declared that the present government had placed the power in the hands of Canadian oil companies by which they could exact a toll of six or seven cents a gallon on the gasoline used by Canadian people

Third Style Show at Kiwanis Karnival Brings Applause From Large Crowd Present

Costumes Have Charm While Furs and Jewellery Co-ordinate

APPEALING MODES

Coats Shown This Year Are Luxuriously Furred

Another Fashion tale was unfolded last evening, when the third Style Show at the Kiwanis Karnival was presented by W. Wise Ledlie' Wear, with furs by Delaney's and Jewelry by Angus McPee. Styles, that go back many decades were reflected in the charming dresses and coats from the Wise establishment, while also combined also from the Wise store, was perfectly chosen to match the costumes in charm and effectiveness. The show was a complete success from the moment the first mannequin appeared until the curtain fell on the finale.

Afternoon dresses, that had captured the delightful features of the mode of elegance were displayed and exemplified the fashion materials and shades. The use of rougher crepe was noticeable and the predominance of wine tones in the colour chart was striking. The Spanish handwork shade found favour in the sports and business dresses worn by the mannequins.

Luxuriously Furred

Coats were luxuriously furred, every expensive fur being added to the trimming scheme, from the silver fur lavishly used, while Hudson seal appeared to be a favourite fur for the coats of wine shades.

Evening dresses were deceptively simple for the simplicity of their lines was merely to enhance the intricacy of the capes, which accompanied many of these frocks. In lace, in crepe and in satin these gowns were very handsome. Hats in every conceivable shape for fall were shown with the costumes and these were from the Wise store whose selection comprises all that is alluring in headwear for the smart woman.

Sparkling jewels worn with the costumes were from Angus McPee and revealed the latest fancies in costume and evening jewelry. One lovely evening bag, inseparable part of milady's evening costume, were also supplied by this store and were lovely indeed.

Of the many lovely costumes shown last evening a few of the outstanding creations included a fascinating Burgundy afternoon dress of diagonal crepe worn by Miss Bell whose clain for attention was largely due to the unusual trimmings of organdy. The high neckline so favoured this season was included in the model. With this dress was worn a coat of Burgundy suede, whose Queen Anne collar finished in cape effect was of rich black Seal. An afternoon dress of black silk velvet had inserts of cut transparent velvet and was worn with a black coat with silver fox trimmings. Miss Bell wore an interesting evening dress of white lace, its nun's collar fastening far variety by a large clip of jewel.

Miss Gladys Emerson displayed a black silk crepe afternoon dress in chic effect heightened by the use of Elizabethan satin trimmings. Her coat was a black suede model handsomely furred with muskrat. A three-piece sport suit in Malaga knitted fabric had the new three-quarter length coat. Miss Emerson's evening dress was of wine net in quaint Victorian style with velvet trimmings.

Mrs. Charles Mott wore a smart afternoon gown of wine with a coat of the same rich shade with huge collar and elbow cuffs of wolf. A distinctive afternoon dress of cream lace was worn by this model. The lace was in the new "herringbone" pattern and had a colourful touch in its cream sash at the waist. Her coat was black, that showed to wonderful advantage a veil fox collar, which on being unfastened at the throat revealed a high neckline. Mrs. Mott modelling a charming silk crepe evening gown in hyacinth blue with detachable jacket, whose deep sleeves were bordered with white bunny fur.

Wool Georgette

Miss Calnan showed an effective wool georgette afternoon gown in brown with the popular "leg o' mutton" sleeves with a black suede belt with luxurious sable trimmings. A black velvet afternoon dress had a cut velvet top in eggshell shade with pretty puff sleeves. Her coat was a striking model in black with self trimmings. Miss Calnan also appeared in a flesh pink satin evening gown its straps being sparkling diamante.

Miss Audrey Burgess displayed a distinctive two piece afternoon dress developed in black transparent velvet. The full shoulder cape ended in a sleeve tight from the elbow. This gown, beautiful in its simplicity and as the only trimming two jewelled clips at each corner of the square neck. Her black coat had a fox collar a whole wolf skin. Miss Burgess introduced an evening gown of 4-piece bias shade its little cape trimmed with feathers.

Mrs. Marvin Brooks wore many lovely gowns. They included a black velvet model with inserts of black lace velvet on the sleeves and full skirt, shown with a black coat of sanded cloth with sable trimmings. This coat had the slightly full sleeve above the elbow, stressed this fall in most of the models. A black velvet gown had wing sleeves of eggshell in the rough crepe of this year and was worn with a black coat whose collar of black fox was white tipped. Mrs. Brooks chose for her evening dress a lace and velvet, the fashion of combining both with long sleeves, which could transform the dress at a moment's notice into an afternoon gown.

Furs Enhancing

Throughout the fashion show the fur necklaces and shoulder capes in evidence were supplied from Delaney's who also furnished the fur coats which was a feature of the evening's revue. Among the fur wraps exhibited were some very beautiful and unusual effects, that were a serious glance from the ladies present. The models included a jaunty little beige lapin jacquette, a fashion seal wrap with Russian gray squirrel trimming, a Northern mink coat, flatshaped from the backs of the skins, an electric seal wrap with blue fox collar, and a sweet racoon model so desired by college girls, a Persian lamb with Kolinsky trimmings. For the finale the girls showed another group of coats. An American broadtail in platinum shade had a handsome Russian squirrel collar. The band fur was used in a brown model with taupe squirrel collar and cuffs. Two very young made the collection ultra smart. One was in white coney, its graceful lines following those of the dress with which it was worn and the other of white ermine scarves had a collar of white Arctic fox. A black Russian caracul coat had a silver fox collar. All the linings were luxurious and many of the models had wrap over effect. Among the scarves was a double stallions fox shown for the first time, while a Russian sable, three skin neckpiece and one of stone marten were especially notable.

IS YOUR CHILD DISSATISFIED

(By Constance Cameron)

"No matter what we get for Emily she always wants something else," said Emily's mother solemnly. "It is awful I've come to the end of my rope. There's nothing she needs, yet she is dissatisfied. Why, when I was a child I had one doll and a soap-box for her bed, and I played with them all day long and was happy. I can't understand it."

Well, it seems to me that the mother got to the root of the whole matter in that reminiscence of her own childhood. She had been very much of everything, and has never been taught how to appreciate any one of the things she possesses.

A Few Good Toys

I believe in just a few good toys —sturdy, interesting things which a child can do something. Children, as a matter of fact, like adults, tire of everything offered them and never be satisfied, unless someone "sells" them a measure of appreciation of what they have. The mother who says "Annabelle is a beautiful doll, with her pedigree hair and cunning shoes," but failing the ability of Annabelle to the doll's good points. The child no longer regards Annabelle as merely a doll. She is a pretty doll, and her shoes are adorned with the initials of her small mother. We all have eyes, but we have to be taught to see.

True Appreciation

Emily is always beautifully clothed, yet she regards her clothes as she regards her dolls—something she has a right to wear, and quite commonplace. If Emily's mother would exclaim; "You look so neat and nice in that clean pink dress, perhaps Emily might consciously appreciate the color, the cleanliness the advantage of her little gown.

It is sad but true that people who have the least learn appreciation most readily; and to the child fortunate, or unfortunate, enough to be deluged with all its heart desires, appreciation must be taught. It should be taught, too, for people who never consciously use their possessions are always dissatisfied.

Beauty Question aire For Every Girl

Reflections in the mirror spur one myself to look upon the bonbons on to beauty efforts, as every woman knows, but if they're backed up by reflections inside the head, forget your inner energies will go into speed. Beauty chores must be attended to for the sake of self-respect, and to avoid those cruel smart cracks that the handsome in the family deal. In case there might be some job that's overlooked, I'm ready to answer the following queries. Be a truthful witness for both sides of the case, and tell which is yours.

Am I making the most of my beauty chances? Is life arrangement the best possible one or does it need modern improvement? Am I faithful to the weekly head scrubbing, or am I too gay application? Am I possessed by a fine rousing old message to keep the scalp healthy and hair abundant?

Do I, without fail, take a nice clean face to bed with me every night, removing makeup with cold cream before using soap and water, a bit of heavy cream afterwards as a feast for the complexion? Are those eyes and bob tail patches of tan which should be decently hidden by a dab of powder? Are there blackheads to be scalled away?

Are those "white butterflies", otherwise known as tipsy cuticle? Is she hand lotion right today? Is the hand lotion right today? Do I practice a system of protection, wearing rubber gloves when hands are likely to become soiled?

What about finger nails? Do I forget the cuticle cream? Do I fuss with hangnails, instead of removing them neatly to avoid shreddiness?

Is the sum total of poundage registered by the bathroom scales what it should be? Do I, when observing the extra weight attaching itself, forbid myself to look upon the bonbons when they are served, or eat that nice bowlful of cereal spread over with sugar and cream.

Should something be done to shiver down the thigh, upper arms or the waistline? Do I, faithfully and daily, go through setting up exercises to make my figure the way my cheeks red, my limbs slender, my waistline the envy of the neighborhood? I know exercise is necessary to health, but do I put my knowledge into action? Or do I merely lift eyebrows, yes it at all that?

Now for that old bugbear posture. Do I think posture? Do I walk splendidly, with energy and distinction? Do I sit pretty? When I stand do I hunch up one hip and one shoulder and make myself hateful to my backbone?

To my eyes am I a good friend? Do I drive them, use them cruelly? Do I follow them to the oculist and hygiene and keep sparklinglights in them? Am I possessed of those eye shadows, putting on only the most delicate application that will enhance, but not smudge?

Am I a good judge of color? I stay on the vermillion as I fly out the front door without thought of facial neutrals? Am I color-wise? Is it possible that I have found the best shoes for my special pair of feet? Are toes crowded, the under-pinning of the foot folded, the heel of the shoe of the proper height to provide comfort? Or am I still sliding along on spilled heels that give me only half a foothold?

Do I bathe daily, brush my teeth twice a day, look after my wardrobe with fastidious care, make the most of the beauty qualities I possess?

Problems of the Young Mother

(By Constance Cameron)

The young mother was struggling valiantly to bring up her baby in an improved, hygienic fashion. Almost as usual, well-meaning friends and relatives were assisting it as difficult as possible...nd with a whole world of elders arrayed against her it is no wonder that the young mother often dissolves into wrathful, rebellious tears. For there is a choice to make and that choice involves the health an. training of her baby and the ill-will of older people. The mother who listens to all users a middle course is indeed in hot water most of the time.

There is but one thing to do, and that is to decide which course is best in the sun, the health and happiness of one's child or the idle approval of those who think that love and discipline in a passing, thoughtless fashion. No one there is no choice. It is settled.

A Cheerful Baby

A young woman, who is by the way, making a fine job of mothering her first baby, had a bad night recently, a night ending in tears and discouragement.

Aunt Katy who hadn't seen the baby, arrived from a distant city at nine o'clock in the evening and fairly panted to get into the nursery. The young mother, wanting to remain on friendly terms with the older woman stood silent a minute then said: "You may go in and look at her but she isn't to be wakened."

Aunt Katy leaned over the crib, couldn't control her inane cooing and gushing and sotto voice communion on who she looked like and so on. Baby woke up. Aunt Katy went her way. Mother stayed to pacify the howling infant. Mother will stay tomorrow night too, quite probably, for a good habit has been upset. "What shall I do?" the mother asked me. "Nothing now," I told her. "Let them come. Next it had better be my aunt and she'd come when my baby was asleep that would have been a calamity."

Hardboiled? Perhaps, but my Katy would come first before all the Aunt Katy's on earth. And if the Aunt Katy's would use a grain of sense they wouldn't put a young, gallantly striving mother in the position where she must choose.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

Complexions have a hard life, they're entitled to the consideration of the cold cream jug. Strong winds fling them. Sunlight in excess makes them leathery. Atmospheric dusts grimly grasp their chance to cake. Ill-health takes a wallop at them. So keep in mind that every day the facial cooling should have regular attention. At night, preface the sudsy combination with a cleansing cream to remove makeup. After the soaping, finishing and drying anoint with a heavy cream, do five finger exercises over the cheeks to stimulate blood streams. Every morning bathe the face with cold water, lave with witch hazel. Ten minutes later you can have the pleasure of putting powder and cheery blushing upon an epidermal surface that is clean and glowing.

Large swandown powder fluffs belong in the beauty kit. They dip into scented talcum, are patted over the body after the bath. Perfumes last longer when they come in contact with warm flesh, don't do a disc-ap as they do when poured on fabrics. Ball of absorbent cotton kept in a glass jar are convenient for the application of cumulexion powder, an improvement on the old powder pad that seldom conforms of sanitary laws.

Red-headed gals will be interested in a new shade of rouge that is designed especially for them. It is a red that almost drifts into brown —frightfully bewitching when the complexion is fair and the hair a lovely auburn. Best not to use cheek rouge with it. Nor will eye shadows make friends with this lipstick that makes you think of Tahiti beauties, even if you never saw any.

The bathing season got the girls het up about too nail beautifying. The good word comes that the same polish is used for toe and finger tips.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 28— Price trend was irregularly higher in restricted turnover on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Monday today. Few price changes were noted but leaders developed a firmer tone towards noon. A total of 174,000 shares changed hands in the first two hours.

Metal issues were slightly easier in London but Nickel regained 25 to 11.15, Noranda 20 to 31.10, Base Metals 10 to 1.30 and Amalgamet 1 cent to 1.01. Pitchblende rose 14 to 2.30 and Ventures gained a couple to 87. Nipissing, 5 higher at 1.25 showed the only change among silvers.

In the golds section Lake Shore advanced 25 to 22.50, Pioneer of 5 to 2.90 and Wright Hargreaves 5 to 2.34. Granada recovered 10 to 1.40. Northern Canada and South Bay Mines were also firm each. Kirkland Lake-Gold, Macassa and Hoyem displayed small recessions. Pan Pete up a fraction at 12 was the only lower-priced oil to move.

EARLY TRADE TAME AFFAIR

Trading Narrow and Price Movements Mostly Fractional

Toronto, Sept. 28—Forenoon session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today was a tame affair. The local list could find no encouragement from Wall Street and dragged along with volume off sharply from preceding sessions, trading narrow and price movements mostly fractional. Interlisted issues filled up profits leadership and the balance of the list displayed no initiative of its own.

International Nickel and C.P.R. were very quiet and fractionally higher at mid-day. Brazilian Traction met with a small loss.

Oils were soft in sympathy with this group on Wall Street and all sold down 1 to 5.

Gains of 2 points by Royal Bank and 4 points in place were enjoyed by Standard Paving and B. C. Power. Bell Telephone, which International Nickel and Bell Telephone were off 1 point, Montreal Power was held to easy and content to hold the previous closing price, showing no change at mid-day.

MART SLOWLY GOES FORWARD

Favorite Shares Are Bid up in New York

New York, Sept. 23—Stock market bulls, interested in the prospects of slowly expanding summer business, bid up prices of their favorite shares today although trading was quiet on the upturn.

Rails commanded particular attention. Lackawanna rose almost 3 points to a new high and gains of 2 points or better developing in Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Reading, Atlantic Coast Line and Lehigh Valley. The steel stocks also lined their shoulder to the advance, most of them gaining substantially. Chief Stakes jumped 8 points to a new high. U.S. Steel, Bethlehem and Youngstown were up 2 points or more.

Trade, dampened by gasoline price cuts, were soggy, Standard of New Jersey yielding a point or so. But the mainline of industrials and utilities followed the rails and showed a profit in place here and there by Standard Paving and A. C. Power. Bell Telephone, which International Nickel and Bell Telephone were off 1 point, Montreal Power was held to easy and content to hold the previous closing price, showing no change at mid-day.

FIRE TRUCKS IN COLLISION

Two Ottawa Firemen Suffer Injuries to Head

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—A mix-up in answering an early morning fire call put two firemen in the hospital here today when a fire truck and a heavy ladder truck collided. Firemen Edmund Valleyard and Fred Provost of the hose truck were thrown to the pavement, and sustained cuts and bruises about the head and face, which necessitated their immediate removal to the hospital.

Fire Chief Samuel Blackler attributed the accident to the fact that the firemen from one station mistook the call and answered the wrong alarm. The fire trucks were proceeding in different directions when they met at a street intersection.

MANSLAUGHTER ONLY IS FOUND

Three Poles all Convicted of Ending Life of Friend

Port Arthur Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) —Tried for the murder of Peter Kuzmick, Mike Tuna, Peter Kuzmichar, and Mike Roman were last night found guilty of manslaughter by a jury of seven men. The jury added a rider recommending leniency. The trial will be sentenced at the conclusion of the assizes.

Kuzmick died peumonia following wounds and exposure July 27, when he was driven away from homs from a dance. The trio found guilty and the victim of the assault were all Polish. According to the evidence, was the victim of mistaken identity, there is a friend of the three.

The trial, heard before Mr. Justice Charles Carrow, occupied two days with most of the evidence given through interpreters.

Almost 800,000 youngsters in the United States will start off for kindergarten this autumn.

CITIZENSHIP MAY HOLD UP ROLLING TIRE

Welland, Ont., Sept. 22.—Sturdy Welland citizenship will be tested a few days ago to roll an automobile tire around the world, may not be able to continue on this trip, it is reported here.

It is said that when Orons was in Toronto getting his passports arranged, he was disappointed to find not a naturalized citizen and could not under Canadian Immigration laws be permitted to leave Canada for a return trip. In this event he would have to return to Welland.

URGES RATIFICATION OF SEAWAY PACT

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Calling upon its members to do their utmost to secure ratification of the St. Lawrence Seaway treaty, the Great Lakes Harbor Association in convention here today passed a resolution urging immediate action.

"The Great Lakes Harbors Association is keenly alarmed and anticipation to move than 40,000,000 pounds sterling in the Great Lakes basin and in neighboring states and provinces of Canada, whose commerce hangs in the balance with this seaway, to enjoy its utmost benefits to prosperity and the stabilization of said treaty," the resolution declared.

"It hereby pledges itself to use every legitimate and honorable means to promote said ratification, and particularly to present the facts with relation to the treaty to the people it serves. It pledges itself to co-operate fully with the Great Lake-St. Lawrence tidewater association to this end."

TRANSIENTS' CHANCES FADE

Mayor Says No Free Lunches And Soup in Winter

Weary transients who found Belleville a haven last winter, where in warm lodgings and food in plenty, in the shape of hot soup whose richness and plentitude had been heralded throughout this country, will look elsewhere this winter for substance, according to Mayor Geo. C. Tice, who today declared himself emphatically against providing free soup and lodgings this year for outsiders, when so much remained to be done among the needy of the city. Lodging houses will be for a certain number of transients, whose numbers will be limited by the accomodation at the local police station, while free soup bowl will be empty for those who have no claim on the charity of the city.

"Last winter" declared Mayor Tice, "we fed on an average of 800 meals a week to transients who tried to make this their headquarters. It was good soup and cost 5 cents to make and 10 cents per cost of maintenance of the home we provided for it. I am dead against this thing from the start, but when we once started it was hard to quit, as the real poor concentrated on semi-work among residents who contributed to casual transients, who are here today and gone tomorrow. Many of these men were actually ungrateful because the free soup was not as rich as they would have liked it. Our soup this year will come first this winter, and I believe every member of the council will agree with this question," declared Mayor Tice.

NOMINATED AS BISHOP

Call of the Troupers Blamed for Separation

Los Angeles, Calif., Sept. 23 — The call of the troupers was blamed today for the latest Hollywood actual broken romances, that of Vivian Duncan, screen singing star, wife of Eva in the stage and screen version of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and her husband, Nils Asther, Swedish born film actor.

Announcement Miss Duncan and Asther separated ten days ago was followed by revelation the separation split between Greta Nissen, blonde screen beauty, and Lawrence Gray, actor, actor and former Alabama and Georgia Washington universities athlete, because they don't see things "in the same light."

Miss Duncan's attorney said divorce proceedings probably will be started by the actress. She married Asther secretly in Reno, Nevada, in August, 1931. Their home was in Europe where their daughter, Evelyn, was born.

"They like different things," Q. Ion. last March.

IN MEMORIAM

COLLINS—In ever loving memory of our dear husband and father, Charles Patrick Collins, who passed away, September 22rd, 1931.

We often sit and think of you,
And think of how you died.
We think you could not say goodbye
Before you closed your eyes.
The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for you who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.

Cub's Infield Hold Edge Over Yanks in All Round Ability

Slugging Ability of Yanks However Not Questioned

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Sept. 23—The infielders of the Chicago Cubs hold the edge over their Yankee rivals in most everything except the potent art of slugging baseballs out of the park.

Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Joe Sewell, a newcomer to this feature of the business, all pack the kind of a batting punch that creaks up the old ball game.

Man for man, however, the Cub combination can point to more robust-looking batting marks for the 1932 season. The Bruin infielders, besides, can claim the distinction of being younger than their rivals, faster on the bases and quicker at the vital task of pulling double play.

Closely Matched

Apart from the color added by the World Series by the comebacks of Tony Lazzeri and Mark Anthony Koenig, the former having starred as of the Yankees now turning up as rivals, the two infields are closely matched in all-around ability.

Both Lazzeri and Koenig are expected to start the series, although they have been out of commission recently, the former at second base for the Yankees and the latter at shortstop for the Cubs. Bill Jurges is ready to step in if Koenig cannot go the series route. Otherwise the only question in either line-up is whether Frank Crosetti, the standier Yankee recruit, will hold down the shortstop post or field to Lyn Lary or Dr. Eddie Farrell., who still likely will start.

Whatever Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs lacks in clouting ability by comparison with lumbering Lou Gehrig, the Yankee "iron man" first baseman, he makes up for in general steadiness. Grimm is a "money player," besides being a fine leader and a slick strummer. He has the artist's touch at first base. He was one of the few Cubs to play exceptional ball against the Athletics in the 1929 World Series, batting close to .400.

Lazzeri's harder hitting ability and longer experience, providing he is in shape, gives him a distinct edge over Billy Herman, the 25-year-old Cub keystone star. Tony is as vital a cog as Ruth in the Yankee machinery. He has the faculty of pulling the club together at shaky moments. Herman however, has proved he can stand the set in a tough pennant scrap. Billy the Kid leads off for the Cubs at bat and has a season's mark of around .310 for the full schedule.

Koenig Next Star

Koenig's return from the minors was simultaneous with the Chicago pennant rush. Grimm was instrumental in getting him and credits the former Yankee with a big part in the team's winning drive. Because of his hitting and experience Mark had the edge of any one of the three Yankee shortstop possibilities.

Elwood English is a better hitter than his average of around .270 for the season indicates. He is three years younger and considerably faster than Joe Sewell, the veteran Yankee third sacker, but no steadier in the field nor as consistent at bat. Sewell is one of the longest men in the game to baffle at the plate, but his real baseball when he's abang, Joe strikes out.

The Cubs have a 20-year old Stanley Hack, as well as Jurges, for utility work around the infield premises.

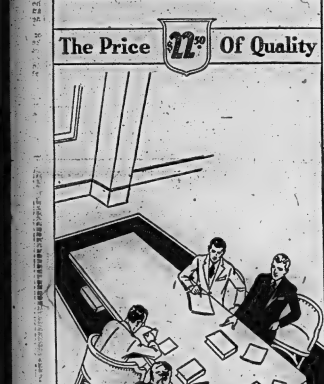
Knocks and Boosts

After some planning the executive of the Belleville Victorias decided to enter in North Bay. The team will leave Belleville at noon on Friday arriving in North Bay late Friday night. Four cars will transport the boys to North Bay and while they will start on their return trip directly, following the game on Saturday.

Coach Chumsy Gerow had the Vics out to a stiff workout on Wednesday evening. The Vics expected for practice at 4.30 p.m. and put in a very beneficial hour's work out. Following this they were entertained at the Belle Theatre having the show which has Capitol Theatre the night previous.

The entire roster of the Victorias took the trip north accompanied by Manager Fanning, Cy Welch of Picton and Charlie Washburn, a number of other interested fans have signified their intentions of following the team.

All three pitchers are reported to be in excellent shape but Coach Gerow would not say definitely before leaving, who would be his choice for Saturday's game. The Vics are facing a task that has been done through a strenuous series with Smiths Falls and Perth Aranas Cups will be the team's choice for round robin play off. On the other hand Ed Hutcise is about due for a win while Ralph Shey should be about ready to turn in a real game for the team. The Vics have laid idle during the week now and have the rest should about put them on edge.



The North Bay Pirates have two outstanding pitchers in Pyette and Bentley. Manager Bernie Pratt, of the Pirates refused to announce his pitching choice for Saturday's game before game time. According to information received neutral umpires will be appointed for the all important series.

Although it is ancient history now we would like to pass the following article along to the baseball fans. "I recently appeared in the Oshawa Times. "How does that Sporting Authority in Kingston feel now after New Toronto neatly disposed of Kingston Feeles in two straight games. Not bad for an interspecialite league? Hope our winners have the pleasure of being drawn against the C.O.L. next year—They are next so hot as they broadcast during mid-summer. Oshawa could have executed the same trick with as little effort."

We were privileged in seeing the New Toronto at Kingston game and are still of the humble opinion that the Feelet were a far superior team to the Queen City aggregation. We also suggest that the Oshawa scribe is "all wet" in suggesting that the West Toronto loop is as fast as our own Central League.

Bobby Samson is bringing two new faces to town next week. Bob Neilson, the Danish badman, will tangle with Frankie Hart in the Dutch adonis. Neilson will have to be awfully good to "take" Hart into camp as he is about the best "grappler" in his weight, we have been privileged in seeing. Neilson has an excellent record over on the other side of Lake Ontario but we will string along with the Dutch lad this time. This boy Tiny Ruff, who meets Jack Kogut, is also a newcomer to these parts. Ruff has appeared on some food cards in Toronto for Matchmaker Jack Corcoran and may give Kogut a real lesson in the art of "rassling."

The main bout between Scotty MacDougall and the Masked Marvel has been built up with a lot of hoKybus but as it is a finished fight the boys may try a little harder and not wait the alloted two

SENATORS AND athletics IN REAL BATTLE

3 Game Series Decides Holder of Second Place

PIRATES WIN

Cubs Not Worrying as They Have Pennant Cinched

(By Gayle Talbot)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Most of the excitement to be gleaned from the closing days of the big baseball pennant races is wrapped up in the final three-game series between the Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics starting today in the capital city.

Second place in the American League, the consolation "prize" and the World Series money, is at stake, with Walk Alexander's Senators trying to sweep the series to win runner-up honors. A single victory would clinch the spot for the Athletics.

Then there is Jimmie Foxx, mauling first baseman of Connie Mackmend and his assault on a couple of home run records. Foxx has had the help of the mighty George Herman (Babe) Ruth. Foxx crashed his 48th and 49th circuit clouts yesterday as the Athletics dropped a 10-inning struggle to the Champion Yankees, 8 to 7.

Ties One Mark

The total of 56 homers ties the record for most home runs in a season by Hack Wilson with the Chicago Cubs in 1930. Another circuit wallop and mauler would break Wilson's mark, and four more would give Foxx a great, string of 60, set in '27. Four of them in three games is a large order, but Foxx has the outside possibility he'll do it.

The Senators remained in the scrap for second by beating the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 3, in the first of a double-header behind Earl Whitehill and his 20th of the year. He and Lefty Grove of the A's Top the American League with 20 and 25 wins. Another private argument, that may have a bearing on the pennant race, today.

A doubleheader between Detroit and the Chicago White Sox was rained out.

National League

Over in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates continued to pour it on the Champion Chicago Cubs who are in no mood to be bothered by such trifles. Hal Smith and Paul Derringer, purchased from Kansas City, set the Champs down with six hits and blanked them 7 to 0. Paul Derringer hit his 20th two-bagger of year, tying Chuck Klein's National League record.

Brooklyn tightened its hold on third place by taking its final from the Giants 7 to 2, as Glenn Wright and Joe Stripp hit the ball hard. Georgy Puccinelli and Charlie Wilson, members of the Cincinnati Reds' pennant newest Rookie Crop, hit home runs to help beat Cincinnati, 8 to 5.

3 CANADIANS IN SEMI-FINAL

Probably Women's Open Golf Title Will Come Back

Montreal, Sept. 23—(By The Canadian Press)—Only one United States contestant stood today in the path of a Canadian victory in the Canadian Women's Open Golf championship, elimination play has left Miss Bernice Wall, Belleville, Ont., sole starter, in the contest with Miss Margaret Kirkham, Hill, Montreal, Mrs. Charles E. Riddle, Rosedale, Toronto and Miss Dorothy Taylor, playing over the links of the Kanawaki Golf Club.

Yesterday saw brilliant play and startling upsets. Miss Kirkham defeated Miss Wall, former title holder, outstanding wheeling, W. Va., contender, Mrs. Riddle had another impressive victory over Miss Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, N.Y., who was second in the qualifying round. Magnificent work with the woods enabled Miss Wall to conquer Mrs. Alex Gold of Beaconsfield, the only English attack. Miss Taylor easily defeated Miss Lucille Rolland, of Laval, Montreal.

Miss Kirkham today meets the formidable Miss Wall in the semi-finals, after having proved in her quite up to the top of her form, she has been a little more consistent than the United States golfer. Mrs. Riddle, a player of international reputation meets Miss Taylor.

London, Sept. 23 (C.P. Cable) — The Duchess of Devonshire, wife of the former Governor General of Canada, has been requested by her medical advisers to refrain from undertaking any engagements for a few months due to poor health.

The Duchess of Devonshire, formerly Lady Evelyn Emily Mary Fitzmaurice, was in Canada from 1916 to 1921 in residence at Rideau Hall, where she enjoyed a widespread popularity.

The semi-windup bout on Wednesday night's wrestling card surely is a natural. The bout calls for a "go" between Bob Neilson, the Danish badman, and Frankie Hart, the Dutch Adonis. This is the first meeting between these two boys and as they are about evenly matched in weight the bout has all the ear-marks of one swell scrap.

The main bout of the evening brings together the Masked Marvel and Scotty MacDougall, in a finished scrap. These two 200 pounders grappled to a draw at the Belleville Fair recently and the fans are to be privileged in seeing them battle to a finish. This is the first finished wrestling bout to be staged in Belleville. While the Marvel will have his manager coaching him from his corner, Scotty has engaged Rod Lavergne of France, to coach from the Scotchman's corner. This alone should add considerable color to the bout as the feeling is running rather high between Lavergne and the Marvel.

The opening bout between Jack Kogut and "Tiny" Ruff brings a new face to Belleville. This will be Ruff's first appearance in the Quints City. He is an ex-Georgia Tech football star and weighs well over the 200 mark.

Mrs. Riddle' impressive victory was followed by the defeat of Miss Privat Rutel, Winnipeg, Man., by 4 and 3 the hands of Miss Margery Kirkham, Forest Hills, Montreal, last, Miss Dorothy Taylor and Miss Maureen Orcutt, the present holder but non the defender of the title.

Handling of Trenton Relief Is Thoroughly Discussed

Several Plans Advanced To Take Care of Needy This Winter

Trenton, Sept. 22.—(Special)—A meeting was held in the town hall Thursday evening to determine the best possible way to handle the relief question for the coming winter. Members of the town Council, Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and the Local Council of Women were present. Several plans were advanced. The Mayor has suggested as a feasible plan, that a man be given work on a farm and paid a nominal wage by the town for his work on the farm helping in the harvest. The farm in return for the labor received would give the town farm produce. This would give the farmer labor without his having to pay out any actual cash and would give the man a job, where he could earn something. Another plan was suggested, that of appealing to the people through the medium of the press to assist in any way by giving food, clothing or money to a committee, which will be appointed to handle the relief work. It is also the plan to obtain some wood lots and send some of the unemployed out to cut wood for the poor for the coming winter months. During the coming week the farmers of the district will be interviewed by some of the local men and obtain their views on the matters in question and the matter will be brought up at the next council meeting, which will be held on the first of Oct.

APPLE PRICES MAY BE HIGH

Crop in Annapolis Valley Partly Destroyed by Wind Storm

Trenton, Sept. 23 (Special)—It's an ill wind that blows nobody some good. Reports have it that about 50 per cent. of the apple crop in the Annapolis Valley, in Nova Scotia, has been destroyed in a recent gale. This will curtail to a great extent the export of apples from the Dominion this fall as the Annapolis Valley is one of the largest producers of apples in Canada. Due to the shortage created in the Eastern district, we understand that the fruit growers in this district will reap the benefit of it in an increased demand for apples, which consequently demands a higher price that has been paid in a number of years.

WIFE OF MEMBER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP) — Mrs. John R. MacNicol, wife of the member for Toronto North West in the Federal parliament, died last night at her old home in Alsteldi, Grey County.

She was present at the opening of the House of Commons February, last, but indifferent health forced her to leave the hospital shortly after. She went to her old home in July hoping a return to the native air would restore her health.

Mrs. MacNicol was the only daughter of the late Duncan MacKinnon, Scottish pioneer of Grey County and his wife, Dorothea Miller of Dundas, Ont. Surviving are her husband and one brother, Henry MacKinnon of Alsfeldt.

England is so deeply indented that no part is over 75 miles from the sea.

WEST BOUND CAR STRUCK

Driver of Truck Did Not See Car Approaching

Trenton, Sept. 23 (Special) —Mr. Malcolm G. Cook of King Street, Trenton, had his Pontiac sedan badly damaged when it was struck by a Chevrolet truck driven by Mr. John Bush, of 104 Catharine St., Belleville. The accident occurred at noon Thursday just as the R.C.A.F. men were leaving the airport and coming into Trenton for their noon hour. Mr. Bush was driving east on the highway and was attempting to make a left-hand turn into the airport grounds and was watching the cars leaving the port and failed to see Mr. Cook who was westbound and consequently failed to see the Cook car, crashing into the side of it leaving the running board and fenders and injuring the body. The truck has a few scratches and other damages to the extent of $25. Mr. Bush escaped with all damages. Fortunately no one was injured.

ST. LAWRENCE AS AID TO WESTERN FARMER

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — Convening here for the past three days, delegates of the Great Lakes Harbors' Association close their 3-day sessions with a visit to the Welland Canal today.

Predicting the completion of the St. Lawrence Waterways project would improve conditions in both Western Canada and the United States, Hon. Cornelius Corcoran, Milwaukee city councillor, told the delegates yesterday the waterway would permit a greater flow of grain and other agricultural products thus enabling western farmers to compete with producers anywhere in the world.

They had strikes in ancient Rome, such as the strike of the female flute-players who refused to play when denied their privileges of dining in the shrine of Jove—and they won the strike.

N. S. LUTHERANS MARK BIRTH

160th Anniversary of Zion's Church, Lunenburg Celebrated

LUNENBURG, N.S., Sept.—(By the Canadian Press)—"And so today we meet with grateful hearts men and women who dared the voyage across dangerous seas to begin life anew in a strange land." Hundreds of Lutherans from Nova Scotia's south shore thronged Zion's Church here on the first Sunday in September to commemorate the 160th anniversary of the oldest Lutheran congregation in British North America, now, Dr. C. M. Jacobs of the Philadelphia Seminary was the preacher at two special services concluding four days of ceremony and celebration.

Zion's Church, Lunenburg dates her beginning from the time when her first pastor, Rev. Frederick Schultz arrived with 166 emigrants on his work in Lunenburg. This was in the fall of 1772.

But in many respects, her proudest history lies in the period of 19 years previous to that time. From June 1753, the German Lutherans were active in trying to obtain their own pastor. The Anglican missionary who accompanied the settlers spoke after their spiritual necessities, but they could never be happy without instruction in their own tongue, and in their own church. The services of all these ages. Fortunately no one was injured.

BRITISH STEEL MAN SEES TRADE GROWTH

Sheffield, Eng., Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Qualified optimism was voiced by A. J. Dibb, President of the Iron and Steel Federation, when he addressed a gathering of Sheffield makers here today after officially attending the Imperial Conference at Ottawa.

At the conference need had been felt, should result in very much increased trade, declared Mr. Dibb. There were signs that the trade was to what extent the trade would be increased, but it would be small and some too large but he felt if full advantage would be taken of the spirit now prevailing concerning Empire trade the volume of Sheffield business should increase to a very considerable extent.

SAYS ALL PARTIES IN OTTAWA PARLEY

Southampton, England, Sept. 23 (C.P. Cable)—"I am sorry if the Liberals don't agree with what was done at Ottawa because every political party was represented and we reached agreements which every patriotic citizen will support," said Lord Hailsham, Secretary for War, speaking for Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Secretary for the Colonies, arrived from Canada on the liner Empress of Britain last night.

Tienne, Pfr. D., under whose leadership the church grew. Then came the year 1835 and the arrival of the Rev. C. L. Comstadt, D.D., a scholar of note, having served as assistant to the Rev. Heinrich Melchior Goesthius, he brought to the work of Lutheranism in Lunenburg an almost unbounded energy. So great was his influence on the community that to this day he is always mentioned as 'Father'. Under his leadership a second church building was erected and colporte established, which today are flourishing congregations.

In honour of his memory, his granddaughter Miss Minna Liechti entertained the pastors of the Nova Scotia Synod and their wives at the old homestead on Cossman's Hill on the second day of the anniversary celebration.

Near the close of Father Cossman's pastorate, Zion's congregation began a new chapter in her history. With the coming of Rev. W. Bowers who acted as assistant for four years, Zion's began to look for her pastors on this side of the water. Colleges and seminaries had developed on this continent and since then have been the source of supply for Zion's leaders.

Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, presented the McCrea trophy to the winning first aid team of McIntyre-Porcupine.

Headed by Premier George S. Henry and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, over 60 members of the legislature looked on at the ceremony. The trophy is for competition annually by first-aid teams of four men each of the mines in Ontario. Prood mine, Sudbury won it last year.

BURFORD FARMER FOUND INSANE AT THE TIME

Brantford, Sept. 23 (CP) — Joseph Bomberry, resident of the Six Nations Indian Reserve, appeared today before Mr. Justice H. E. Rose, in Brant County Assizes, charged with the murder of his common-law wife, Mrs. Lily Johns.

In court yesterday, R. Bruce Robertson, Burford township farmer, was acquitted on the charge of murdering his wife, Amelia. After retiring for 20 minutes, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity." This verdict agreed unanimously with that of the court, when evidence was given by three alienists, two of them crown witnesses, showed Robertson suffered from manic depressive insanity and was not responsible for his act.
